It is customary for Parliament to meet on Thursdays, but the first session of a new Parliament is always called for Wednesday to elect a Speaker. The last Speaker always acts until his successor is appointed. The present Speaker is the Hon. Thomas Bain, and it is more than likely that the present Deputy Speaker, Mr. Brodeur, will be promoted to take his place.

The session is not likely to be a long one. At any rate, such is the opinion in Government circles.

IN WRECK ON BRIDAL TRIP.

Mr. and Mrs. Acton Sue the New York Central for Damages.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Dec. 10.—The wreck of the Montreal express at Garrisons-on-the-Hudson on Oct. 24, 1897, was revived to-day when the suits of Mary Acton and Joseph E. Acton, a bridal couple, who were on the train, against the New York Central Railroad Company for damages, were tried before Supreme Court Justice Keogh and a jury at White Plains. Mrs. Acton sued for $15,000 damages for personal injuries and for $360 for loss of her jewels, while the husband demanded $2,000 damages and $210 for ruined baggage.

At the time of the wreck the couple were on their honeymoon. Mrs. Acton, in court, described the sensation created when the train plunged into the river and how she was pinned down in her berth with water up to her neck. She said she was forced to walk half a mile in her bare feet and attired only in a nightgown, which was frozen stiff, in order to find shelter. She claims that the shock and exposure have permanently ruined her health. Nightly she dreams of the wreck, and has visions of the dead and dying passengers lying around her.

The company showed that the plaintiffs were riding on a pass, and contended that it was not liable for damages, although it was proved in rebuttal that the pass was a wedding gift from John Woodman of the Freight Department.

Judge Keogh ordered a sealed verdict to be brought in to-morrow.

MILITARY STUDENTS MUTINY.

Serious Uprising at the University of Alabama—Boys Demand Reforms.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Dec. 10.—An uprising, which threatened serious results is being investigated at the University of Alabama. None of those accused of complicity has been placed under arrest, although all are confined to their quarters during the sitting of the court of inquiry.

Friday morning about 1:30 o'clock disorder was begun in the barracks, and Commandant West, after making an effort to quiet the disturbance, called for President Powers. The stairways to the dormitory had been obstructed with barbed wire, and it was impossible for any one to ascend. President Powers called on the boys to be quiet, and the disorder soon ceased. There was shooting of firearms, fireworks, and cannon crackers. Coal was thrown down the steps, and, it is reported, at some of the officers of the school.

Friday morning a court of inquiry was called, but being unable to secure any testimony from the students, referred the whole matter to the Faculty. At the Faculty meeting the students presented a petition in which they disclaimed discourtesy toward the President in the demonstration Friday morning, and asked for relief from the call of taptoo at 9:30 every morning and tour walking in the afternoon, which they claim to be a torture.

They further desire corps drill to be only three hours per week, instead of three and one-half to four hours, as the catalogue calls for, and for regular evenings for drill. They further state that all went into the demonstration with due forethought. The students claim that the climax of their hardships was reached with the practice of putting men on the quadrangle for visiting and other petty offenses.

Yesterday the students refused to assemble at the military calls, and this policy has been pursued to-day. All military duty is disregarded.

Chicagoans Buying Havana Tobacco.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—The most abundant crop of Havana tobacco known since the beginning of Cuba's troubles with Spain will be gathered this season and heavy shipments are beginning to arrive in Chicago from Tampa and Key West. The business between Chicago and the two Florida towns has grown so fast within the last two months that Chicago firms are building new factories there, and Florida manufacturers are adding plants. The Havana crop this year amounts to 400,000 bales. Chicago has bargained for 12,000 bales, which will be manufactured into cigars here.

Evanston's Free Public Library.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—The Evanston Free Public Library is again attracting attention. The gift of $100,000 by Charles F. Grey for a building, provided the people give a site, has been almost given up as an impossibility. The subscriptions come in slowly and in such small amounts that it looks as if the required $30,000 would never be raised. Members of the Evanston Club, whose clubhouse grounds are at Chicago Avenue and Greve Street, facing a public park, say that they are willing to make a proposition to the library board for the sale of the property to build on at a low figure.

Chicago's Old People Dying.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—Last week showed an unusual mortality among old people, according to the weekly report of the Health Department. In all there were 104 deaths among persons over sixty years of age. There were 447 deaths in all, and this mortality among the aged is over 23 per cent., or more than one-fifth what it should be according to average statistics.

REDUCTION OF WAR TAXES

Republican House Caucus Sustains the Committee Bill.

NO AMENDMENTS APPROVED

Proposition to Make Beer Tax $1.50 a Barrel Lost—Caucus Votes Against Reducing Duty on Tea.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The Republican House caucus on the War Revenue Reduction bill decided to-night by a large majority vote to stand by the bill as now drawn and reported by the Ways and Means Committee. There were about 100 members present, and the vote to support the bill as now framed stood 68 yeas to 29 nays.

The resolution finally adopted was offered by Representative Hepburn of Iowa and was as follows:

"Resolved, That the recommendations made by the Committee on Ways and Means in House bill No. 12,394 are judicious and merit the approval of this conference, and we recommend that all Republican members of the House be urged to vote against all amendments and for the passage of the bill."

Two other resolutions were put before the conference.

One was framed by Representative Pearce, of Missouri, and provided for a reduction of the tax on beer to $1.50 a barrel. It was lost—45 yeas to 68 nays.

Representative Roberts of Massachusetts moved that the present tax on beer be reduced only ten per cent., and that a reduction of the duty on tea be made from 10 cents to 5 cents a pound. This motion was lost almost unanimously.

THE DEMOCRATIC VIEW.

Minority Report Urges that $70,000,000 Be Taken Off and Advocates an Income Tax.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The views of the minority members of the Ways and Means Committee on the bill reducing war taxes about $40,000,000 were completed and made public late to-day. It is signed by the entire Democratic membership of the committee, Richardson of Tennessee, Swanson of Virginia, McClellan of New York, Newlands of Nevada, Cooper of Texas, and Underwood of Alabama. The report says that the minority are of opinion that the proposed reduction of revenues is too small and that the bill does not go far enough in relieving the people of the burdens imposed upon them for war purposes. The remaining taxes, says the report, are unnecessary and should be removed.

The minority take issue with Secretary Gage's estimate of $25,000,000 surplus in 1902, and say that if Congress observes proper economy in expenditures the surplus ought to be $109,000,000

THE TENEMENT COMMISSION

It Examines President Brady and Two Associates.

Specific Cases Pointed Out in Which the Law Has Been Violated—Officials Promise Reform.

The Tenement House Commission appointed by the Legislature to investigate the conditions and surroundings of the New York and Buffalo tenement houses had a session yesterday in the Assembly Hall of the United Charities Building. Commissioner of Public Buildings Thomas J. Brady and two of the other Commissioners put in an interesting afternoon under the cross-examination of Chairman Paul D. Cravath. Commissioner Brady's companions were Commissioners John Guilfoyle of Brooklyn and Daniel Campbell of Queens and Richmond Boroughs.

As a surprise to the Commissioners, when they got on the stand and had given testimony that no violations of law existed in their department, Chairman Cravath produced a report of the examinations which the commission's own inspectors had made after investigating for themselves among the tenement houses of the city. Out of 333 tenement houses examined in Manhattan, only fifteen were found where there were no violations of the tenement house laws.

The following Commissioners were present: Chairman Robert W. De Forest, Vice Chairman Paul D. Cravath, Charles S. Brown, Hugh Bonner, F. Norton Goddard, G. B. Fowler, Myles Tierney, I. N. Phelps Stokes, Alfred T. White, and Secretary L. Veiller.

Chairman De Forest announced that Mr. Cravath had been chosen to preside at the sessions of investigation. He added that he wished to thank the city officials for their courtesy and assistance with which they met the requests for information made by the commission. Thomas J. Brady was the first witness, and occupied almost the entire session, from 2:30 to 6 o'clock.

He was asked at once whether he was aware that many of the building laws were being generally violated by the owners of tenements throughout the city. He said he was certain that there were no violations of any kind, except in isolated cases. Mr. Cravath then explained that the commission had sent its own Inspectors to investigate among the tenements, with a view to ascertaining violations and reporting to the commission if such existed. He said:

"In all cases these men have been the most reliable we were able to procure, and they were sent out in pairs to make doubly sure. I have here their report. In it I read that 650 buildings were inspected in Manhattan, 317 of these being better-class apartment houses, and 333 strictly tenement houses. Of the 333, only 15, or 4 per cent., were found where there were no violations of the tenement house law. In one single house 13 different violations were found, in another 9 different violations. Now, have you any suggestions to make as to these violations and how they might exist wholly without your knowledge?"

"I do not know now that they exist," Mr Brady answered. "I rely wholly upon my inspectors. I know nothing of the men who made that report. But it is a fact that violations known to exist are now in the hands of the Building Department awaiting disposal."

This statement led to a discussion as to the disposal of violations, and it was learned that, despite the orders for the owners of buildings who are erecting structures contrary to law, these owners continue the work. Mr. Cravath said:

"The most important provision of the tenement house law is that in regard to light and ventilation, providing that only 65 per cent. of the lot may be occupied by new tenements. The Commissioner of Buildings, however, is given discretionary power to permit as much as 75 per cent. of the lot to be occupied in special cases. Out of 283 tenements inspected, 282 covered more than 65 per cent. of the lot, 274 covered more than 70 per cent. of the lot, 93 covered exactly 75 per cent. of the lot, and 88 covered more than 75 per cent. of the lot."

Other violations regarding fire escapes and elevator shafts and wooden stairways and halls and other lack of fire-proof construction were enumerated, but the Commissioner denied having personal knowledge of the cases. As to the department's inability to prevent the erection of a building about to violate the law, he said that there were 11,000 such violations in the city at the present time, but that owing to the poor facilities of the department to handle the cases in the courts it was possible for owners to build and to hire and sell their properties before any action could be taken.

At the conclusion of his testimony Mr. Brady was asked what remedy he proposed to prevent in future the erection of buildings that were in violation of law. He advised a penalty of $250.

Building Superintendent John Dooner was next called, and asked regarding violations in fire escapes. He said there were about 7,000 or 8,000 buildings in the city that were without fire escapes, and that it was impossible to compel compliance with the law, because the cases could not be promptly handled in the courts.

Commissioners Guilfoyle and Campbell followed, each being questioned as was Mr. Brady, and each declaring that if violations of law existed, as the commission held, he was not aware of the fact.

At the close of the session Mr. Cravath promised to send each Commissioner a list of the houses that were guilty of violations, and all the Commissioners thanked him for the courtesy, promising to remedy the evils at once. The session was then adjourned until 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, when the Board of Health officials will testify.

PURROY'S REFORM MOVEMENT.

Committee of Fifteen to Co-operate with Anti-Tammany Forces.

The Borough of the Bronx was well represented last night at 2,145 Webster Avenue, Fordham, in answer to a call issued by ex-City Clerk Henry D. Purroy, to assemble and consider what is the best course to pursue in order to secure an honest municipal government at the next election.

Mr. Purroy was elected Chairman of the meeting, and Joseph I. Berry and Otto Menger, Secretaries.

Enoch Vreeland offered resolutions which were adopted with enthusiasm. They said in part:

"Resolved, That this meeting form itself into an organization whose aim it shall be to unite and co-operate effectively with all other bodies which may be opposed to Tammany Hall at the election to be held in November, 1901, in order that the government of our city may be wrested from the incompetent and servile and greedy mercenaries who have so grossly perverted the powers and authority with which they were vested by the voters, and that a Committee of Fifteen be appointed by the Chair to report at a meeting in January such recommendations and resolutions as may be necessary to carry out the above objects."

O'Brien Turns to Hill.

David B. Hill is to be asked to act as the adviser of the followers of ex-Sheriff O'Brien in the anti-Tammany fight. A special meeting of the O'Brienites was held last evening in the Hoffman House. It was decided to form a permanent organization and a committee was appointed to begin the work. A committee to see David B. Hill and ask his advice as to the anti-Tammany fight was also named.

The O'Brien Democrats will open headquarters at 1,181 Broadway.

Horace J. Hayden's Funeral

Funeral services for Horace J. Hayden, Second Vice-President of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company, who was killed Friday night by falling from a window at his residence, 337 West Seventy-sixth Street, Friday night, were conducted at the residence last evening by the Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer, after which the body, accompanied by the family, was taken on a special train for Cambridge, Mass. The interment will be in Mount Auburn Cemetery, near that place, to-day.

Child Dies of Appendicitis.

YONKERS, Dec. 10.—The six-weeks-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Fisher of this place died this morning. The father, believing she had been given improper medicine, had an autopsy made. This developed the fact that the infant had suffered from appendicitis, which caused its death. The case, physicians say, is an unusual one.

TIRED OF HUNTING FOR FATHER.

William D. Ashley's Daughter Wants a Committee Appointed to Take Care of Him.

There was a hearing before a Sheriff's jury in the Kings County Court, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon, on an application for the appointment of a committee of the person of William D. Ashley of Fishkill, N. Y. Ashley formerly lived in Springfield, Mass. He took the Keeley cure several times and finally went away to Nebraska, his family following him. About three years ago Ashley inherited some property from a relative and divided $75,000 among his wife, son, and daughter, on condition, it is said, that they were to give him $100 a month for his support.

The application for the appointment of a committee of the person of Ashley was made by his daughter, Miss Elsie M. Ashley. On the witness stand yesterday she said that the family was willing to turn over the $75,000 to the care of a committee. Miss Ashley deposed that her father had been drinking to excess for years and that his family had been obliged to follow him over many parts of the country.

He disappeared in 1897, and was found some months later in Jersey City in a helpless condition. He declared that he had fallen among thieves and been robbed. In 1898, Ashley, the daughter said, spent six weeks in an inebriates' home in Brooklyn, and while he was an inmate of an institution in Foxborough, Mass., he got away, and with $4,000 in his possession started for Fishkill. He displayed the roll of bills on the train and the conductor took it from him for safe keeping. The money was returned to him later. On another occasion, in Manhattan, Ashley was before a Magistrate for commitment to an institution for treatment, when he "talked back" to such an extent to the Court that he was sent to Blackwell's Island instead.

The hearing was adjourned until to-morrow morning.

TRUNK LINE TERRITORY RATES.

Persistent Cutting May Result in Abolishing Fast Freights.

Rates in trunk line territory continue about the same as last week, according to the general opinion of traffic officials. Cuts in rates by the differential roads and some of the fast-freight lines are still being reported. It is feared that this condition will be carried over into next year unless the traffic managers get together this week. Fast-freight lines, including all the various dispatches, are generally blamed by freight agents, who care to discuss the matter, for much of the rate disturbance.

A report which came from Buffalo yesterday to the effect that fast freight lines of the New York Central would be abolished was submitted to President Callaway, who said that it was the policy of his road to consolidate all these lines as much as possible, but he did not think they could be entirely abolished. A traffic manager of another line, which is popularly supposed to belong to the "combination of interest" systems, said that all such freight dispatches should be wiped out of existence, and if the New York Central management felt really inclined to abolish them, it could make a good beginning by closing up the Merchants' Despatch, which, he said, was commonly considered one of the chief disturbers of the rate situation.

"All that these lines are good for," said the official, "is to give the traffic managers of the roads over which they run, a chance to stand up and declare with a semblance of truth that their line is not cutting rates when large cut-rate contracts over their lines become known and are brought up before the Freight Committee.

New Engines for the Northern Pacific.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 10.—In addition to the forty-four passenger cars, two dining cars, and two combination cars ordered last week, the Northern Pacific has contracted for about $600,000 worth of new motive power, which will be built at the Schenectady Works. The order includes fifty engines, and the company has reserved the right to order seventy-five more locomotives at the same contract price if the condition of trade shall warrant the additional order. The entire cost of the new engines and cars will not be less than $850,000 to $900,000.

A New Southern Railway.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 10.—The Secretary of State to-day licensed the incorporation of the Southern Railway Company, with a capital of $3,000,000 and principal offices in East St. Louis, to operate the lines of the Louisville, Evansville, and St. Louis Road, recently sold under a decree of the court. The Directors are: Alexander P. Humphrey, Louisville; Edward C. Kramer, East St. Louis; Thomas W. Scott, Fairfield; Bluford Wilson, and Philip Barton Warren, Springfield.

CURRENCY LAW CHANGES.

Representative Overstreet Says None Are Being Considered in Committee.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Representative Overstreet of Indiana, who took the most prominent part in the House in the last session in getting a gold-standard bill passed, and who hopes to see a measure of amendment to that law passed before long, said to-day that no steps have been taken in the Banking and Currency Committee to strengthen the currency law. He is still of the same opinion as when he contended with the Senate Finance Committee to push the bill through as the House made it, with its provision for an interchangeable currency, but accepting the political understanding that compromise is better than the loss of all one contends for, he has been satisfied with the best he could get.

"Nothing has been done in the committee," said Mr. Overstreet, "looking to amendment of the currency law. No bill for that purpose has been introduced. The subject is one that calls for discussion, and a great deal of it. The House has a great deal of business cut out to perform, and to offer and urge a currency bill, however desirable it might be to perfect the law, in the light of experience, might be to embarrass business that ought to be done carefully. Then, the danger that was feared before election is over. The execution of the law is in friendly hands, and will be for four years.

"I do not hear of any proposition embodying the ideas suggested by the Secretary of the Treasury touching silver coin in the Philippines. The published reports do not strike me pleasantly. Until I am better informed, I shall be opposed to any use of silver as coin in the Philippines that might look like discrediting our own coinage. However, it does not look as if we could be called upon to determine that question during the present session."

$1,800 A YEAR WHILE IN PRISON.

Boston Boy Conceals Stolen Money and Is Ready for Punishment.

BOSTON, Dec. 10.—The case of Morris Aaronburg, the youth who has confessed that he stole $8,837 from Mrs. Margaret Beck, which has puzzled the police from the first, still staggers the officials, although the boy has declared his guilt. It is the first case in police records here where a man or boy has confessed to having stolen money and has stood ready to take all the punishment which could be given for the offense, without making restitution and trying to escape the full penalty.

The police have figured it out that, if Aaronburg goes to prison for the maximum term of five years, without returning the stolen money, he will come out financially as if he had been at work all the time on a salary of about $1,800 a year. All evidence is taken as indicating that Aaronburg has the money safely concealed, and intends to go to prison without revealing its hiding place. He will be sentenced probably to-morrow.

Rev. Charles M. Sheldon's Readings.

The Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, author of "In His Steps," gave the first of a series of four readings in Brooklyn from his latest book, "Born to Serve," at Plymouth Church last evening. His book contains a discussion of the servant girl problem. The other readings will take place this evening, to-morrow, and Thursday evenings at the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian, Central Presbyterian, and Ross Street Presbyterian Churches, respectively.

CYCLERS LEAD RECORDS

Nine Teams Still Struggling on in Six Days' Race.

POISON STOPPED BLEECKER

Overcome by Ammonia, He Had to Drop Out, While the Hot Pace Was Too Much for Four More.

THE SCORE AT 2 O'CLOCK.

Riders.	Miles.	Laps.
Elkes and McFarland	547	7
Simar and Gougultz	547	7
Pierce and McEachern	547	7
Turville and Gimm	547	4
Waller and Stinson	547	4
Babcock and Aronson	547	3
Fisher and Frederick	547	2
Kaser and Ryser	546	9
Muller and Aucoutrier	537	6

Old team record, 540 miles and 1 lap, held by Eaton and Walthour.

Ever riding, apparently tireless, and still maintaining the terrific pace set in the very first hour of the six-day bicycle race, now in progress at the Madison Square Garden, the ambitious competitors for glory and prizes kept pedaling as though for dear life all day yesterday and evening. The team system, whereby one man of the two rides but twelve hours a day, makes possible an unprecedented speed, and old-time cyclists looked on with amazement as they saw the racers roll off their twenty miles and more an hour with apparent ease.

Training, as well as courage and persistence, is going to tell in this race, and those who are unequal to the task of keeping at least within sight of the leaders will do well to drop out early in the game, instead of suffering the exertion of a useless effort. Five teams considered this the wisest policy yesterday, and by midnight only nine teams were on the track instead of fourteen, which appeared at the start. One, the retirement of Bleecker, was occasioned by ammonia poisoning.

The most remarkable feature of the day was the unchanging position of the leaders. The same three that led at the first hour continued to lead at the twenty-fourth hour. They were Elkes and McFarland, the Americans; Simar and Gougoltz, the Frenchmen, and Pierce and Archie McEachern, the Canadian. Their pace at the twenty-fourth hour was a trifle over thirty miles an hour, quite a difference from the first hour of forty-nine miles. The average of these leaders gives the unusual rate of a trifle over twenty-four miles an hour for as many consecutive hours.

Just before midnight Pierce completed his five hundredth mile in 23 hours 18 minutes. Simar led at 400 miles in 18 hours 27 minutes 30 seconds. The other leaders at the century turns were: 100 miles, Elkes, 4:10:30; 200 miles, McEachern, 8:48:00; 300 miles, Elkes, 13:33:00.

Over 10,000 packed into the Garden last night, and all through the day there were good delegations, the smallest number being in the early morning hours, when, scattered through the gallery seats, were about 200 or 300 sleepy, frowzy, but withal thoroughly dyed in the wool bicycle enthusiasts. Several hundred women watched the gayly clad riders in the evening.

PACE TOO HOT FOR FOUR TEAMS.

The first pair to leave were Miller and Walthour. The friends of Champion Charley Miller, who has pulled out of so many a long-distance race with the palm of victory fluttering from his wheel, were grievously disappointed at this sudden collapse of their bicycle hero.

The truth of it is that Miller was not in the pink of riding condition, and it is very doubtful if he ever intended to finish the race. There is no money for individual riding, so Walthour, a really fast rider, had to retire at the same time. Miller and Walthour had been behind from the start, and shortly after the seventh hour they quit with a record of 157 miles, the poorest of the bunch.

The thirteen teams then ran along until nearly 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when two more dropped from the ranks, Colgan and Dickerson and Albert and Bleecker. Dickerson was seized with cramps and became almost powerless on his wheel, while Bleecker obtained considerable notoriety through the announcement that he had been poisoned by ammonia. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

The poison tale arose from the fact that Bleecker's trainer had sponged his face with an ammonia preparation. Bleecker carried a sponge with him soaked in the preparation, and accidentally got some of it in his mouth, and the effect of it temporarily disabled him. He was at the tail end of the race at the time, with 308 miles and 9 laps to his credit for fifteen hours, while the leaders had 331. Albert and Colgan, the respective partners of the disabled men, were both in good condition and anxious to continue the race.

Dubois and Krebs abandoned the struggle at 7:30 o'clock last evening. Their place, like the others, was at the end of the line, their score at 7 o'clock being 407 miles. Krebs was badly worn out, as he had done his best to keep up with the hot pace that had been steadily maintained since the start.

Bleecker was considerably shaken up by what looked at one time a very serious fall. It was the first accident of the race and occurred in the afternoon. Bleecker struck his pedal on one of the machines as a bunch of the riders was going around the steep north curve, and his fall carried along with him Fisher, McFarland, and Ryser. For a few moments there was the liveliest excitement, but, contrary to expectations, none of the men was seriously injured. Bleecker and Ryser were on their wheels in an instant. Fisher was knocked breathless, but was all right in a few seconds. McFarland got a bad scratch on his leg and knee. Elkes at once took his place, but in less than an hour McFarland was out again, none the worse for his spill. Each man lost a lap, but it was not counted off by the referee.

The fifth team to leave were the McLean brothers, who left the track just before midnight. At 11 o'clock they had 490 miles to their credit, only eight laps behind the leaders.

MICHAEL ON THE TRACK.

To stir up the enthusiasm of the evening and give the patient watchers in the galleries, many of whom had not left the Garden since morning, something to cheer at, two or three short speed contests were added as additional features. Major Taylor, the colored champion, rode a half mile in the good time of 0:57 4-5. He seemed to take particular delight in running up on the highest part of the steep track at the two turns, and nothing but his speed kept him from rolling down to the bottom.

Reminiscences of the recent Automobile Show were recalled when a noisily puffing motor cycle joined the racers on the slanting track, and the trim little man who soon appeared in its wake was quickly recognized as Jimmy Michael. The motor cyclists were Vetter and Sherer, Michael's pacing team, and they ran the tandem motor around the ten-lap track at a dizzy pace. Michael never left the rear wheel, and he rode the mile in 1 minute 53 2-5 seconds. Cooper also rode an exhibition mile, but he was not timed. These men and other fast professionals will appear in similar races this afternoon and evening.

The incessant race on the track was enlivened during the evening by some dashing spurts, but it was noticeable that this extra speed effort did not last long. The rivals kept a close watch on every attempt to forge ahead, and the man who was bold enough to attempt it at once had half a dozen men riding hotly at his rear wheel.

McFarland and Gougoltz gave one of the prettiest exhibitions of this nature shortly before 10 o'clock last night. It occurred just before McFarland was relieved by Elkes. The former wanted to give Elkes a good lead, and he succeeded by a few yards, but Gougoltz did not want when the fresher man came on.

The two spun around with wheels lapping for nearly a mile. Amid a thundering roar of yells from the galleries, the Frenchman suddenly shot ahead like a cannon ball. A. McLean then took a hand in the race, and Kaser soon joined the bunch, and the fast-going men, with their yellow, blue, red, black, orange, and white costumes, made a dizzy and attractive sight. Later in the evening Aronson, the Swede, tried to pick up a lap or two, but he was soon content to fall back in the bunch.

The easiest rider of the lot was the Italian, Aucoutrier. He and his partner, Muller, were five and one-half miles behind the leaders at 11 o'clock, but Aucoutrier made no effort to hit up a faster pace, and was the picture of dignity and racing nonchalance as he pedaled easily around the track, while his companions passed him continually.

The ubiquitous waiters, vending sandwiches and light drinks in the galleries, reminded one of Coney Island excursion boats, while the main floor, inside of the track, was mildly characteristic of a county fair. The sides of the inclosure were lined with a magnificent array of slot machines, from which music, pictures, and sweetmeats could be drawn at will, and for a price.

From a dozen or more stands were dispensed peanuts, candies of various hues, bright red apples, frankfurters, pies and ice cream. These stands were liberally patronized in the evening, for the luncheons of the all-day rooters gave out early, and, with a dime left for food, many of the young bicycle enthusiasts will settle themselves down for another long stretch to watch the whirl of riders through a haze of tobacco smoke.

The smoke began to trouble some of the racers in the evening, and Babcock and Kaser resorted to close fitting goggles to protect their eyes.

It looked this morning as if Accoutrier would not last twenty-four hours more. He was very tired.

COLDEST DAY OF THE SEASON.

Low Temperature Will Continue To-day, but There Will Be a Change To-morrow.

The cold wave that reached this city early Sunday morning continued yesterday. The day was colder, crisper, and more piercing than its predecessor, but the abatement of the wind removed practically all of the annoying features of the day previous. There was no dearth of signs indicative of the Winter season.

Winter overcoats appeared everywhere, accompanied in a great many cases by mufflers and ear protectors. There were no slow walkers in the streets, everybody moving at a lively gait.

Other signs, such as the absence of the on-lookers at the shop windows, the shivering police on the corner who braved the elements, and the red-tinged faces of people generally made the Winter impression all the more emphatic. The day was by many degrees the coldest so far this Winter. Nineteen degrees, at 8 A. M., was the lowest temperature registered by the Weather Bureau's thermometer, while 27 degrees at 4 o'clock P. M. was the maximum record. Weather Forecaster Emery says that the cold weather will not abate before to-morrow, when a slight change will set in from the Northwest. But it will not be such a rise as to deprive the season of any of its peculiar characteristics.

All of the charitable organizations whose object it is to provide for the poor during the Winter months were alert and ready to assist any who might be in need and deserving of assistance.

But, cold as was the day, it was an ideal one. The air, though sharp, was clear and crisp, and it gave a buoyancy of feeling to those who exposed themselves to its frigidity.

The weather conditions are practically the same throughout the country. Portions of Georgia, Mississippi, and Texas, like their more northerly sisters, are experiencing a temperature below freezing. The coldest weather reported was at Northfield, Vt., where the record was 10 degrees below zero. At Portland, Me., it was 2 degrees below. Snow fell in the lake regions, this State, Pennsylvania, and New England.

Only in extreme Southern Florida was there a trace of Autumn left. Key West telegraphed a temperature of 66 degrees.

18 Below Zero in the Adirondacks.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Dec. 10.—The first zero weather here this season was experienced this morning, the thermometer standing at 7 below zero. At Ogdensburg, Saranac Lake, Rouse's Point, Dannemora, Lake Clear, and other points in the Adirondacks the thermometer registered all the way from 10 to 18 degrees below zero.

NEW TRIAL IN MINING SUIT.

Verdict in Favor of Montana Ore Purchasing Company Set Aside.

Special to The New York Times.

HELENA, Mont., Dec. 10.—Judge Knowles to-day granted a new trial in the celebrated mining suit of E. Rollins Morse against the Montana Ore Purchasing Company, which was tried in the United States court in this city last Winter.

The action involved mining ground in Butte, valued at $3,000,000, and in many ways was one of the famous mining suits in America. The jury unanimously decided the case in favor of the Montana Ore Purchasing Company, of which F. Augustus Heinze is President. A petition was subsequently filed by the plaintiff for a new trial, and it was this petition which was decided to-day.

The suit involved the Michael Davitt claim in Butte, owned by the Boston and Montana Mining Company. The Montana Ore Purchasing Company claimed the right to the mine underneath the surface of the claim on the ground that the veins apexed in the Pennsylvania and Johnston claims, both of which were owned by the defendant company. The trial was commenced Dec. 11, in Helena, and was concluded Jan. 31. Most of the testimony was by expert witnesses who comprised some of the most eminent mining experts in the world.

Judge Knowles to-day set aside the verdict on the ground that the jury was unduly influenced by certain newspaper articles appearing in The Helena Independent, and not on the ground that the evidence did not warrant the verdict. There is no appeal from the decision of the Court.

BURGLARS TORTURE VICTIM.

Burn Rochester Man's Feet with Red Hot Poker.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, Dec. 10.—Masked burglars broke into the residence of John Flynn, at Lima, a suburb of this city, last night, and bound, gagged, tortured, and robbed the sole occupant.

Mr. Flynn was awakened shortly after midnight by the breaking of glass in a rear window. He sprang out of bed only to see three masked men each with a pistol leveled at his head. The intruders asked for his valuables, and he gave them the watch he carried and said that was all. This they did not believe, and, heating the poker red hot in the kitchen range, applied it to the soles of his feet.

After standing the torture until the odor of burning flesh filled the entire room, Flynn weakened and told where his money was hidden. This was secured, and the men hastily left the house, jumped into their wagon, and drove rapidly toward Rochester.

A description of the horses and wagon was furnished the Rochester police, and three men were arrested this morning who are thought to be guilty.

Flynn is in a critical condition from his mutilated feet and exposure over night, tied to the kitchen table, with the door open.

CONVICT LEAPS FROM TRAIN.

Special to The New York Times.

CHEYENNE, Wyom., Dec. 10.—Charles Kitchin, sentenced to four years in the State Penitentiary, made a daring attempt to escape while being taken to Laramie yesterday by Sheriff Shaver.

Kitchin was handcuffed, but not fastened to the car seat, as is usually the case when convicts are being transferred. While the Sheriff was eating lunch Kitchin suddenly leaped to his feet and ran to the end of the car. The train was running twenty-five miles an hour, but without any hesitation the prisoner jumped off. Sheriff Shaver was close after his man, and he, too, jumped to the ground.

Kitchin was not hurt, and, regaining his feet, fled to the hills. Shaver, however, was badly hurt and unable to pursue the highwayman.

Another officer started in pursuit as soon as the train could be stopped, and after a chase of several miles found Kitchin hiding behind a rock. He was taken to Sherman and later sent to Laramie.

He is a son of Charles Squires, who was cashier of the Windsor Hotel, New York, when it was destroyed by fire.

It is believed Mr. Manley will decline the offer definitely to-morrow.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—The Figaro says this morning: "Jingoism animates the discussion of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. American Senators wish to make the Isthmian canal a work of jealous surveillance and domination. The United States intends to set a Gibraltar on Nicaragua at whatever cost."

SUICIDE ON ELEVATED LINE

Man Cut to Pieces at a Sixth Avenue Station.

Fragments of Body Fall to the Street, Causing Women to Faint—Woman a Witness of Tragedy.

As the locomotive of a south-bound train on the Sixth Avenue elevated road passed the women's waiting room at the Thirty-third Street station shortly after 9 o'clock last night the employes and passengers were startled by the wild scream of a woman who had been looking out of the window.

"There's a man under there!" she cried. "There's a man been struck!"

She fled down stairs and fainted as she gained the sidewalk. As the train stopped those on the platform saw a dark figure lying beneath the third car. It was between the rails and safe from the wheels, so after a few minutes' delay the train started on. The figure was found to be the horribly mutilated body of a man. One leg and one arm had been severed and the body was otherwise cut and crushed in a manner that must have caused instant death. Fragments fell to the street below, and several women fainted at the sight.

The remains were taken to the West Thirtieth Street Police Station, and were there identified as the body of Edward Schusler, a waiter, of 110 West Thirty-third Street, by Joseph Strauss of 424 Sixth Avenue. A number of pawntickets were found in the pockets.

All the employes about the station insist that they did not see the man on the track, as their backs were turned to the train, and they even said they were unaware of his presence on the platform. There were four or five men passengers waiting at the time, but the cold had driven them into the waiting room, and there was one other woman in the room with the woman who gave the alarm, but she saw nothing of the accident. The woman who did see it disappeared soon after reaching the street. An ambulance was called for her by a passer-by, and some of the bystanders declared that she was taken away in it, but at the New York Hospital, from which the ambulance came, all knowledge of such a case was denied. Others said the woman was taken away in a cab by a man who was with her.

Policeman Brundage of the West Thirtieth Street Police Station went down to South Ferry later and arrested the engineer and the fireman. The former was Robert Hamilton of 724 Columbus Avenue; he said that he had not seen the accident, as it had happened on the opposite side of the engine from his seat. The fireman was Joseph Scott of 240 East Seventeenth Street; he declared that he saw the man deliberately jump in front of the train from the station platform.

Both the prisoners were released at the request of Coroner Zucca, whom they promised to meet at his office this morning at 10:30 o'clock, there to make an official statement. The police of the West Thirtieth Street Station say that there is no doubt but that it was a case of suicide.

MAY TO BE LIBERATED.

Demand on Guatemalan Government Has Desired Reault.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Except as it may serve as a basis for a claim in the future, the incident growing out of the detention by Guatemalan officials of the American engineer, May, has been closed. Minister Hunter, at Guatemala City, has telegraphed Solicitor Penfield of the State Department as follows:

"In compliance with the terms of the department's cable of the seventh, I addressed a note yesterday to the Minister of Foreign Affairs, demanding the immediate release of May. The reply not being satisfactory, the Minister claiming that William P. Fuqua is now in the United States and not in Guatemala, I presented the matter to the President this morning. He at once directed that the order of detention be revoked and the same transmitted by telegraph to the proper authority. I have notified May by telegraph of his liberation."

Woman Badly Burned.

Mrs. Rose Braun was sitting in front of her stove at 1,552 First Avenue at 12:25 o'clock yesterday afternoon filling a lamp when her clothes caught fire. She ran screaming into the hallway and fell into the arms of Edward Marshall, the janitor. The terrified woman clung to Marshall, and his hair, mustache, and eyebrows were singed. Mrs. Marshall threw a blanket about man and woman and finally succeeded in putting out the fire. Mrs. Braun was removed to the Presbyterian Hospital, and it is said she may die.

BANDMASTER BENT TO MARRY AGAIN

Will Wed Mrs. Sarah J. Wyckoff at the Waldorf To-night.

Bride-to-Be Is Reputed Worth $2,000,000, and Bent Will No Longer Play for the Old Guard.

Thomas C. Bent, bandmaster of the Old Guard, will make his second matrimonial venture to-morrow evening, when he will be married to Mrs. Sarah J. Wyckoff, who is twenty years his senior. The ceremony will take place at the Waldorf-Astoria in the presence of twenty-five friends of the couple. Mrs. Wyckoff is fifty-five years old, and is reputed to be worth at least $2,000,000, while Bent, who is thirty-five years old, has only his reputation as a cornetist.

Albert Wyckoff, the husband of Mrs. Wyckoff, died about fourteen months ago at his residence, 1,773 Washington Avenue, which is one of the finest in Tremont. Twenty years ago he inherited a portion of the Wyckoff millions, which, on his death, he willed to his wife. Since his death she has cleverly handled the estate, which is said to have almost doubled under her manipulation.

Bent is well known in Tremont, and his proposed marriage has caused much talk and comment. Five years ago he figured in a very romantic courtship and marriage with Miss Isabelle Nixon, the eldest daughter of the Rev. George Nixon, pastor of the Tremont Presbyterian Church, at One Hundred and Seventy-fourth Street and Washington Avenue. She was known to the old residents of Tremont and the congregation of her father's church as "Wavey" Nixon, so named on account of her luxuriant growth of golden brown hair. The Rev. Mr. Nixon objected to Bent's attentions to his daughter, and he was not allowed to enter the house. A sister of Miss Nixon, however, was in the secret, and she planned many meetings for the couple. In the Summer of 1895 they were married secretly, and the Nixon family did not become aware of the state of affairs until about two months after the ceremony had been performed. At first the Rev. Mr. Nixon refused to recognize his son-in-law, but the troubles were finally patched up, and the entire matter was soon forgotten. Two children were born to the couple, and they lived apparently very happily until about seven months ago, when Mrs. Bent died, after a brief illness.

Within a month after her death Bent began to escort Mrs. Wyckoff about, and there was considerable talk among the good people of Tremont. Rumor has had the couple married a dozen times, but arrangements for the wedding were not completed until yesterday. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. R. F. Humphries, ex-pastor of St. Paul's Episcopal Church of Morisania, now of South Norwalk, Conn. Mrs. Wyckoff was formerly a member of this church. The couple will sail for Europe Saturday on the Lucania. They will spend a couple of months touring on the Continent, and on their return will go South until Easter. Bent says that he intends to resign his position as bandmaster, and will give his whole attention to managing his wife's estate.

CARTER'S SENTENCE UPHELD.

Federal Court of Kansas Sustains the Ruling of the Trial Courts.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 10.—In a decision handed down by Judge Hook of the Federal District Court of Kansas, and concurred in by United States Circuit Judge Amos M. Thayer, this afternoon, Oberlin M. Carter, ex-Captain United States Army, under sentence of five years' imprisonment for misappropriation of Government funds while in charge of the harbor work of Savannah, is remanded to the custody of Robert W. McLaughry, Warden of the Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth, where Carter has been confined.

The Court overruled the petitioner's demurrer on the habeas corpus writ issued some time ago, and sustained the ruling of the trial courts, together with the subsequent action of President McKinley, who set aside twelve of the charges under which he was convicted, but made no change of the sentence imposed by the court-martial.

One of the chief contentions urged in Carter's behalf was that the President in reducing the number of specifications preferred thereby made void the punishment inflicted. On this point Judge Thayer says:

"The punishment prescribed by the articles of war is attached to the charge and not the specifications made thereunder, the latter being merely by way of exemplification and detailed statement of the principal charges to which they respectively relate, but even if this were not so the rule is well established that where a sentence in gross is pronounced upon a conviction under an indictment containing several counts and upon appeal or review some of them are held bad and the others are sustained, the sentence will not be disturb

STEPS FOR CITY REFORM

Committee of Fifteen Holds Its First Meeting.

Only Five Members, Including James C. Carter, Decline to Serve—Other Members Chosen.

The committee of fifteen appointed to devise means to deal with vice and official corruption held its first meeting yesterday afternoon at the office of George Foster Peabody, 27 Pine Street. At 3 o'clock William H. Baldwin, Jr., President of the Long Island Railroad, walked into Mr. Peabody's office. He was quickly followed by Alexander E. Orr, John S. Kennedy, the Rev. George L. Paddock, Joel B. Erhardt, John Harsen Rhoades, Jacob H. Schiff, Charles Sprague Smith, and Prof. Felix Adler. A little later Charles Stewart Smith, who appointed the committee of fifteen, arrived.

The meeting was held behind closed doors, and after a session lasting two hours Mr. Baldwin, to whom had been delegated the office of giving out information, said that the committee was not fully organized.

"Charles Stewart Smith," said Mr. Baldwin, "was elected a member of the committee. A sub-committee of two was appointed to ask four gentlemen to take the places of the five men who declined to serve. We have decided to await the result of the sub-committee's visit to these gentlemen, and when we have a full meeting we will outline our plan of campaign.

"Those who declined have given us their reasons. James C. Carter has written in commendation of the committee's work, but declined to serve on account of ill-health. Alfred T. White and William R. De Forest are both on the Tenement House Committee, and are devoting a great deal of time to it. Adrian Iselin, Jr., declined on account of previous obligations, and Mr. Thayer declines on account of absence."

"When will the next meeting be?" Mr. Baldwin was asked.

"At the call of the sub-committee of two," was the reply. "No, I cannot give their names, and if I should give you the names of the four we have selected I would be exceeding my instructions. It is remarkable, though, that ten members agreed to serve."

Mr. Baldwin finally admitted that the temporary Chairman of the meeting was Jacob H. Schiff. The next meeting, he was sure, would be inside of a week.

Mr. Baldwin was asked if labor would be represented on the committee, as suggested by the Rev. R. Heber Newton.

"Yes," said Mr. Baldwin; "labor will be represented. It is a good suggestion. We will probably not, however, increase the committee beyond fifteen right away. That number is a good working body. This committee is not a temporary affair; neither is the work before us. It is permanent."

Mr. Rhoades said that he was astonished to find that only five members of the committee decined to serve. In his opinion, the committee would achieve excellent results.

TAMMANY COMMITTEE'S WORK.

Mr. Nixon Says Many Nuisances Have Been Abated—An Executive Session.

The Tammany committee to investigate vice held a meeting at 192 Bowery yesterday afternoon. All of the members of the committee were present. The early part of the session was executive. At its conclusion at 4 o'clock Chairman Nixon asked if there was any one present with complaints or information. As there was none, the meeting adjourned.

Mr. Nixon at first said that there was nothing to be given out. He afterward said that many letters and some documentary evidence had been obtained from several persons. The nuisances complained of had been reported to Chief Devery, and the committee had taken pains to see that they were abated. Mr. Nixon said that the committee had received thanks for the abatement of many evil influences.

VIGILANCE LEAGUE NEWSPAPER.

New Publication to Wage War Against Croker and Tammany.

The first number of a new newspaper will make its appearance at the meeting of the City Vigilance League in Cooper Union to-night. It is to be called The New York Vigilant, and its editors will be Frank Moss, Francis E. Laimbeer, Harry B. Skinner, and George B. Clark. It will contain, among other articles, a discussion of the city's budget. The paper will have no advertisements. The next issue will probably appear some time in January, and after that it will be issued oftener and with steadily increasing frequency until it will become a daily paper a week or so before the next election.

Dr. Parkhurst was asked last night whether it would represent his ideal of a newspaper. He said it would not. It was a publication which could not be classed as a daily newspaper.

"There is a demand," he said, "for such a paper, and as there are still some men who do not expect to make money out of everything we will be able to publish it until the demand for it ceases."

One of the editors, discussing the new publication, said that it would have distinctly an anti-Tammany policy, and that it would make Richard Croker the centre of its attack, the bull's-eye of its target. If in a month or so it appeared that Mr. Devery would be retained as Chief of Police, and that Tammany considered him fit for that office, Mr. Deverey might be made the special object of The Vigilant's attention.

Dr. Parkhurst will not be able to speak at to-night's meeting, as was expected, but a letter from him to Frank Moss, Chairman of the League's Executive Committee, will be read. It will deal with the political situation in the city.

RUSSELL SAGE IN CONTEMPT.

Explains Why He Didn't Appear and Is Given Another Chance.

Russell Sage yesterday explained his apparent contempt of court in failing to appear before Justice McCarthy in the City Court and submit to an examination as to the finances of one of his employés. Korff Brothers had sued E. C. M. Rand and obtained judgment.

This judgment was not paid, so Charles De U. Brower, counsel for the firm, obtained an order for Mr. Rand's examination in supplementary proceedings. As the man employed in Mr. Sage's office, the latter was called as a witness. Mr. Sage failed to appear at the hearing. When Mr. Sage learned yesterday that he was really in contempt of court, he called on the lawyers and explained that he had not remembered the exact date of the hearing. The examination should take place at some future date.

TAUGHT FIANCE TO EMBROIDER.

But Rosa Says His Love Grew Cold After He Became Self-Supporting.

"Since the day I met the defendant and he avowed his love for me I maintained and supported him and taught him how to embroider, and obtained a position for him," is the way the closing paragraph of the affidavit of Rosa Weiner reads. This affidavit yesterday caused the arrest of Louis Gelbert on the charge that he had jilted Rosa after she had loaned him $200.

The young woman seeks to recover $5,000 damages, and as a result she began an action in the City Court and had a warrant issued for Gelbert's arrest. He immediately gave $500 bail. In her affidavit Rosa says that she met Gelbert on Dec. 20, 1896, and that they were to have been married on June 23, 1901. She adds that last week he told her that he had sent for his cousin, in Europe, and as soon as she arrived he intended to marry her. As soon as Rosa learned this fact she began the action and had Justice McCarthy issue the warrant of arrest.

Shoe Dealer Sued for Separation.

Justice Eischoff yesterday listened to testimony in the action of Mrs. Maria Dershem for a separation from her husband, a shoe dealer at Tompkinsville, S. I. Mrs. Dershem declares that her unmarried stepdaughter, who is thirty-seven years old, was one of the causes of her trouble. Mrs. Dershem said that she married the shoe dealers in 1898. She says that his daughter soon took charge of the house, and that Anna Dershem, the unmarried daughter, refused to allow her to go to church with her husband. She complained to her husband, who stood by his daughter. She says that her husband was cruel to her. Anna Derehem denied Mrs. Dershem's allegations, as also did Mr. Dershem.

NEW EVANGELICAL MOVEMENT.

A National Religious Organization Planned to Embrace All Denominations—Political Methods Copied.

At a conference held yesterday at the West Side Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, the plan of perfecting an unsectarian organization for the promotion of evangelical work all over this country was discussed. William Phillips Hall, who was associated with the late Dwight L. Moody, was chosen Chairman of the meeting. He said the movement contemplated would, if the intentions were carried out, embrace every city and town in the land.

The headquarters of those who are to manage the movement will probably be in this city. Mr. Hall appointed a committee that is to be known as the Central Committee. The present plan is to act along lines such as one might employ in organizing a National political party. National headquarters and a National Committee will be chosen, probably appointed by the Central Committee. The National Committee will appoint, in turn, State and County Committees, and then there will be formed further subdivisions.

When the Central Committee met after the conference it was decided to send out circulars to the Secretaries of church societies everywhere, describing the purposes of the new movement and asking their help. Some of those who will serve on the Central Committee are John H. Converse, President of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, Philadelphia; William R. Moody, son of the late Dwight L. Moody; John Willis Baer of Boston, Secretary of the International Christian Endeavor Society; Mrs. Margaret Bottome, President of the King's Daughters Society; the Rev. Dr. R. S. MacArthur, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, this city; Gen. O. O. Howard, the Rev. Dr. Henry Mottet, Church of the Holy Communion, this city, and the Rev. Dr. David J. Burrell, Marble Collegiate Reformed Church.

THINK TEWKSBURY WILL SETTLE.

Creditors of Broker Who Fled to Mexico Still Have Confidence, Counsel Says.

Very little interest was manifested in Wall Street yesterday over the published report that Lewis G. Tewksbury had been located in Mexico, where he is said to be doing a large banking business and living on the same scale that brought about his downfall and flight from this country with $900,000 worth of debts.

B. G. Oppenheim, counsel for some of the creditors, said he had every reason to believe that the reports of Tewksbury's whereabouts were true, but that even if they were, they did not alter the feelings of the creditors, who, he said, believed that Tewksbury would come back some day and square up his debts.

"There are no criminal proceedings against Tewksbury," he added, "and as far as I know there will be none. I would not give 5 cents for the production of the man in my office this minute, and neither would any of his creditors."

REVILED MAN WHO SAVED HIM.

Despondent Saloon Keeper Tried to Commit Suicide with Gas.

Financial ruin has for many weeks been staring Julius Neurohr in the face. Neurohr is a saloon keeper, and lives over his saloon, at 118 East Fourth Street, with his ten-year-old daughter Lena.

His creditors have been pressing him harder than usual during the last few days. Yesterday morning he sent Lena around to another saloon keeper named Paul Black to borrow a knife. Black knows about Neurohr's business troubles, and he told the little girl that he hadn't a knife to spare.

Then Neurohr sent his child to visit some relatives in Harlem. He hugged and kissed her more than usual when he said goodbye and told her to be a good girl.

Black kept thinking about the knife episode, and when he went around to Neurohr's saloon and found it closed, he hurried to the Fifth Street Police Station and fetched two policemen, who broke open the door of Neurohr's place. They found him lying on the bed, unconscious, with a gas tube, through which gas was pouring, lying across his bresst. He was taken to the hospital and revived. He reviled Black for having saved his life.

POTTER TRUSTEES GET JUDGMENT

Had Sued the City for Collecting Money for Vault Privileges.

Justice Nash, in the Supreme Court, yesterday, handed down a decision in which he gives judgment against the city for $3,513.60 in favor of Frederick Potter and Clarence Kelsey, as trustees under the will of Orlando B. Potter. When Orlando B. Potter died he was the owner of the property at the southwest corner of Broadway and Rector Street. The property also ran around on Trinity Place. In May, 1897, the trustees made application to the city for permission to build vaults under the Broadway and Rector Street side of the building. They asked to be allowed to build 1,664.93 square feet of vaults.

At that time it was discovered that for a period of forty years the estate had maintained vaults on the Trinity Place side of the building. The city agreed to allow the new vaults to be built, provided that the trustees would pay $2 per square foot for the space occupied by both the new and the old vaults. The trustees paid the city $6,264.90 under protest, and then brought the action to recover the money paid for the old vaults, claiming that the city had lost all right to collect the money.

In his decision yesterday Justice Nash sustained their contention, and awarded them the sum paid under protest, with interest from the date of payment.

EX-SPANISH OFFICER'S THEFT.

Son of Gen. Carrion Discharged After a Lecture by Judge Foster.

Felipe Carrion, a tea dealer of 48 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, who was a Captain in the Spanish Army during the Cuban campaign, and whose father is a Spanish General, pleaded guilty to grand larceny in General Sessions yesterday and was discharged by Judge Foster. Carrion had been in the Tombs seventy-six days, and Judge Foster stated that many reputable persons had interceded in the prisoner's behalf.

Carrion came to the United States in September and secured credit for a bill of teas from Alfred Govin of 48 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street. On Sept. 28 he gave Govin a check for $2,400, receiving in return $704. Carrion's check was returned unpaid.

In discharging him Judge Foster said that he had heard it was the prisoner's intention to leave the country if released.

"Your methods of doing business have been extremely dishonorable," said the Judge, "which if continued would make it impossible for law-abiding people to have any dealings with you. However, I understand that your war record is good and that you are a brave and patriotic man. If you leave the country you will have an opportunity to begin life anew and live honestly."

Carrion, young, tall, and erect, murmured a few words of thanks in Spanish and left the courtroom with his friends.

TALESMAN BADLY SCARED.

Couldn't Remember Where He Lived and Had to be Excused.

Solomon Metzger's awe of courts of justice and the dignity of black-gowned Judges and brass-buttoned officers caused him to forget for fifteen minutes yesterday his place of residence and disqualified him as a juror.

When his name was drawn in the case of Max Appel, in General Sessions, he took his seat on the witness chair in much perturbation.

"Where do you live?" asked Assistant District Attorney Townsend, in tones which caused him to shake in his shoes.

"1,647—1,647—1,647—" he stammered.

"Do you live in New York?" interrupted Abraham Levy.

"Oh, yes, Sir. Just let me think a moment, and I'll tell you where I live," said Metzger, bracing up.

"Could you find your way home?" inquired Mr. Levy, while a titter ran round the courtroom.

"Why, yes, Sir. I've lived for years at 1,647—er—1,647—I just can't think what street it is now. I could find my way there, though."

"Well, I guess you may be excused," broke in Judge Foster, and possible fees for December jury duty were lost to Solomon Metzger.

After he left the courtroom, Metzger remembered that he lived at 1,647 Madison Avenue, and that he was a butcher at that address.

CAPT. TRASK WILL NOT SERVE.

Refuses Renomination as Marine Society's President—Sailors' Snug Harbor Management Displeases Him.

Capt. G. D. S. Trask surprised the Standing Committee of the Marine Society yesterday afternoon by declining to accept the nomination for re-election as President. He did not explain his reasons for the refusal, and the meeting, which had been called for the purpose of making the nominations, was hastily adjourned. When Capt. Trask was asked last night for a statement as to the cause of his action, he said:

"As President of the Marine Society I have to serve as Trustee of the Sailors' Snug Harbor. While it is usual for our President to serve for a second term, I do not wish to do so, as I am at variance with the rest of the Trustees of the Harbor on the question of its management. Our chief difference of opinion arises from the fact that they are inclined to give preference to old sailors of the United States Navy in conferring the benefits of the institution.

"Capt. Randall, the founder of the Harbor, intended the seamen of the merchant marine to be the beneficiaries, for there was not a navy of the Government in his time. Appointments to office have been made by the Trustees which are positively distasteful to the great merchant marine interests in this city and country. I don't believe that is right, I am very sure it is wrong; and I am, with due regard for the eminent business men and clergymen on the board with me, totally dissatisfied with the management of the establishment."

The Board of Trustees is made up of the Mayor of the City of New York, the Recorder, the President of the Chamber of Commerce, the rector of Trinity Church, the pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, and the President and Vice President of the Marine Society.

"CHUCK" CONNORS EXPLAINS.

In a Dilemma Before Magistrate Cornell, Who Had Considered Him a Myth—Chinatown Pastimes.

One of the innocent little pastimes with which the white denizens of the Chinatown district are wont to beguile the passing hours was disclosed in the Essex Market Police Court yesterday, where two of the principal participants in the game—John McDonald of 20 Bowery and "Chuck" Connors, the celebrated guide, philosopher, and friend of the Chinatown tourist, were arraigned.

A policeman had caught sight of the two men running down Bayard Street Sunday night, stopping at intervals to beat each other. McDonald at the time had his face blackened until he resembled an African Hottentot, while his eyelashes and eyebrows were missing. The officer, not understanding the game, arrested both men.

Magistrate Cornell appeared surprised when Connors was brought up to the bar.

"I have often heard of 'Chuck' Connors," he said, "but never knew before that he was a reality. I always thought he was a myth."

Then McDonald, in an injured tone, went on to tell of the part he took in the night's entertainment.

"Oi was afther sittin' in a chair furninst the shtove, yer Anner," said he, "in Barney Flynn's place, and afther droppin' off into a bit of a shlape Oi was awakened to toind a lot of fresh mugs a-dancin' and a prancin' about me and laffin' fit to shplit their soides.

"Not knowin' at the toime thot they had made a nigger out of me face wid burrnt corrk, Oi wint up ter Connors and asked him to lind me the loan av a shmoke. With thot he takes a polpe from his pocket and gives it to me, and the moment Oi put the loight av a match to it it blows up loike a blast. Oi was hurt wid me frind Connors, an' Oi wint over and hit im wan on th' neck. After thot Oi admit Oi chased him. Oi was thot mad."

"What have you got to say, Mr. Connors?" asked the Magistrate.

"Well, it wus dis way," said Connors; "Dis yere bloke wus up at Barney's doin' de Rip Van Winkle in de chair, and some o' de gang put de midnight onto his mug wid a lot o' blackin'. It wasn't me, though, and de rest is Judge, dis old guy had his pots on an' he don't know who dun it, see? I wus never pinched before, yer Honor; dat's on de dead, an' I don't want to have me reputation spoiled now, see? Dis bloke is dead wrong. I never gives him no blowup tobacco."

Both men were finally discharged, whereupon Connors thanked the Magistrate profusely.

WOMAN'S SEARCH DISASTROUS.

Looks for 25 Cents with a Match and Burns Her Whole Savings.

Mrs. Annie Grapner, who lives with her husband and three children on the top floor of the tenement at 56 Allen Street, dropped a 25-cent piece on the floor of her room yesterday afternoon. It rolled under the bed, and she got a match and began looking for it. The match ignited the bed clothing, and Mrs. Grapner ran screaming from the room. Between the foot of the mattress and the springs of this particular bed had been placed for safe keeping 100 guilders in Roumanian bank notes. Before the firemen arrived the notes were all destroyed, and $1,100 damage has been done to the room. Mrs. Grapner was disconsolate.

HOMELESS MAN'S PHILOSOPHY.

Lived Well with Last Savings Before He Attempted Self-Destruction.

When Patrick Quinn, a laborer out of a job, ran very low as to funds he determined three days ago to live a little bit better than usual with the last of his little savings and let the future take care of itself. Accordingly he took a room in the Putnam House, at Twenty-sixth Street and Fourth Avenue, and lived well for three days. He reached his limit yesterday, and at noon went up to his room. Two hours later a call boy found him sitting in a chair in the room and covered with blood.

A policeman was sent for, and it was found that Quinn had cut some ugly gashes in his throat. The razor was found lying on the floor near him. He was taken to Bellevue, where it was said his condition was serious. Quinn, when asked why he had attempted to kill himself, replied:

"Oh, the usual reason; no money, no friends; sick and tired of the uphill fight."

FLOUR SHIPMENTS BY RAIL.

Big Increase Due to the Close of Lake Navigation.

The closing of lake navigation is held responsible for the large increase in flour shipments by rail last week over the figures for the previous week, 75,654 barrels having been moved out of Chicago, as against 46,070.

New York Central lines carried 34,358 barrels, Pennsylvania lines moved 19,754 barrels, and the Baltimore and Ohio carried 12,425 barrels, the rest being distributed among the smaller lines. Shipments of packing house products also increased from 17,993 tons to 22,078 tons, which were evenly divided among the various lines. Grain shipments alone showed a decrease, only 939,000 bushels being moved, as against 995,000 bushels for the previous week. Of this the Erie carried 237,000 bushels and the Grand Trunk 163,000 bushels, while the New York, Chicago and St. Louis carried 100,000 bushels.

Rates on these various shipments are reported steadier, grain rates being, it is said, well maintained through the West. Rates on packing house products are also reported as somewhat improved.

AT WAR OVER LUTHER

How Priest and Pastor View His Morals and Example.

Influence of the Monk Who Defied Ecclesiastical Authority, Father O'Hare Considers Evil.

An attack made upon the Rev. Frank W. Oswald, pastor of St. James's Lutheran Church, on Milton Street, Greenpoint, by the Rev. Father Patrick O'Hare, rector of St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church, in a circular which Father O'Hare circulated among his parishioners on Sunday, is likely to result in hard feeling against Father O'Hare on the part of the people of Pastor Oswald's church.

The attack was brought about through a sermon which Pastor Oswald preached about three weeks ago on "Luther and the Bible." The sermon was written to prove that Martin Luther's example of married life gave the first impetus to the ideal domestic life of the German nation. A short synopsis of the sermon was published in a local paper, and Father O'Hare took exception to the Protestant minister's estimate of Luther, inducing the paper that had published it to refute it later by saying it was not well founded.

Pastor Oswald replied a week ago in a sermon alleging that Father O'Hare had misrepresented the life of Luther and had taken refuge in trickery and deception. It was this that led to Father O'Hare's attack on Pastor Oswald in the circular. It was entitled "Luther and His Immoral Life." The circular in part says:

"Last Sunday Mr. Oswald told his congregation I had misrepresented the life of Luther and had taken refuge in trickery and deception. If I erred at all in my reply it consisted in admitting too much. This I have done for two reasons. First, I endeavored to have regard for the feelings of our Protestant fellow-citizens and not to wound sensibilities unnecessarily. I am convinced that it was kindness misspent as far as Mr. Oswald was concerned.

"Again, those who familiarize themselves with the literature of the Reformation, and especially with that part touching the life of Luther, know how difficult and painful it is to make quotations in print, unless one is willing to descend into the gutter and wade in obscenity and come into collision with the civil authorities. In writing of Luther's moral teachings, his life, and his views on matrimony and the Seventh Commandment, one must saturate the atmosphere with antiseptics.

"Yet these things must be taken into consideration in order to understand Luther's moral life as an individual or as a husband or father. For one who is totally ignorant of the subject in hand, and who operates with newspaper clippings and encyclopedia quotations; for one whose logic smells of the nursery; whose historical sense is so developed that a picture gallery is to him history; for such a one the task is made easy, especially if he is genuinely Lutheran and follows the advice given by Luther to Melancthon to make false pretenses, to make concessions, which were not intended to be kept.

"To understand Luther in any degree one must take his whole personality, his youth, his friends, his teachings on morality. To merely narrate that Dr. Luther composed a hymn for the Christmas tree while tending to the baby, and to draw from that the inference that Luther taught the German nation the virtues of domestic life is a gross slander upon that nation and a misrepresentation of history which even dense ignorance cannot excuse. This city is at present in a crisis. Across the bridge committees are forming to battle with the demon of vice, and here in Brooklyn the story of moral leprosy is spread before the community from the pulpit."

In speaking of the matter yesterday Father O'Hare said that neither in his official capacity as a Roman Catholic priest nor as a Christian gentleman would he permit personal feeling to enter into the discussion of any subject of such relative importance. He said that in this particular case he was neither prompted by personal ill-feeling toward the Rev. Mr. Oswald, nor by his belief as a Catholic, but as a priest and a Christian he felt it his sacred duty to reply to the public utterances of a public man, and especially so when these utterances were made concerning a personality which if thoroughly investigated would necessarily tend to destroy morals and vitiate the influences now at work to repress vice.

Pastor Oswald refused to talk on the attack when seen by a reporter for THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TRIED SUICIDE IN A CELL.

Buffalo Man, Accused of Burglary, Attempted to Strangle Himself.

Charles Friedenthal, who gives his residence as 54 South Clark Street, Buffalo, and insists that he is a farmer, tried to commit suicide in his cell in the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street Police Station early yesterday morning, where he had been locked up a few hours before on a charge of burglary. Friedenthal had been seen coming out of a stable in East One Hundred and Sixteenth Street with an overcoat on his arm that belonged to a man employed in the stable. In the station house Friedenthal was found to have a silver watch, which also belonged to a man in the stable.

About 4 o'clock in the morning the doorman at the station house heard Friedenthal breathing heavily, and upon examination found that the prisoner had taken the lace from one of his shoes and fastened it tightly about his neck. He was slowly strangling to death. The doorman quickly cut the cord, and Friedenthal revived in a few minutes. Later the man was arraigned in the Harlem Police Court and held in $3,300 bail on a charge of burglary.

THE WEATHER.

LOCAL FORECAST.—Generally fair Tuesday and Wednesday; fresh westerly winds, becoming variable.

Generally fair weather is indicated Tuesday and Wednesday, except that local snows are probable Tuesday over portions of the lake region. Temperature changes will not be marked, although it will not be so cold over northern New England. On the New England Coast the winds will be fresh west to southwest. Regina Music Boxes

A home without music is like a garden without flowers. And yet there are many homes where music is loved, that have neither piano nor pianist. Those who would like to play have not had the time for a musical education. Then in homes where both piano and pianist are found, the one who plays is not always present and does not always wish to be tied to the piano.

The Regina Music Box Entertains Them All

It plays for the children in the morning; for the callers in the afternoon, and makes merry for a party in the evening. It is never away when you want it. It never grows tired. Its music is always sweet and perfect. Then it plays anything you wish—hymns, songs, waltzes, two steps, marches, rag-time or what you will. It is a delightful addition to every home.

Fine FURS

The many who have made their purchases of furs for this winter doubtless welcomed Sunday's sudden drop of the mercury. They've had but little opportunity as yet to wear them. There'll be plenty from this time on. There'll be no better time to make selection—no better place than this Fur Store in which to make it. The assortment is very wide, embracing about everything that you'd care to look at. All of sterling quality, conscientiously put together. There are neck scarfs at $4 and a jacket at $4,000. Handsome collarettes of astrakhan, at $9; Stone Marten boas, at $16.50 and $20; electric seal jackets, at $40; Persian lamb coats, at $65; genuine seal coats at $200—a few specimen good values from many.

Second floor, Broadway.

Bed Coverings

Our Blankets are most carefully selected—pure, inodorous wools, beautifully carded, and substantially woven. Where cotton is used, it is the strong, fine spool cotton threads that give strength to the warp; yet so deeply buried that it is unseen and unfelt among the wool.

They are the best blankets that are made, in every grade, and at prices always favorably low.

These hints of some of them:

$3.75 pair—"The Beverley;" strong, well-made white blankets, good and warm; cotton warp, wool filling; 72x84 in., 5½ lbs.

$4.50 pair—"The Physicians' Favorite;" filling of long staple wool; cotton warp; 70x82 in., 5 lbs.

$5 pair—"The Chesapeake;" all wool in warp and filling; 70x80 in., 5 lbs.

$7.50 pair—"The Torrington;" of fine western wool with spool cotton warp; 84x86 in., 7½ lbs.

$8 pair—"The Princess Anne;" for those that want a large heavy blanket; wool filling, cotton warp, 82x86 in., 8 lbs.

Cotton-filled Comfortables, silkoline covered, with white cotton filling, at 90c, $1.25 and $1.50 each.

Silk down-filled Comfortables, at $10 and $12 each.

Third floor, Ninth street.

Men's Overcoats

Now that there's a strong hint in the air of genuine winter there'll doubtless be a rush of the procrastinators to get under cover. But even during the protracted mild period there was a lively overcoat business here. Especially brisk was the selling of Raglan overcoats. The Wanamaker Raglan is a particularly stylish coat—broad shouldered, and with the correct hang from collar to hem. Some of these, an excellent value, too, at $15. They're of Oxford mixed and black friezes and cheviots; lined with serge, the sleeves with satin; $18 or $20 would be fair for this coat. Then there's a handsome new coat of all-wool Oxford frieze, made with a yoke; decidedly swell. It's $16.50. Others at $20, that are fairly worth $25.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Men's Bath Robes

We make bath robes. We especially recommend our Raglan Robe. It's a soft, warm, luxurious blanket affair, with Raglan sleeves. Made to fit. Made to be comfortable. Various grades, $3.75 to $10.

Men's Store, Broadway and Ninth.

Flannel Waists

Here are some of the handsomest waists of the season, at the very littlest price you have heard of—or are likely to hear of. They are of French flannel—brand new. Various solid colors and black; some with polka-dots. Latest styles. Some in plain tailor effect with flat plaits, stitched; some prettily braid-trimmed. Others with effective vests of embroidered flannel in contrasting color.

Only a few of the waists in this offering are $4 kinds. The majority are good $5 and $6 values. Some would be very fairly priced at $7. We bought the entire lot so cheaply that our price shall be

The collection comprises every proper sort. The style you prefer is among them. Silk and satin quilted affairs that have been in favor so long, and that are still held to be indispensable among many good dressers—all the various shapes and grades of them are here.

And that newest idea—an elegant, graceful, and very practical scarf that is plaited about the neck, then falling away in wide folds. This protector will be popular. Can be worn day or evening.

WANTS NO PARTNERS IN ISTHMIAN CANAL

Mr. Teller Asks the Senate to Ignore Great Britain.

Senators Frye and Stewart Argue for the Ratification of the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The Senate spent almost five hours to-day in executive session, considering the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. There were five or six speeches made, some of them by Senators who had not spoken hitherto upon the treaty, and others by Senators who had previously expressed themselves. Among the latter was Senator Morgan (Dem., Ala.), who returned to his former speech, elaborating somewhat his position as to the effect of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty.

Mr. Morgan took issue with Senator Teller (Sil., Col.) as to the purport of the first clause of that treaty, claiming that it applied only to Great Britain's right to fortify the Nicaragua Canal itself. Senator Teller replied at some length, asserting that the provision was of more general import, as, he said, anyone could ascertain for himself by reading President Buchanan's views upon the subject when he was Minister to England. The declaration then made showed plainly, he said, that England had attempted to extend her rights beyond the immediate vicinity of the canal.

Mr. Teller then proceeded to again elaborate his views upon the general subject, repeating his declaration that the United States should construct the canal if at all, regardless of the British position, and without going through the formality of ratifying the pending treaty.

During the day speeches were made by Senators Money (Dem., Miss.), Stewart (Rep., Nev.), Frye (Rep., Me.) and others. Senator Stewart announced that he was for the treaty without amendment, and Senator Money that he was against the treaty in any form. He wanted the canal built as much as any Senator, he said, but he considered the pending treaty little less than an insult to the intelligence of the American people. He had no doubt that if proper diplomatic efforts should be made, it would be possible to secure the complete abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and that was what he wanted. He did not, indeed, believe the people of this country would be satisfied so long as any vestige of that instrument remained among existing international obligations.

That convention, he said, was contrary to the wishes of the people of the United States, and they could be satisfied only by definitely erasing it once and forever. There also should be new conventions between the United States and both Nicaragua and Costa Rica, giving absolute control of the waterway to this country. He wanted no partnerships with any country in ownership or management of the canal when built.

The possibility of Secretary Hay's resigning in case the Foreign Relations Committee amendment to the treaty should prevail, having been alluded to, Senator Frye said he was in position to make official denial of that report. The Secretary had no such intention. Mr. Frye announced himself as favorable to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. He said that deny the effect of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty as much as we may, it still is on the international records of this country and is given more or less recognition by every administration that has to deal with the question of construction of an isthmian canal.

It had been a constant source of vexation in connection with the canal subject and he apprehended that it would continue to be such until that portion of it relating to canal should be disposed of. He was satisfied, for instance, that the canal would have been constructed during the administration of President Arthur if the old negotiations had not been in existence.

Senator Chandler (Rep., N. H.) asked Senator Frye to make Secretary Hay's position with reference to resigning public, but the Maine Senator declined, saying he was only authorized to make the announcement to the Senate. Senator Chandler retorted that to do that was equivalent to giving it to the public, and the Senate then lapsed into a discussion of the ways in which their executive secrets get into the newspapers.

HOUSE PASSES SUPPLY BILL.

First of the Appropriation Acts Goes Through in Record Time.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The first of the great supply bills, the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation bill, was passed by the House to-day in record time. The bill carries $24,896,408, and has 131 pages, but there was less than ten minutes' debate upon it.

In a brief address Mr. Bingham (Rep., Penn.) who had charge of the bill, said that both parties in the recent campaign pledged themselves to economy and retrenchment. The pending bill was a step in that direction.

Mr. Robinson (Dem., Ind.) expressed the opinion that if retrenchment was desired a provision should be inserted in the bill to cut off the thirty-day sick leave in addition to the thirty days' leave now allowed the clerks in the executive departments.

Mr. Bingham explained that such legislation did not come within the purview of the pending bill. The law left the question of leave within the discretion of the various heads of departments.

Mr. Robinson protested that clerks in the Government service outside of Washington did not receive the same leave privilege received by those here, and he thought the unjust discrimination against the former should cease.

An amendment providing for twelve additional temporary clerks to dispose of the accumulated business in the office of the Controller of the Treasury was adopted. No other amendments were adopted. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill, Mr. Bingham thanked the House for the confidence shown in the Appropriations Committee in allowing the bill to go through unchallenged, and the bill was then passed.

MR. HAY AND THE TREATY.

Secretary Will Not Resign Even If the Convention Is Amended.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The assertion that Secretary Hay will retire from the Cabinet in case the Hay-Pauncefote treaty is not ratified, precisely as it stands, is without foundation. From the highest authority, that of persons so close to both the President and Mr. Hay, that nothing of the kind could transpire without their knowledge, it is learned that the Secretary has never given the slightest intimation of any such desire or purpose, nor anything that could be construed in that way, nor has any person supposed to speak for him given such an intimation.

So far as is known to any person connected with the State Department, or the White House, Mr. Hay intends to remain in the Cabinet without regard to any alterations that may be made in the treaty. If he has any other purpose, no one but himself is aware of it, not even the President.

It is the President's wish that Mr. Hay shall remain in the Cabinet. The diplomatic triumphs of the State Department under Mr. Hay's management, particularly during the Chinese crisis, have been so generally recognized throughout the country and have redounded so much to the credit of the administration that the President is anxious to have the Department continue under its present management, and it would be difficult for Mr. Hay to retire, even if he wished to do so.

LONG FAVORS BOUTELLE.

Secretary Urges His Retirement as Captain in the Navy.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Secretary Long has written to Chairman Foss of the House Naval Committee regarding the proposed retiring of Representative Boutelle of Maine as a Captain of the navy, in the course of which he says:

"If the reward proposed in the resolution—that is, the placing of a person not at the time on the active list of the navy upon the retired list—can ever be appropriate it would appear to be so in the present case. Mr. Boutelle served with distinction as an officer of the navy during the critical period of the civil war. During his service as Chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs his experience as a naval officer and extensive acquaintance with naval matters proved of great value in the upbuilding of the navy, to which he untiringly devoted his energies and abilities.

"Congress has from time to time authorized appointments in the navy upon the active or retired list in a special manner. As recent examples of direct, although unusual, appointments upon the active list made in pursuance of special legislation, are the cases of Lieuts. Chester Wells, J. R. Morris, and J. P. Ryan, under the act of March 20, 1890; also that of Lieut. James E. Palmer, under act of March 17, 1898, and Ensign Thomas D. Parker, under act of March 3, 1899."

The Secretary cites other precedents, and adds: "In view of the precedents above given, and others which might be cited, and in consideration of the exceptional features of the case, the department makes no objection to the legislation proposed by the joint resolution in question."

TOWNE OF MINNESOTA A SENATOR.

Gov. Lind's Appointee Takes a Seat on the Democratic Side.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—In the Senate to-day Mr. Nelson (Rep., Minn.) presented the credentials of Charles A. Towne, appointed to succeed Cushman K. Davis, deceased. Mr. Chandler, (Rep., N. H.,) Chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, directed attention to the last clause of the credentials, which was that Mr. Towne should hold his seat until "his successor was elected and qualified." He said the Constitution provided simply that the appointee should hold office until the Legislature had met.

"In the credentials presented," said Mr. Chandler, "the Governor has undertaken to prescribe the length of the new Senator's term. The added clause of the credentials, of course, is superfluous. I desire simply to call attention to this fact, and have no intention to object to the swearing in of Mr. Towne."

The new Senator was conducted to the desk by Mr. Nelson, and the oath of office was administered by Mr. Frye, the President pro tem. Mr. Towne took his seat on the Democratic side of the Chamber.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 10.—The statement of Senator Chandler of New Hampshire that Gov. Lind has undertaken to prescribe the length of Senator Towne's term by the wording of his appointment, was a surprise to Minnesota's Chief Executive, who said that he had very carefully followed the wording of the statute and had not sought in any way to dictate to the United States Senate, as such an attempt would be foolish. He said:

"I followed the Federal Constitution in part, and further quoted specifically from the Minnesota statutes in regard to such appointments. This statute reads that the Governor 'shall appoint some person to fill such vacancy until the session of the Legislature next thereafter and until such person is elected and qualified.' I followed the language of the Constitution and the statutes. The Senate has itself already established a precedent in a Vermont case, holding that the appointee retains his office until the close of the session, unless an election is had earlier. When the session is adjourned the term ends and an appointment would not then hold anyway, as has been decided in Pennsylvania and Oregon cases."

NEELY EXTRADITION CASE.

Counsel Argues Military Government in Cuba Is Unconstitutional, Amounting Virtually to War.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The Neely extradition case was argued to-day in the Supreme Court. All the Judges were present. The argument developed interesting and important questions of law with reference to the right of the United States to extradite a fugitive criminal in the absence of an extradition treaty, and especially with reference to the right of the President, since the ratification of the treaty of Paris, to maintain a military form of government in the Island of Cuba.

The latter feature of the argument made it the first of the arguments which bring up for final decision by the Supreme Court the constitutional relations between this country and the territorial acquisitions which it has gained as a result of the Spanish-American war. The Neely case referred exclusively to the character of these relations, so far as the Island of Cuba was concerned, and thus presented an independent question from that which will be argued Dec. 17, when the character of these relations with Porto Rico and the Philippines will be under consideration.

John D. Lindsay of the New York bar opened the argument for Neely. He claimed that there existed in Cuba prior to our intervention a Cuban Republic. This republic he argued, the United States recognized on April 20, 1898, when it passed a joint resolution, signed by the President, which declared "that the people of the Island of Cuba are, and of right ought to be, free and independent."

He claimed that the United States did not make war against the Cuban Republic thus recognized, but was its ally, and that therefore the success of the American Army did not mean that Cuba was conquered, but that the Spanish troops were driven out of the territory of a friendly ally. He contended, therefore, that when the treaty of Paris was ratified the war ceased, and as no war had been declared against the Cuban Republic, all further justification under the war-making power to occupy Cuba ceased, and the President, immediately upon the ratification of the treaty, or within a reasonable time thereafter, should have withdrawn the army. He claimed that the substitution and maintenance by the President of a military government in Cuba was and is without authority under International law, and in flagrant contravention of the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. Lindsay further urged that such military government was unconstitutional, as it was essentially a prosecution of war against the Cuban Republic, and as Congress alone had the authority to declare war against the Cuban Republic, the control of Cuba by the President, as Commander in Chief, was a virtual prosecution of war without the authority of Congress. He denied that such government could be justified under the war power, as the war power has no existence except in time of war, when the war is authorized by Congress, and that the President could not use the National forces for the purpose of governing Cuba.

He argued, finally, that, in any event, as he tried in the Cuban courts is without a Grand Jury or a petit jury, Neely could not be tried before them without violation of the Sixth, Seventh, and Eighth Amendments to the Constitution.

Owing to the late hour at which Mr. Lindsay closed, the court adjourned before Assistant Attorney General Beck could be heard in reply. He will probably speak to-morrow.

PROPOSED PHILIPPINE DUTIES.

Perry Belmont Says that Supreme Court Will Upset Commission's Work.

Ex-Congressman Perry Belmont said yesterday that he regarded the news from Manila that the Taft Commission was about to levy duties on exports and imports as a serious matter.

"It indicates," he said yesterday, "that the President did not anticipate that the Supreme Court will repudiate his claim and the claim of the Taft Commission to enact as a matter of right new laws for the archipelago, as well as to repeal, alter, and suspend laws not in conflict with the Constitution. The Constitution carefully separates legislative from executive power. When our new islands had been acquired by treaty, the power to legislate for them vested immediately and absolutely in Congress, leaving no place for executive legislation, but evidently since the verdict of last November the President does not so understand it. All Democratic lawyers and Republican lawyers, and among the latter Senator Spooner, said, during the last session of Congress, that where territory has been acquired by the United States, the laws in force at the time of acquisition remain in force until superseded, unless such laws are inconsistent with the Constitution, as in the case of laws upholding involuntary servitude.

"Who can thus supersede Spanish laws existing in our new islands when we acquired them? Nearly all good lawyers of whatever party in Congress have declared that 'Congress, and Congress only,' could do so. Assume that the President now rules in our new islands under anything so foreign and vague as international law, yet one before McKinley has denied that our Constitution so modified the law of nations, in that regard, as to compel the President and every executive officer to obey that fundamental law.

"If the President is right in his claim, and the Supreme Court shall so declare, then if the treaty-making power shall acquire territory in China in conjunction with the allied powers and Congress shall not legislate for it, it will follow that the President can make whatever laws he pleases for such territory."

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE LAWS.

Congressman Ray Says Congress Should Have Full Power to Deal with the Subject.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—In view of the movement for the suppression of polygamy and for uniform marriage and divorce laws, Chairman Ray (Rep., N. Y.,) of the House Committee on the Judiciary, having in charge this legislation, has written the following letter to those interested in the movement:

"I have your letter, with many others, relating to the proposed amendment to the Constitution prohibiting polygamy in the United States. For many years I have favored an amendment to the Constitution authorizing Congress to enact uniform laws regulating marriage and divorce which would cover polygamy.

"An amendment to the Constitution merely prohibiting polygamy would amount to but little. An amendment allowing Congress to pass laws punishing polygamy would apply to those localities where polygamy is practiced, that is, it would enable Congress to pass laws prohibiting and punishing polygamy in Utah and one or two other localities where it is practiced, and follow prosecutions in the United States courts.

"Every State in the Union has full power to prohibit and punish polygamy, and every State has anti-polygamy laws. Utah has such a law. The main trouble is in the enforcement of it, and gentlemen, including Judges, who have appeared before this committee in favor of the proposed amendment state that the main object is to give the United States courts jurisdiction, and thus secure a better enforcement of anti-polygamy laws.

"A very large number of our people and many Senators and Representatives feel that such an amendment is unnecessary, and do not know what the fate of the proposition will be, but to the best of my ability I shall press a proposed amendment giving Congress full power to enact uniform laws on the subject of marriage and divorce. I think that the laws of marriage ought to be uniform throughout this Nation, and that the divorce laws ought to be uniform. I think a man married to a woman in New York ought to be married to her everywhere in the United States, and that when divorced from her in one State he ought to be divorced from her in every State.

"Now the law is in such shape, growing out of the conflicting laws of the several States, that a man may be lawfully married to a dozen different women residing respectively in a dozen different States, the marriage to each woman being recognized as lawful in the particular State where the marriage took place, but not recognized in the other States.

"It would take too long for me to point out the conditions that arise under the conflicting and differing State laws. I shall do the best I can to have these conditions remedied. These evils are National in their extent and effect, and ought to be reached by uniform National laws. We cannot hope for uniformity of law on these subjects among forty-five different States."

LOOKING FOR COALING STATIONS.

The Bancroft Sails for Almirante Bay to View Chiriqui.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The naval movements to-day record the sailing of the gunboat Bancroft from Colon for Almirante Bay. It is understood that her mission is to look into the advantages offered by the port of Chiriqui as a coaling station. The sum of $400,000 is now available under an appropriation by Congress for securing naval stations. Several points have been considered, but Chiriqui is among the most desirable. The harbor is capable of floating the entire fleet of a nation, and the water is deep enough for the heaviest battleships. Approaches were made to the Colombian Government, but at that time Colombia was not in a position to make a definite answer, as the territory including this harbor has been in dispute between Colombia and Costa Rica. Since then, however, Colombia and Costa Rica have arranged to arbitrate their differences, and there is a prospect of early settlement of sovereignty.

Attention is also directed to the Bay of Chimbote, in Peru. When Mr. Blaine was Secretary of State, the United States Minister to Peru secured a concession for an American coaling station on this bay. But as the concession was granted while Peru was in the throes of her war with Chile, Mr. Blaine disapproved of it, and it lapsed. Owing to the present differences between Chile and Peru, there have been recent intimations that Peru would be willing to grant a coaling station to the United States. But this has not taken any official form, nor has there been any negotiations concerning Chimbote Bay.

MERCHANTS AGAINST SUBSIDY.

The New York Association on Record as Opposed to Shipping Bill.

The Board of Directors of the Merchants' Association met yesterday and decided to oppose the present Ship Subsidy bill, now before Congress. The action was taken after Mr. C. L. Duval, a Director, and William R. Corwine of the office of the Merchants' Association reported the result of their trip to Washington in connection with the Ship Subsidy bill. They detailed the conversations with President McKinley and the various members of Congress on this subject.

The resolutions adopted declare that, from the report of the committee directed to investigate the Ship Subsidy bill, "there is no sufficient reason—in fact, no valid reason—given for the clause admitting foreign tonnage to American registry and half subsidy."

The statement is made that the power or privilege to frame ship-subsidy legislation was delegated about three years ago to twenty-five laymen, "mostly interested themselves as owners of foreign tonnage, which condition aggravates the charge of class legislation against the Ship Subsidy bill."

A proper subsidy bill is favored by the association, and the claim is made that the bills now pending before Congress "are counter to public sentiment and in conflict with the public good in admitting foreign tonnage to American registry at half subsidy."

A statement of the views of the Merchants' Association was mailed to all members of Congress.

The Board of Directors also considered the matter of the apparent book shortage in the accounts of the Water Register of the city. A committee, consisting of Messrs. Alvah Trowbridge, Chairman; Adolph Ojenhym, John C. Eames, Frank Squier, John C. Jubring, and S. C. Mead, reported that a great loss was entailed on the taxpayers by "the lack of a proper system of accounting in the matter of making collections, as well as in the matter of the purchase of supplies."

The committee reported that an investigation similar to that made in the Water Department be made in all the other departments of the City Government. The committee reports the need of $100,000 to carry on investigations, and advises that no further work be done until this sum of money is raised.

Congressional Notes.

The Senate yesterday passed a bill to provide for the appointment of an additional District Judge for the Northern Judicial District of Ohio.

Senator Cullom has introduced bills to grant pensions at $50 per month to Hannah L. Palmer, widow of Gen. Innis N. Palmer, and Minerva C. McClernand, widow of John L. McClernand.

The Senate Committee on Military Affairs yesterday began consideration of the Army bill as it came from the House of Representatives. Gen. Miles addressed the committee, pointing out changes which, in his opinion, should be made.

The Oleomargarine bill was received in the Senate yesterday, but no reference to a committee was made, owing to the absence of Senator Aldrich of the Finance Committee. There is a contest between this committee and the Agricultural Committee as to which shall have charge of the measure in the Senate. Senator Proctor of the Agricultural Committee has given notice that he will move to refer the bill to his committee.

LEGS CRUSHED BY A TRAIN.

Louis Newgass of Auburn Injured While Trying to Board Moving Cars.

AUBURN, N. Y., Dec. 10.—Louis Newgass, of this city, an expert examiner in the State Insurance Department, had both legs crushed by a Central passenger train at Cayuga this morning, and it is thought both members will have to be amputated.

Mr. Newgass left here at 8:25 for Buffalo and left the train at Cayuga to telephone. The train had started, and in attempting to catch it, Mr. Newgass was caught by the freight platform and knocked under the train. He was brought to the city hospital here.

NEWS OF NEW JERSEY

TROLLEY TRANSFERS STOPPED.

Passaic Deprived of Through Service to Paterson—Official Revenge Is Alleged.

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 10.—Residents of this city and Passaic were surprised yesterday when they learned of new arrangements that had been made by the Jersey City, Hoboken and Paterson Railroad company, whereby Passaic has been deprived of through service to Paterson by way of the Newark line and all transfers north and to the various points in this city. The new rule works both ways, and Patersonians from Riverside, Haledon and Totown can ride only as far as Highland Avenue for one fare. This makes the round trip 20 cents, and will work a hardship to many persons.

The trolley people say that some Passaic residents have been in the habit of systematically "beating" the company. They found that they could come to Paterson by one line and get a transfer back on the other line and have about 20 minutes in which to do business.

It is alleged, however, that the real reason for the change is a desire to punish Passaic for its withdrawal of the White line's old Duhdee franchise. This franchise was only recently annulled by the Passaic Council.

PERILS OF KISSING PARTIES.

Rector Calls Them a Curse, and Denounces Osculation Under the Mistletoe.

Mgr. Robert Seton, rector of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, Jersey City, has formulated some new rules for the guidance of the young people of his congregation during the Christmas festivities.

"I am strongly opposed," said he, "to certain Christmas entertainments, such as kissing parties, held by young people. Mothers and fathers are not doing their duty when they allow their children out at night. I am much opposed to these gatherings, and I wish to warn all young people against that curse—parties. It is the beginning of a notorious ending. And I am particularly opposed to kissing parties on New Year's Day, when males and females kiss each other under the mistletoe.

"The vigil of Christmas is a fast day, and must be observed in proper spirit, and I hope all members of my congregation will not go to theatres or parties or read novels at Christmas, but will keep the holy season of advent as it should be kept."

TWO ECCENTRIC BROTHERS.

One of Them Expires in a Tumble-Down Shanty They Inhabited.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Dec. 10.—Frederick Hatfield, who for years has been noted as one of the eccentric and parsimonious characters in this section, died Saturday night in the tumble-down house that he and his brother have lived in for years on the old Frazee Lee property in Fanwood Township. He had been ill but a few days with pneumonia.

The two brothers lived alone, and were noted for their hate of women. No woman, it is said, had darkened the door of their home for over a quarter of a century. They never had their hair cut, and never wore hats. Whenever they came to town to trade they drove a donkey attached to a two-wheeled gig of their own make. The brothers are reputed to be worth $100,000. The house they lived in is said to have been built over a century ago, but had gone to ruin through neglect.

EDITOR REMAINS IN JAIL.

Mr. Kempson's Child Dies While His Case Awaits Settlement.

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 10.—St. George Kempson, editor of The New York Insurance Journal and The Middlesex County Democrat, has for some time past been attending to his editorial duties in a cell in the New Brunswick Jail. According to a decision handed down by the Supreme Court to-day he will be compelled to continue writing editorials from his rather stuffy office in the jail until Dec. 18, at least, when there will be a final hearing on the charge preferred against him of contempt of the Court of Chancery.

Mr. Kempson obtained a divorce from his wife in the Oklahoma courts, but the New Jersey courts declared it illegal and ordered him to pay his wife alimony. He refused to do so and was adjudged guilty of contempt.

One of Mr. Kempson's children died this evening from whooping cough.

COURT AS EMPLOYMENT BUREAU.

Recorder Stanton Learns from Prisoner How the Trick Was Worked.

Recorder Stanton of Hoboken was considerably surprised yesterday to learn that his court was being made use of by men out of work to secure situations. The Recorder was told of this several days ago, but his informant could give him no particulars. He said he only knew that the thing was being done. An arrest made yesterday exposed the scheme. Samuel Kennedy of 1,502 Willow Avenue, was arraigned on his wife's complaint that he failed to support her. Kennedy told the Recorder that he was a painter, but was out of work and could not find employment.

He then surprised the Recorder by telling him that his wife had caused his arrest at the advice of a woman neighbor.

"All you have to do," said the friend to Mrs. Kennedy, "is to have your husband arrested. Then he can tell the Recorder that he can't find work, and the Recorder will get him a job. I know, because I got my husband a job that way, and so did Mrs. McGinnis."

Investigation showed that Kennedy's story was true, and he was paroled.

No More Secret Divorce Cases.

Chancellor Magie, at Jersey City, yesterday, announced that there would be no more secret divorce cases in Chancery. A lawyer from Paterson, whose name did not transpire, asked that a divorce case in which he was counsel for one of the parties be referred to an advisory master, as he wished to have it conducted as quietly as possible. "That is the last thing this Court will do," said the Chancellor. "Such cases should not be kept secret. The more publicity they are given, the better. When I am ready to act in your case you will be notified."

Treasurer L. H. Belding Missing.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 10.—Walter Sanford, the owner of the "Sporting Life" Company, which played at the Empire Theatre last week, is looking for some trace of L. H. Belding, the treasurer of the company. He left Newark, it is said, and had with him a package containing between $300 and $800 of the company's receipts for the early part of the week. Mr. Sanford says he cannot understand where Mr. Belding has gone. He does not think it is a case of embezzlement, as Mr. Belding has frequently had much larger sums in his possession, which he could have taken had he been dishonest.

Miss Goldfinger's Secret Wedding.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, Dec. 10.—The friends of Miss Essie Goldfinger, who was prominent in the younger Hebrew society set in this city, learned to-day, with much surprise, that Miss Goldfinger was secretly married Friday last to Sylvan Sondheim of New York. Justice Graul of Newark performed the ceremony. Miss Goldfinger left her home, 406 Halsey Street, Friday morning, saying she was going shopping. The first intimation her parents had of her marriage was a telegram announcing it and informing them that the young couple had gone South for their honeymoon.

Customs Official's Disappearance.

Frederick Crumley, of West New York, who is known as "Custom House Jack," because he is an assistant inspector of customs at the West Shore Railroad terminus, in Weehawken, has been missing since Friday. His wife did not report the fact until yesterday. She fears her husband has met with foul play, because he went to the Custom House in New York on Friday and collected his month's pay. He returned to Weehawken and later started for home. His route was by the River Road over the Palisades, which has been the scene of several robberies during the past few weeks.

HANCOCK'S CARGO OF CORPSES.

Reaches San Francisco with About 1,500 Soldiers' and Sailors' Bodies.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 10.—The transport Hancock arrived to-day from Manila by way of Nagasaki, with a gruesome cargo. It consisted of the bodies of about 1,500 sailors and soldiers, who either died in battle or succumbed to the ravages of disease in the Philippines, China, Guam, and Honolulu. This is the largest number of bodies brought home since the outbreak of the Spanish-American war. The Hancock will probably remain in quarantine a few days. The bodies will be conveyed to the Presidio and placed in the buildings there pending burial or shipment to the homes of the relatives.

The Hancock was twenty-five days in making the run from Manila, and was seventeen days in coming from Nagasaki, the last port at which she touched. She brought 52 cabin passengers and 500 in the steerage and there were 11 deaths on the voyage to add to the cargo of dead carried from the Philippines.

Supposed Lumber Man a Suicide.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 10.—Charles Kaeracter of Brainerd, Minn., committed suicide to-day in a small hotel in this city by taking carbolic acid. From papers found on him he is believed to have been a member of the lumber firm of Kaeracter & Waite of Brainerd. Yesterday he was a patient at a hospital near the hotel, and was treated for heart trouble. He had so far recovered this morning that the physicians allowed him to leave the hospital. Returning to the hotel he went to his room. Several hours elapsed, and he did not appear. The clerk sent to the room, and the man was found dead, with the bottle which had contained the acid by his side. No money was found on him, and he left no letters.

"SPIRIT OF HARLEM RIVER."

Materializes in the Mayor's Office and Makes Extravagant Demands.

The "Spirit of the Harlem River" called at Mayor Van Wyck's office yesterday. When the door of Mayor Van Wyck's office was opened the "Spirit" literally blew in. She was fashionably dressed and carried a reticule. In her trail came a swish of cold air. The door was slammed to and then the "Spirit of the Harlem River" arranged her dress, her small blond curls, and rubbed her cold nose. In earlier life "The Spirit of the Harlem River" might have charmed an audience as one of the Rhine maidens guarding the treasure of that stream.

In fact, the "Spirit of the Harlem River" claimed to have just such a mission as that performed by Flosshilde, Welgunde, and Waglinde, the Rhine daughters who guard the sacred gold in Wagnerian opera.

After the "Spirit of the Harlem River" had seated herself she said in a musical voice:

"I have charge of all the golden stones in the Harlem River. I want some improvements made. I want you to send some men up to-morrow and dig up some of the golden stones. They will be spent to adorn the palaces which should line the banks of the oldest river in the world."

"My dear Madam, kindly give me your name," said Sergt. Kennel.

"I am the Spirit of the Harlem River. Golden treasures have I in plenty."

"Tell me what you want, and Mayor Van Wyck will give the orders at once," said Sergt. Kennel.

"It is simple. The Harlem River is the oldest river in the world. It is paved with golden stones. Along the banks should be churches and palaces beautified with the gold taken from the river bed. I, the Spirit of the Harlem River, have charge of the treasure. Understand that not one dollar must be spent without my permission. For, you know, I am the Spirit of the Harlem River."

"That is a big plan," said Sergt. Kennel.

"Why, don't you know if the mud which has been allowed to accumulate for years, coming from the river banks, was cleared away, treasure enough would be found to fill in the river and pave the space with golden blocks?"

"That is just what we are all looking for," said Sergt. Kennel seriously. "The work will be done."

The "Spirit of the Harlem River" refused to leave until a solemn promise was made that her temples to the spirits would be built. She brought.

She said her name was Margaret Heinzmann, that her residence was in a mansion on Fifth Avenue near Thirty-ninth Street, and her wealth would equal that of John D. Rockefeller.

Out into the cold winds which swept across the City Hall Park the "Spirit of the Harlem River" was ushered just before nightfall. She soon became lost in the crowd of wage workers making their way toward the Brooklyn Bridge.

CALLED TO SEE THE PRINCE.

Hoffman House Clerk Calls a Policeman Instead of Sending a Card to Wales.

James J. McDonald, about thirty-seven years old, was taken to Bellevue Hospital yesterday afternoon from the Hoffman House and placed in the pavilion for the insane. Shortly after 3 o'clock McDonald entered the Hoffman House and, sauntering up to the desk, asked for Richard Croker.

Mr. Cart, the clerk, replied:

"My dear Sir, Mr. Croker is in Europe."

"You are mistaken, Sir," rejoined the caller. "He was in England, and I met him at Wantage. He gave me a commission to execute and I was to meet him here to-day."

After a pause, he said: "Well, if Mr. Croker is not here, tell 'Tod' Sloan I want to see him."

"Mr. Sloan is not a guest here," answered Mr. Cart.

"Then send my card to the Prince of Wales; I know he is here," said the stranger.

"The Prince of Wales?" repeated the clerk.

"Yes," replied McDonald. "I slept with him at the Waldorf-Astoria last night. We are old friends. I came over here a few days ago to buy $100,000 worth of horses for 'Tod' Sloan. I used to play cricket with the Queen."

By this time a policeman had been summoned, and McDonald was being led out of the corridor, when he was seized with a fit. He recovered, and at Twenty-sixth Street and Broadway was taken with another fit. After recovering he was taken to the station, where for a third time he was seized with a fit. An ambulance surgeon took him to Bellevue.

McDonald said he lived at the Waldorf-Astoria, but he is not known there.

CONSTANT COQUELIN AS THE GASCON

Bernhardt Acts Roxane in Rostand's Play for the First Time.

"Cyrano De Bergerac" in French at the Garden Theatre—A Fine Performance of a Great Play—Other Dramatic Topics.

There was another memorable performance of French drama at the Garden Theatre last evening, when Constant Coquelin appeared in the title rôle of "Cyrano de Bergerac" and Sarah Bernhardt took up for the first time the "opposite" rôle of Roxane. The wonderful and lasting beauty of Edmond Rostand's masterwork, the splendid variety and aptness of its imagery, its triumphant blend of romance and humor, of the old and the new, (breathing the breath of a new and potent genius into ancient ideals of glory and honor and self-sacrifice,) were then vividly revealed on the stage in this city for the first time. Presumably, everybody in the audience knew all about the uncommon artistic value of the play beforehand, but, nevertheless, its first performance here in the original was something of a revelation to those who had not seen it in Paris.

The richly varied eloquence, finish, technical dexterity, emotional sincerity, artistic reticence, of Coquelin's portrayal of the Gascon hero are fairly surprising even to the spectator who has seen this versatile actor in many other rôles of the classic, romantic, and modern drama. The spirit of them all seems mingled in "Cyrano," and the title rôle calls into play all the skill of the actor.

The charms of Coquelin's acting, of course, are innumerable, but the chief charm in this and other poetical plays is found in his conscientious subjection of his own personality and his vast technical skill to the interpretation of the poet. There are many things the actor might do in portraying Cyrano to heighten the purely theatrical effect, (some that would seem to a lesser artist obviously the right things to do,) which he avoids for the sake of making the poem, both the spirit and the form of it, dominate in the representation over the virtuosity of the interpreter.

No extended comparison of his portrayal with Richard Mansfield's, which is still a fine and moving piece of acting, is called for this morning. Both are great actors, in relation to the other actors of their epoch, and in many rôles, especially those calling for the expression of tragic power and the strong play of passion, Mansfield is Coquelin's superior. But Coquelin's portrayal of Rostand's Gascon will be more esteemed by those persons who best comprehend and most highly value the drama as a work of literary art.

This, too, will not be simply because "Cyrano de Bergerac," like any other great French poetical drama, cannot be adequately translated into English, and must always remain immeasurably superior in the original, but because the French player so faithfully holds himself and his art subject to the work they are employed to interpret.

When Mansfield's Cyrano assailed de Guiche in the dark street, who thought of the meaning of the wild and fanciful words he uttered so much as of the splendid audacity and brilliant triumph of the actor's manner of utterance and his "business"? In the death scene, too, the extraordinary virtuosity of Mansfield counted for much more than the rather nerveless English verse into which Rostand's poetry had been translated.

When the appreciative spectator left the theatre after seeing Mansfield as Cyrano he said: "What a great actor Mansfield is!" After seeing Coquelin's Cyrano in the original play one must feel, more than ever before, what a really great dramatic poet Rostand is.

There are scenes, however, in which the mere technique of Coquelin counts for much more than that of Mansfield ever counted in this play. These include the whole of the first act, in which Coquelin's diction, personal grace, faultless sense of proportion, and comic genius are all delightfully manifested. He makes not nearly as much as Mansfield did, pictorially speaking, of that audacious duel to the obbligato of an ex tempore ballade, but he leaves the audience much more strongly impressed with the actual dramatic content of the scene than the English-speaking actor did.

The "Non Merci" speech which, of course, lost much of its poetic vitality in the English version, with its inevitable "No, Thank You" and the "Cadets of Gascony," and all similar passages derive great benefit in the performance from the sympathetic and elegant touch of Coquelin. Mansfield resorted to the odd device of delivering the English words with a French manner, if not almost a French accent, but that was always an expedient of doubtful value.

One remembers Coquelin's Cyrano as a perfect entity. The actor strives for no "points" and secures in every scene the illusion of nature—nature idealized and uplifted. But as you reflect upon the portrayal, attempting to reduce it to its elements, there come crowding each other in the mind remembrance of countless felicities of expression.

The fire and grace of the "Gascon" song, the dignity, humor, pathos, and Gasconade so happily combined in the first scene with Christian; the play of features in that remarkable interview with Roxane while the Duenna is devouring the cake and reading the verses on the paper bags; the exquisite tenderness of the "Ecoutez, les Gascons"—but to thus enumerate is not to make the merit of the work clearer.

The soul of Cyrano, as Rostand expresses it, has entered the body of Coquelin. The French actor is the producer of this play as was the first impersonator of the hero. He was his Cyrano we were introduced to last night in more senses than one. Therefore, the general "business" was of peculiar interest. This was chiefly novel in the extreme slowness of the tempo in the ensemble scenes at the opening of the play.

Every word of the text spoken by the minor personages received its full value. As a general thing, the illustrative "business" is less elaborate than we have been accustomed to. In some scenes, however, as in the assembling of the cadets at Ragueneau's and the proceedings in camp, there is a deal of "comic business" which seems rather juvenile, but is doubtless not out of place.

Roxane is not a heroine with whom the spectator sympathizes, and therein lies the dramatic weakness of "Cyrano de Bergerac." The poet amply and clearly explains her delusion about Christian, but that makes no difference. Such explanations do not suffice. We feel that her heart should tell her the truth. Have not the poets of all the ages taught us that the instinctive knowledge of a woman's heart is unerring?

It will take a greater than Edmond Rostand to set aside that teaching now. But probably Rostand accepts the teaching. He is surely not going to controvert so desirable a theory. Roxane is lovely, however, if she is not sympathetic, a very woman in some of her impulses and inconsistencies, piquant, persistent, and capable of self-sacrifice, and we must take her for what she is. Certainly she has never before seemed worth so much as now.

To be sure, one who had never seen Mme. Bernhardt except in this rôle would know only by hearsay that she is the greatest living actress. She does not force the effect of a single passage. She touches every trait of the character lightly and with due sympathy, and is very charming, from her first entrance in the Hotel de Bourgogne, where, from under the huge, pink-lined hood of her cape, she watches intently and with manifest glee the triumph of her Gascon cousin, to the pathetic last episode.

Her extraordinary emotional skill is exerted to some purpose in the scene of the death of Christian, and she acts the passages immediately preceding that episode, especially the farewell to her lover, delightfully.

In the other two episodes, the rendezvous with Cyrano at Ragueneau's, and the balcony scene, she misses no note which belongs to the situation, of course, but surely she strikes no new note and does not reveal any hitherto unsuspected depths in the character of Rostand's heroine. She is lovely and graceful, as tender as need be; buoyant enough in the visit to the camp, and it is always a delight to see her and hear her voice.

No other rôle was acted in a manner to command very enthusiastic commendation, though there was appreciable merit in the Duenna of Mme. Patry and the Christian of M. Deneubourg was as vivacious and interesting, probably, as that youth can ever be made.

This impersonation was distinctly good, in fact, in the scene of defiance in the pastry cook's shop, and in the parting with Cyrano. As a whole, however, the representation, apart from the acting of the two stars, was capable, but not brilliant.

The scenic outfit was adequate, but not as elaborate and handsome as that Mr. Mansfield gave to the play, while the management of the lights and the thousand-and-one little details of mechanical stage business, which are done best when the spectator does not realize that they are done at all, were not looked after nearly as well as they were in "L'Aiglon." In fact, it was clearly a Porte St. Martin and not a Théâtre Bernhardt production.

The audience was large, but there was no such crowd as at the opening of the engagement, and there were a few vacant seats here and there in remote parts of the house. But in quality the audience was exceptional. Fashionable society was largely and brilliantly represented, and there were many men and women of some note in the house whom one does not habitually see at theatrical first nights.

Naturally such an audience gave gratifying evidence, now and then, of its intelligence. The performance was followed with the closest attention, and the applause was well timed and generous, though never overdone. The two great actors were recalled with abundant enthusiasm, and the uncommon skill and beauty of their acting were thoroughly comprehended, but not overpraised. This is most rare.

"JANICE MEREDITH."

Mary Mannering Scores a Success at Wallack's Theatre.

Mary Mannering made her bow as a star in New York, and "Janice Meredith" had its first presentation as a play at Wallack's Theatre last evening. Both scored rather more than an ordinary success, for the evening, at least, due to the joint popularity of the actress and the book from which the play was made. This was done in the presence of something rather different from the ordinary first night audience, one of the most persistent atoms of these "first nighters" declaring it to be "the most distinguished audience ever assembled within the walls of Wallack's." Society of the Horse Show set was not so markedly in evidence, yet the costumes of the many ladies were rich and elegant in the extreme. It was the men that gave an air of distinction to the house, for art, literature, the bench, the bar, the pulpit, and men powerful in the world of finance, were in evidence throughout the audience that filled every seat and all available standing places in the theatre.

Were success to be wholly measured by applause, then Miss Mannering's was unbounded. But that applause, so persistent, so long continued, and the shower of bouquets that was sent flying to the stage after being torn from women's costumes, was the enthusiasm of personal friends carried to an extreme at each fall of the curtain. Miss Mannering as the country girl, shrewd, pert, loyal to her lover and her country, was certainly a lovely and lovable heyden, who fairly earned a meed of praise for a performance that—once the nervousness in the first act had passed—was surely all that the limitations of the play and the character would permit. There was certainly nothing marvelous, phenomenal, or that called for such boundless enthusiasm as was shown for the star last night. It told rather of the warm place the actress has in the hearts of her friends. Mary Mannering as a simple member of the Lyceum Theatre stock company had played fully as well—probably better from the rather arctic standpoint of the critic. She is so good an actress, so sensible a woman, however, that she thoroughly appreciated the fact that her friends had rallied to see that no one should have a more encouraging send-off in her artistic career than she. This statement of fact is due to those people who early in the production wondered that "so much fuss should be made over so trifling a play." Last night it was the actress, and not the play that was the thing.

It was as fair a condensation of the long story as could be expected, perhaps. Its pictures are many and striking, even though theatricalism dominated the realism and the ubiquitous bondman-hero was an utterly impossible character outside of the old melodrama with its "Protean" characters. This bondman was admirably played by Robert Drouet, who restrained himself so well when self-restraint was needed as to fairly earn the plaudits his work received. He was manly at all times, curbed bombastics as much as possible, and was just the sort of lover a romantic, roguish, and pretty woman like Janice might be expected to lose her heart to and risk her freedom, even her life, for. A splendid foil was Burr McIntosh, first as the country lout, later the seasoned soldier. Philemon, who finally sacrificed himself for Janice after an interview with her in the wrecked house at Yorktown, that was one of the most effective and finely acted scenes in the entire production. A. S. Lipman as Lord Clowes, George Backus as Lieut. Mowbray, and R. R. Neal in the trifling part of the silent sentinel all acquitted themselves noteworthily, the balance of the cast being also in good hands. Vivian Bernard in the trifling part of a negro servant did a bit of character work which met with the complete approval of the audience.

Janice Meredith is, however, so much of a one-part play that the honors fell to the star almost entirely. Ill at ease as she was in the opening act, her giddy girlishness was in a forced and unnatural key that will be missed in future presentations in all probability. She failed to do herself justice and the chattered compliments were manifestly perfunctory and only hopeful. More at ease in the second act, she began to catch the true spirit of the volatile character, and in the other two acts scored the success her friends had hoped for her, even though she so missed the object aimed at in the first two acts. With fewer overenthusiastic friends to embarrass her in future appearances Miss Mannering is certain to acquit herself more creditably and find a financial if not a wholly artistic success in her first adventure as a star.

The scenery, all but the first set painted by Voegtlin, was admirably designed and painted, though all was of the simplest and of an almost sombre type, save the opening scene. That, by Gros, the farmyard at Greenwood, was bright in color and effective even though there seemed an excessive of hollyhocks in the pathway beyond the smokehouse.

EDNA MAY BEGINS HER TOUR.

"The Girl from Up There" Opens to Large House at Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Edna May made her first appearance as a star tonight at the National Theatre, under the direction of Charles Frohman, in what is called a musical comedy, with the title of "The Girl From Up There." About everybody in Washington with the play-going habit was present to see this first presentation, and to enjoy the fun which was incidental to the highly improbable adventures of a young lady who has been on cold storage at the North Pole for 500 years to be released by electricity, only to be subjected to many trials, including some second act specialties of venerable but amusing quality.

Virginia Earle won the honor of a triple recall for a song in the second act. Miss May, who was well received, was provided with a Quaker garb in one scene that afforded her an opportunity to reappear in a costume that recalled her triumph as the Salvation Army lassie in "The Belle of New York."

It is a play of many comedians and little comedy. But it proved to be a means of entertainment that won the frequent and hearty applause of a large audience.

Last Week of English Opera.

The last week of the season of grand opera in English began at the Metropolitan Opera House last night. The offering of the managers was Verdi's time-honored "Il Trovatore." The cast enlisted the services of Miss Phoebe Strakosch as Leonora; Miss Louise Meisslinger as Azucena, Mr. Joseph Sheehan as Manrico, and Mr. Winfred Goff as the Count di Luna. The performance presented no new features of more than passing interest. Miss Strakosch, as the heroine, fulfilled the promise of her early performances with this company. It was then noted in this place that she had a good voice, a poor vocal method, and an abundance of dramatic earnestness, together with useful stage experience. Her performance of Leonora was praiseworthy along the lines herein indicated. She has proved, as we expected she would, to be one of the most useful and enduring members of the company.

Miss Meisslinger's interpretation of Azucena is strenuous and at times strident, but it is not without a certain rude authority and has moments of influence. Mr. Sheehan's fine voice is well suited to the music of Manrico, and for those who regard the emission of the high C in "Di Quella Pira" as essential to success in this rôle he must always be satisfying. Mr. Goff is still an inexperienced singer, though it can be said for him that he tries very hard.

People's Symphony Concerts.

Under the title of People's Symphony Concerts, a series of musical entertainments will be given at the Cooper Institute Hall on Friday evenings at 8:15. The object of these concerts is to enable persons of small means to hear some of the masterworks of the orchestral composers at low rates. The prices have been fixed on a scale which puts the concerts within the reach of the working people. They no doubt will be glad to take advantage of this opportunity to enjoy an art which is too exclusively the pleasure of the rich. The programme for the first concert, which will be given on Friday night of this week, is as follows: Bach's suite in D major, airs from Handel's "Judas Maccabaeus" and "Semele," three short pieces for solo 'cello by Rameau Pergolesi, and Leclair, and Haydn's D major symphony, No. 2, of the London series. The conductor will be F. X. Arens, the vocalist Alfred E. Holmes, and the 'cellist Carl Grinauer.

THEATRES AND MUSIC HALLS.

KOSTER & BIAL'S.—The programme arranged this week is one of much merit and interest.

HARLEM OPERA HOUSE.—The Empire Theatre Company made its reappearance last evening in "Lord and Lady Algy."

DEWEY THEARTE.—The Bon Ton Burlesquers, with their sketch "The Homely Twins" and an excellent olio, constituted the entertainment.

MURRAY HILL THEATRE.—"The Grey Mare," a comedy by Sims and Raleigh, which was offered yesterday, received the hearty approval of two large audiences.

AMERICAN THEATRE.—"Hands Across the Sea" was revived last evening. It is some years since this sensational English melodrama, by Henry Pettitt, has been seen in this city, and therefore, to many, last night it was a new production.

HURTIG & SEAMON'S MUSIC HALL.—A long and varied programme and an excellent and at times brilliant vaudeville performance was the entertainment provided the patrons of this Harlem music hall last evening by an organization known as the Hopkins Trans-Oceanic's Star Specialty Company.

NEW YORK THEATRE.—There were music and comedy a plenty at this house last evening, with many well-known artists in the programme. Miss Violet Friend, who made her début, is an artiste of ability and has a fair voice. The other members on the bill were Emma Carus and Louise Beaudet, and Pat Rooney and Mayme Gehrue. The ballet "Meeting of the Nations" is retained.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—In "The Rebel" the west side theatregoers were treated to an excellent performance. Among Andrew Mack's other plays, which prove attractive at all times, there probably is not one that exceeds his present play in general popularity. This fact was accentuated last night by the greeting which the audience tendered Mr. Mack and those who interpreted the leading rôles.

PROCTOR'S PALACE.—McIntyre and Heath, the negro minstrels, in their skit "On Guard," and Mark Sullivan, in his imitations, were the features. The long bill also included Elizabeth Murray, new songs and specialties; Ed Latell, musical humorist; Frances Koppler, juvenile artiste; Conway and Leland, the one-legged acrobatic grotesques; Charles Ulrick, unique foot juggler; Mr. and Mrs. Augustin Neuville, in a new comedietta, and Maxwell and Dudley, singing sketch.

PROCTOR'S TWENTY-THIRD STREET THEATRE.—Della Fox is in her final week at this house. John W. Albaugh, Jr., assisted by his stock company, presented a dramatic sketch called "Trenton." The specialties were George Evans, in new songs; Les Dumonds, Parisian singing novelty; Louise Gunning, the Scotch balladist, in kilts and tartatans; Review Comedy Four, burlesque quartet; Coakley and Husted, singing and dancing sketch, and a dozen other vaudeville features.

KEITH'S UNION SQUARE THEATRE.—The entertainment provided yesterday was thoroughly in keeping with the high standard set and maintained at this theatre. J. H. Dodson and company presented, with all the success that marked its first appearance in this city, "Richelieu's Stratagem," a clever sketch, in which Mr. Dodson's ability finds wide latitude. Dividing honors with him were the Rossow Midgets, McAvoy and May, Fred V. Bowers, Linton and McIntyre, Mme. Marie Duma, and numerous others.

PROCTOR'S ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIFTH STREET THEATRE.—Harlem vaudeville patrons found a capital programme yesterday, which had for new headliners Idalene Cotton and Nick Long in their character and dialect farce, "Managerial Troubles"; Walter Leroy and Florence Clayton (their last week) in "Hogan of the Hansom"; Three Lukens Brothers, bar performers; Fisher and Carroll, the Irish comedians; Horace Goldin, clever magician; Reed's bull terriers, acrobatic canines; Billy Link, black-faced jester; Adele Purvis Onri on the revolving globes, and Edwards, Kernell, and Williams, comedy trio.

PROCTOR'S FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE.—The novelty offered at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre this week consists of M. Jean Marcel's living pictures, which are reproductions of bas-reliefs, groups, marble statuary, and tableaus. The pictures are poised by twenty-five people, and the studies are produced differently from anything in the line of living pictures ever seen here before. The light and scenic effect on some of the pictures were beautiful, and they were all enthusiastically received. They number ten in all, and are exhibited under the following titles: "And My Corn," "Farewell," "Phrosine and Melidor," "The First Funeral," "The Angelus," "Separation of Achilla and Briseis," "The Sailor's Return," "Apollo's Song to the Shepherds," "Love's Messenger," and "Forward." The remaining part of the entertainment included Milton and Dolly Nobles in their sketch, entitled "Why Walker Reformed;" the Russell Brothers, Miss Alice Pierce, Charles Coburn, the Juggling Johnsons, Lew Sully, and many more.

BILLIARDISTS' FINE PLAY.

Hendrick and Schmitt Won in Amateurs' Class B Tourney After Splendid Games.

John A. Hendrick of this city and Charles G. Schmitt of Chicago were the winners in the two games of the National Class B billiard tournament played yesterday at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club. Mr. Hendrick defeated William Paige of Boston, by a score of 300 to 214 in the afternoon, and Mr. Schmitt won easily from Frank Billiter, the Minneapolis champion, in the evening. The score of the latter game was 300 to 198.

The afternoon game was one of the most interesting of the series. It brought Mr. Hendrick into the tournament for the first time, and he surprised even his friends by running out the game with an average of 6 2-3 points and a high run of 48, the second best so far recorded in the tourney. At the outset both men played splendidly, the New Yorker running up a string of 19 buttons in his second inning, and the Bostonian, by close billiards, clicking off 32 caroms his first time at the table. For the next five innings, however, both fell into cut-throat tactics, playing so "safe" against each other than Mr. Paige ran up a series of zeros, and Mr. Hendrick scored only 6 points in the five innings. In the twelfth inning both men ran into double figures, Mr. Hendrick making a string of 23 points and his opponent 16. This left the score 79 to 66 in the New Yorker's favor.

Two innings later came Mr. Hendrick's splendid run of 48. It was a beautiful exhibition of all-around play, and for a time it looked as though A. D. Ferguson's record run of 56, which was made Friday afternoon, would be exceeded. But at Mr. Hendrick's forty-ninth shot the balls were left in a very difficult position, and he was compelled to try a three-cushion carom. He missed by a hair's-breadth. From this point on, however, the game was never in doubt, the New York man always having a safe lead. He brought the game to an end in the forty-fifth inning with an unfinished run of 17. The scores follow, the play being at 14-inch balk-line, with the anchor nurse allowed:

Hendrick—3 19 8 12 10 0 1 5 0 0 0 2 3 0 4 8 12 8 1 0 0 0 0 0 0 3 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 14 5 7 9 18 25 0 0 13 0 0 1 3 3 9 17. Total, 300; average, 6 30-45; high runs, 48, 30, 25, and 23.

Paige—3 7 2 32 0 0 0 0 0 5 1 16 6 2 7 2 6 1 3 0 0 7 3 0 0 2 2 1 1 26 0 11 14 7 2 2 2 1 0 0 33 1 0 0 9. Total, 214; average, 4 38-44; high runs, 33, 32, and 26.

Rather a close contest had been looked for in the evening game, which brought together the two Western experts, Messrs. Schmitt and Billiter, but the Chicago man played all around his opponent, leading him by at least 100 points at all times after the twentieth inning. Mr. Schmitt played, until the last few of the fifty-one innings, one of the most remarkable games yet witnessed in a Class B tournament. By splendid double-figure runs, including three of 11, one of 14, and one of 21 points, he passed the hundred mark in the eleventh inning, his average at that stage being 10 5-11. His play was near perfection, and his slow draws were marvels of careful execution. His open table work also, though seldom indulged in, was almost equally brilliant. Two difficult bank shots the width of the table were faultlessly judged, and a long massé shot in the thirty-second inning brought rounds of applause from the gallery. Mr. Billiter played excellent billiards, but he is not at his best with a close-playing opponent like the young Chicagoan. He was unfortunate in getting bad leaves during the first half of the game, and this put him at a discouraging distance behind his opponent. In the latter part of the game he took a splendid brace, and gave some pretty exhibitions of open table work, his left-handed shots being especially brilliant. At no time, however, was he able to nurse the balls for the long breaks which were frequently scored by the Chicago man. Schmitt's play rather fell off in the latter part, due plainly to his nervous desire to break his own record for the average. A long jump shot from a bad line-up which he made in the forty-seventh inning, however, was one of the most sensational plays yet seen in the tournament. The scores:

Schmitt—11 11 0 11 13 1 2 0 14 21 17 2 7 0 1 8 0 6 5 12 1 2 5 3 0 3 0 11 0 1 20 15 1 0 2 2 0 11 0 0 10 2 0 15 4 0 21 9 4 2 4. Total, 300; average, 5 45-51; high runs, 30, 21, and 21.

Billiter—0 0 3 0 11 0 0 0 0 0 1 0 4 10 3 2 0 0 3 5 0 0 0 13 4 0 2 15 1 0 0 11 0 2 2 0 5 4 3 13 1 8 3 2 2 15 1 9 0 5 0 5. Total, 198; average, 3 48-50; high run, 19.

Two more games of the final round will be played to-day. W. W. Kellog of Chicago meets William Paige of Boston this afternoon, and Albert G. Cutler, the other Boston player, will be matched against Frank Billiter to-night. The games will be called at 3 and 8:30 o'clock.

NEW YORK PRESBYTERY'S VOTE

Revision of Faith Ballots Recounted—Not a Tie—Call for Pan-Presbyterian Congress.

The New York Presbytery held its regular monthly meeting yesterday afternoon in the First Church Chapel, Eleventh Street and Fifth Avenue, with the Rev. David G. Wylie in the chair as Moderator.

In the interval between the last meeting of the Presbytery and the meeting of yesterday the votes on the revision of the Confession of Faith were recounted, and it was found that the vote was not a tie, as was announced at the time it was recorded, but stood 75 to 72 against the revision. nineteen ministers and fifty-six Elders voted against the revision, and fifty-nine ministers and thirteen elders voted for it.

The Rev. Richard R. Wightman, at his own request received a letter of dismission from the Church and the ministry. He is going into business life, and desired to be relieved from his ministerial duties. Mr. Wightman said that he expected to preach in future whenever he got the opportunity as a layman. He may connect himself with some other denomination.

The following committee on the Twentieth Century Fund was appointed: The Rev. George T. Purves, D. D., Chairman; the Rev. John Balcom Shaw, the Rev. Howard Duffield, the Rev. Agnew Johnston, and Elders James Yearance, Thomas Cochrane, and William E. Steiger. The object of this fund is to raise money for the relief of the debts of churches.

The Rev. Frank E. Kavanagh of University Heights, on account of inability to agree with some of the doctrines of the Church, was dropped from the roll, at his own request.

A letter was read from the Presbytery at Aberdeen, S. D., suggesting a Pan-Presbyterian congress for the purpose of getting the opinion of the entire Church on the question of revising the Confession of Faith, but no action was taken.

The Presbytery called special attention to the meeting for preachers and elders to be held at the Brick Presbyterian Church from 4 to 6 and 7 to 10 o'clock P. M. Dec. 31, and urged all the ministers and elders in the city to be present. From there they will all go to the First Presbyterian Church for the "watch night" meeting.

TELEPHONE AVERTS ROBBERY.

Quick-Witted Servant, LineMen Happily Present, and Miss "Hello Central" Save Dimond Broker's Jewels.

Quick work by means of the telephone resulted in the capture of a negro in the house of Simon Frankel, a diamond broker at 117 East Seventy-first Street, yesterday afternoon. The man was detected by Mary Noonan, who, with another servant and Mrs. Frankel, were the only persons in the house. She saw the negro rummaging in a closet on the top floor, but she got away without attracting his attention and notified the others. They crept out of doors and watched the house to see that the man did not get away.

Linemen were just at that moment working on some telephone wires in the rear yard. The situation was explained to them in a few words, and they obtained with their instruments almost instant communication with Mr. Frankel at his office at 68 Nassau Street. Miss "Hellocentral" was alive to the exigencies of the case, and at once switched Mr. Frankel to the Police Headquarters line.

There never is a question of "busy" or "don't answer" on the police private telephone system, and so it happened that in less than five minutes from the time the negro was first discovered, Detectives Boyle and Maxon were running from the East Sixty-seventh Street Police Station to the Frankel home, and they caught the man still searching in the same closet. They had a fight with him, but soon threw him to the floor and handcuffed him.

A diamond and pearl pin, a collection of rare foreign coins, a gold pencil case, a gold breastpin, and some other articles of jewelry, all the property of the Frankels, were found in the negro's pockets when he was searched, and upon going through the house the bureau drawers on the top floor were found to have been thoroughly ransacked.

Police Captain Brown, at the station house, complimented Mary Noonan highly on her courage in retiring without screaming and on her good judgment in calling upon the linemen to telephone.

The prisoner is Charles Smith, twenty years old, a barber of 324 West Thirty-seventh Street. He had nothing to say and was locked up on a charge of burglary.

VENEZUELANS BUYING STEEL.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 10.—Rudolf Dolge, Special Commissioner of the National Association of Manufacturers to Venezuela, reached Philadelphia to-day, accompanied by Dr. Alberto Smith, formerly Minister of Public Works of Venezuela. Both are here to place contracts for structural steel and other building material to be used in rebuilding the portion of Caracas destroyed by an earthquake Oct. 29. Among the contracts being placed are some for government buildings and others for large business houses.

The steel structural architecture has been accepted in that country for large buildings, it being found that such a construction is less affected by earthquakes. Fully one-third of the houses in Caracas were damaged or destroyed by the recent earthquake, and in the district were several with steel frames, and all of them escaped damage. Dr. Smith is purchasing the material for fourteen buildings, and will take back with him the material and workmen from the United States as soon as possible.

A large number of heads of departments were

BASEBALL MEETING ON

First Gathering of Club Managers Was Held Last Night.

LEAGUE WILL CONVENE TO-DAY

Prospect of Conflict with New American Association Interests Club Managers.

Rumors flew backward and forward in a most confusing manner before and during the meeting last night of the Board of Arbitration of the National Baseball League in the Fifth Avenue Hotel. The many reports circulated helped greatly in thickening the mystery that invariably surrounds the League's and committee's proceedings, but for all the secrecy, the facts were apparent that Ban Johnson's American Baseball League was a disturbing element, and that the promoters of professional baseball were worried concerning Johnson's claims.

An attempt was made to treat the American League as simply empty talk, but, as if arrangements had been made in anticipation of the older association taking that stand, the announcement came early in the day that in the morning a lease of the two baseball parks in Detroit for ten years had been signed by the owners of the American League franchise in favor of a lawyer representing the holders of a franchise from an entirely new baseball league, the plan announced being to have the American and the new league alternate with local dates.

According to the statements made concerning the new organization, George W. Burnham of Detroit will be Vice President and manager of the new league, which is to absorb the Inter-State league, and include clubs in Detroit, Grand Rapids, Toledo, Louisville, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Kansas City, and either Indianapolis or Buffalo. The National League managers were undecided whether to consider the newest baseball organization a part of Johnson's old scheme or an additional menace to the old order of baseball management. From all indications, however, they will be relieved when Johnson makes plain his intentions and desires, and the old league is enabled to ascertain the real strength of the Johnson schemes.

Another matter that was talked of was the probable resignation of President N. E. Young. It was said that he would make way for A. G. Spalding. President Young early set that rumor at rest by declaring that he had no idea of resigning. A probable change in the umpire system and other alterations in the rules were discussed, but the arrivals of the members of the Board of Arbitration and league club managers furnished the only tangible facts that baseball enthusiasts could find until late in the evening.

Some of the baseball promoters who came in the afternoon were James A. Hart of Chicago, "Barney" Dreyfus of Pittsburg, Frank and Stanley Robison of St. Louis, John I. Rogers of Philadelphia, John T. Benot of Cincinnati, President N. E. Young of Washington, Soden, Conant, and Billings of Boston; "Bid" McPhee, manager of the Cincinnati Club, and Thomas Loftus, manager of the Chicago Club. Gus Abell, Ned Hanlon, and Charles Ebbetts of Brooklyn and F. K. Knowles of New York were in evidence early.

The Board of Arbitration met at 9 o'clock in the evening, but the session was a short one, and when the adjournment was reached the members present stated that only a few minor cases of complaints concerning league matters had been considered. After the meeting the baseball people dropped business until the league meeting which will be called at 11 o'clock this morning, most of them going to see the six-day bicycle race on the invitation of P. H. Powers.

A number of managers of clubs were present, and by agreement there will be a meeting of these some time to-day, for the purpose of trading, exchanging, and buying players' contracts. George Davis of the New York Club, who is anxious to strengthen his team, proposed this meeting. Loftus of Chicago, McPhee of Cincinnati, Selee of Boston, and others agreed to it.

The players will ask for a conference with the League managers to-day, and it is possible that there may be a serious hitch if the League does not listen to their application for a hearing. Few have as yet signed contracts, as they wish to make new terms. Clark Griffith, a player on the Chicago team, was responsible for the statement that unless the League did hear the demand of the Players' Committee today, the players would find a way to make trouble.

This committee, composed of Jennings of Brooklyn, Zimmer of Pittsburg, and Harry Taylor, the organization's counsel, will wait on the magnates and present the players' claims relative to the "farming out" and salary questions. T. J. Hickey and George Tebeau, representing the Western Association, are here to press the claims of that association for the territory left open in St. Paul, Kansas City, and Minneapolis by the American League.

About the only deal talked of is one between New York and Pittsburg, by which Doyle may be exchanged for Williams.

The annual meeting of the Pittsburg Baseball Club is scheduled to take place to-day in Jersey City. A meeting of the Brooklyn Club will be held in Jersey City later in the week.

Banquet to Football Champions.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 10.— The members of the Yale 'Varsity football team were guests yesterday at a complimentary banquet given by the University Club in their new dining hall to-night, about 200 undergraduate members of the club and guests being present. Walter Camp spoke, as did Capt. Gordon Brown of the champion team, George Adee, '95; George S. Stillman, and others. The occasion also was made the formal opening of the new dining hall and annex of the club. The 'Varsity football team will meet to-morrow evening for its postponed election of a Captain for next year. There still seems to be much doubt as to the man for the place. Intimate friends of Wear and Stillman state that neither man will consent to return to Yale for graduate work and to captain the team, though the undergraduates are very anxious to have Stillman do so. Hale's stock as a candidate has gone up lately, and he may be elected. Sharpe and Gould are also regarded as likely men.

RACES BY SPEEDWAY STARS.

Amateur Drivers Behind Noted Horses Engaged in Some Fast Brushes.

There was a very small but very select gathering of fast steppers on the upper stretch of the Harlem River Speedway yesterday afternoon, who for a couple of hours before dusk made things very lively. For so few horses it was by far the best afternoon's sport witnessed this Fall, for without a single exception every horse present had a good mark and was well known to harness horsemen. This, coupled with the fact that there were many old scores to settle and that the road was clear of all vehicles that might interfere, offered conditions that were too tempting to be overlooked.

Among the first of the favorites to arrive was the handsome chestnut pacer Hontas Crooke, 2:09, driven by his owner, C. K. G. Billings of Chicago. Following close behind were three other stars from Mr. Billings's stable—Ellert, 2:11, driven by J. F. Meagher; Major Greer, in charge of "Doc" Tanner, and Aggie Medium, driven by W. G. McCrea. This string alone would have furnished good sport, but there were several opponents ready for a go, and the first brush of note was between Coxey, driven by Capt. McDonald, and Hontas Crooke. For the first quarter it was a good race, and Coxey hung on to his opponent well, but after that point had been passed the pace was too fast for Coxey, who fell behind and was beaten by a length. Hattie Walters's 2:22¼, driven by George Coleman, did some fast work, but tried just one brush too many, and fell a victim to the speed of Salient, driven by Charles Weiland, who won easily. E. E. Smathers, driving Queen Wilkes, 2:12, who has not done very much work this Fall, was a prominent factor in the sport, and had several very pretty tilts with Pilot Evans, driven by George Spear. On the start Pilot Evans proved himself quickest in getting away in each instance, but was not fast enough for his opponent, who in two brushes beat him out by more than an open length. While the sport was at its height Nathan Straus appeared on the stretch, driving the King of the Speedway Cobwebs, 2:12, who was in prime condition.

"I need a good beating to warm me up. Is there anybody here to give me a brush?" shouted Mr. Straus to some friends on the sidewalk.

"Yes, there are several, so look out for yourself," was the response, and Mr. Straus drove up the stretch, where he met Mr. Billings driving Hontas Crooke, and at once challenged him. It was accepted and the horses started, Cobwebs carrying Hontas Crooke to a break. Cobwebs continued on, and was picked up by Ellert, 2:11, who had passed before Cobwebs got fairly started. The pace was a furious one, but Cobwebs was equal to the occasion, and would probably have won had the race been longer. As it was, Ellert won by a very narrow margin. Mr. Straus also took the reins behind his world-famous pacer, Robert J., 2:01½, by Hartford, but did not speed him. About the only four-cornered brush of the afternoon was between Hontas Crooke, 2:09; Ellert, 2:11; Aggie Medium, and Rival, driven by John F. Cockerill. All got away on fairly even terms after several false starts, Hontas Crooke taking the lead at a jump, followed by Ellert and Rival. They covered the first quarter in this order, Aggie Medium hanging behind, but holding the bunch with apparent ease. On the stretch it looked like a dead heat between Hontas Crooke and Ellert, and they were receiving all the attention, when Aggie Medium suddenly made a spurt that carried her by her opponents as though they were standing still, and across the finish line a half length in front of Hontas Crooke, who succeeded in gaining a trifling lead over Ellert, who was lapped by Rival.

Hattie Walters carried Coxey to a break, and Royal Anne, 2:20, a brown trotter, driven by M. Fitzpatrick, distanced Sprightly. Dr. Gill was on the road with Parkville Prince, 2:13¾, and E. R. Jarvis gave Teto, 2:14½, several warming jogs. A brush that will prove of great interest to frequenters of the Speedway has been arranged for to-morrow afternoon between Alice Barnes, 2:11½, the trotting queen of the Speedway, owned by E. E. Smathers, and Fred Gerken's seven-year-old gelding, The Monk, with a mark of 2:08¾, bought by him at the "Old Glory" sale in Madison Square Garden. There is keen rivalry between the two owners, and a hot race is promised.

WORLD'S TURF RECORDS IN 1900.

The Abbot and Cresceus Chief Among the New Champions.

Father Time held his own with a fair share of success against the assaults of performances by both harness and thoroughbred race horses through the season of 1900, and as regards the harness horse, the crop of new world records is light, while the thoroughbreds only reached about the average of new marks. While numerically the records established in the season which is just ending are few, the performances are of unusual brilliancy.

The achievements of the two light-harness horses, both trotters, who are responsible for the encroachment on time stand out conspicuously in turf history of the year The Abbot, recently sold in New York for $26,500, holds three of the new world's records, his one performance of a mile in 2:03¼ giving the fastest mile, and with it the world's gelding record, the race against time, wiping out the preeminence of the mile in 2:03¾ by Alix. The Abbot also drew a wagon one mile against time in 2:05½, thus achieving his third world's best. To the great stallion Cresceus belongs the credit of eclipsing the stallion record of Directum, 2:05¼, which stood for six years, by trotting a mile, also against time, in 2:04. This was the greatest performance of Cresceus, achieved at Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 6, though the horses, in nineteen heats that he trotted, only finished once in time slower than 2:10, the average for eighteen of the heats being 2:05¾. Some other notable performances of the year were Boraima's mile at Lexington in 2:08, equaling the record for a four-year-old gelding, and Lord Derby's mile in 2:07, a new record for a five-year-old gelding, while Lucille, driven by an amateur driver—C. K. G. Billings—covered a mile to wagon at Lexington in 2:07, and the young stallion Charley Herr, five years old, went a mile in 2:07. It is a rather unusual occurrence that all the new harness records are by trotters, no pacer getting into the list of wrold's champions in 1900.

Among the thoroughbreds, Voter, hero of five campaigns in America and England, took the honors as champion sprinter, and earned two world's records, though one of these was equaled later. Ethelbert, whose claim to year's championship is disputed by at least two other horses, still has two world's records over long distances to his credit. The new records made in 1900 are as follows:

RUNAWAY JOCKEY HELD.

F. D. Beard Claims the Boy Brien Is Bonded to Him.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 10.—Melville Brien, a fourteen-year-old jockey, is held at Police Headquarters here on a telegram from F. D. Beard, a race horse owner of Lakewood, N. J., on the complaint that the jockey was bonded to Mr. Beard.

The jockey does not deny that he was bonded to Mr. Beard until he was twenty-one years of age, but says Beard has mistreated him and has no right to hold him.

Sloan Does Not Expect to Ride.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—Jockey "Tod" Sloan declared here yesterday that he does not intend to ask any racing association in this country for a license to ride until he has either cleared himself with the Jockey Club of England or been refused the privilege of riding in England. Sloan says he has decided to stake his future on the treatment he receives when he returns to England next Spring. He said:

"This matter cannot be finally settled until the Jockey Club of England makes a more complete statement, or at least gives official notice of the action it has taken. That will not come probably for several months, or until I apply for a license."

Thoroughbreds Sold Cheap.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 10.—Poor prices prevailed at the Fasig-Tipton sales here to-day, 71 head bringing an average of $103. The consignment of the millionaire breeder, J. B. Haggin, consisting of thirty brood mares, sold for small prices, the owner, at the ringside, seeing the entire lot bring but $2,250. Tenny, D. T. Pulsifer's famous horse, was withdrawn from the sale at the last moment. About 200 local buyers were in attendance. The Breeders' Association did a big business, buying 23 head for $1,037, an average price of $45. Volante, sire of several good winners, was passed out of the ring for want of a bidder. The best prices were as follows:

GIRL ATHLETE HURT IN A GAME.

Rough Basket Ball Put Miss Kirkman Out of Contest.

The young women of the Normal and Teachers Colleges basket ball teams played an unusually rough game yesterday in the return match between the two schools, following the victory of the Teachers College two weeks ago. The fives met in the Normal College gymnasium, and before the contest was finished, Miss Kirkman, Captain of the Normal College team, was knocked down and rendered unconscious. An ambulance was summoned, but the surgeon's aid was not required as the young woman revived and was escorted home by her brother, amid cheers from the students of both colleges at her courage. Prof. William B. Powell of the Manual Training High School of Brooklyn, had been invited by the normal students to referee the contest, but the Teachers College representative, Mrs. Lawrence, refused to permit him to act, alleging that he had been "very biased" in the last match last season between the colleges. T. H. Allen of Columbia University then was selected.

The play was rough from start to finish. Foul after foul was called, and in the thickest of every scrimmage Miss Kirkman, Captain of the Normal team, was conspicuous, to the delight of the spectators, whose college yells rent the air. The Normal players kept the ball constantly in their opponents' territory, and of the three points tallied by the losers not a single one was made from the field, all being on goals thrown from the foul line. The referee did not interfere with the competing team's methods, and the girls, finding that they could do as they liked, the game finally became a scramble. Miss Kirkman was knocked down and had to be carried from the field; Miss Schroeder continued to play in her place for the remaining portion of the game. Then the ambulance gong was heard, and while the crowd filed out into the street it was rumored that the unconscious girl was seriously injured. After about an hour's treatment, however, she recovered and left for her home. The Normal College girls won the game by 12 points to 3. The teams lined up as follows:

Teachers College, 3. Positions.	Normal.
Miss Jenkins	Right forward	Miss Murphy
Miss Beagle (Capt.)	Centre	Miss Schroeder
Miss Seam	Right guard	Miss Guiterman
Miss Henderson	Left guard	Miss Hawley
Miss Wallace

Referee—H. Allen, Columbia University. Umpires—Mr. Haug, Clinton High School. Mr. Younger, Teachers College. Timekeepers—Mr. Kirkman, Clinton High School; Miss Williamson, Teachers College. Goals from fouls—Miss Beagle, 2. Goals from the field—Miss Kirkman, 3; Miss Strickland, 1; Miss Murphy, 2. Final score—Teachers' College, 3 points; Normal College, 12 points. Time—Fifteen-minute halves.

Dr. Bill Shot in Winning Form.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCKAWAY PARK, L. I., Dec. 10.—Some noted trap shooters from New York participated in the tournament of the Oceanic Rod and Gun Club, which was held here to-day. There was almost a gale of wind blowing, but in a thirty-bird match with J. H. Sharkey, Dr. Bill won, killing twenty-six to his opponent's twenty-match with J. H. Sharkey, Dr. Bill won, every event but one in which he competed. A. A. Duke, J. H. Sharkey, Louis T. Muench, B. Snelder, S. Charles, and Thomas H. Diffley were the other high guns of the day.

ON LOCAL BOWLING ALLEYS.

National League Wins from Columbia League in Local Championship Series.

The second games in the local bowling championship series were rolled last night on Starr's alleys, between picked teams from the National Bowling League, representing the lower west side bowlers, and the Columbia Bowling League, representing the upper west side bowling clubs. The down-town team, which was on its home alleys, outrolled the up-town five from start to finish, winning all three games by good margins and scoring three points to none for the up-towners.

The best work for the National League team was done by Fisher, Starr, and Voorhels, all of whom scored over 200. For the Columbia League, Schaeffer was the only man to pass the 200 mark.

A return match of three games will be played at Schlusing's Columbia alleys, the home alleys of the Columbia League, on next Tuesday evening, and the winner of the series of six games will meet the winner of the east side series in a final match for the local supremacy. As the National League team has already won half the series, it needs but one more game to win the west side championship, while the Columbia team must win all three matches on its alleys in order to tie the score. THE ROOT OF THE SUBSIDY SCHEME.

The Ship Subsidy bill now before Congress contains in its preamble the following curious statement: "Whereas, the profitable employment of the surplus productive power of the farms, factories, mines, forests, and fisheries of the United States imperatively demands the increase of foreign commerce, therefore" the annexed subsidies shall be paid.

The subsidies provided for amount to $9,000,000 a year for the next twenty years, or $180,000,000 in all. The professed purpose of paying them is to promote foreign commerce. To this end each vessel is to be paid a certain sum per gross ton per mile for outward and inward bound voyages while engaged in foreign trade. The details of the terms on which the subsidies are to be paid are somewhat complicated, but it is estimated that a steamer of 10,000 tons gross tonnage plying between England and the United States and having a speed of 20 knots can receive, if there is enough to go around, an annual payment of $168,000. This is 5 per cent. on $3,360,000. If we suppose that the scramble for the subsidy is so great that no one steamer can draw more than $100,000, it would still be gaining for its owners interest on $2,000,000 at 5 per cent. If the Treasury were to turn over to the owners of such a vessel $2,000,000 for twenty years without interest, the gratuity to the beneficiaries would be no greater and the cost to the Treasury would be less, for it would get its money back. In the case we have described, there is not the slightest evidence that a pound of freight would be carried that is not now carried, or that the rates of freight now charged would be reduced by one cent. We may add that the owners of vessels of this sort are now making good profits, and their sole known difficulty is in supplying the existing demand.

The plea that the subsidies will promote foreign trade is plainly an erroneous one. But it is claimed that the profits of running vessels with this subsidy will induce Americans to build ships, and thus the American shipbuilding industry will be extended. As a matter of fact—not of theory, but of cold fact—the American shipbuilders can, if they choose, already build ships more cheaply than their foreign competitors. This statement is made by one of their own customers. Mr. JAMES J. HILL, President of the Great Northern Railroad, said in Chicago on Saturday that, having use for ships, he had caused inquiries to be made, and found that he could have them constructed here for $400,000 or $500,000 less for each ship than on the Clyde in Scotland, the seat of the British shipbuilding industry. He declared that if any legislation were needed in the direction of encouragement to shipbuilding, he would prefer that the duty should be taken off the plates that go into ships. At present even that measure is not actually needed, as our steel masters can undersell their rivals on the other side of the Atlantic.

Mr. HILL'S statement really strikes at the root of the whole subsidy scheme. It is at the very best only a waste of the public money. At its worst it is diverting public money for private profit. Neither the owners nor the builders of ships have the slightest claim to contributions from their fellow-citizens. A direct subsidy on wheat raised and exported or on steel and iron, or on buildings, would be just as excusable, and less liable to abuse. Every end sought that it is legitimate to seek, in the subsidy scheme, can be reached through the opening of the ship markets of the world to Americans wishing to buy ships. And according to the explicit statement of Mr. HILL, they would even then be able to buy at home cheaper than anywhere else.

TIME TO BEGIN.

The news that Governor-elect ODELL has experienced a change of heart and will henceforth try to lead an upright political life will be read with deep and serious interest by Democrats who are taking thought about the reorganization of their party.

It makes a difference, a very great difference, whether Mr. ODELL is to be Mr. PLATT'S Governor or in all things his own man. In the thrall of the boss he would necessarily be a bad Governor. His administration would be tainted with scandal and quite unsatisfactory to the people, who would almost certainly turn his party out of power at the next Governorship election, two years hence. Almost any kind of Democrat would be preferred to another term of a Platt Governor, just as in the past the sins of the Democrats have made it possible to nominate and elect any kind of Republican.

But Mr. ODELL'S reported resolve to eschew PLATT and lead a better life completely changes the situation. The Democrats must win the confidence of the people against an opponent who is trying diligently to do the same thing. Every virtuous deed of the Republican administration at Albany, every courageous act that proves its independence of PLATT, will commend it and its party to popular trust and support. In its present condition of disorganization and unworthy leadership the Democratic Party can make no counter-appeal to the people that would not be answered by contemptuous jeers. To that pass the party has been brought by the management of Mr. CROKER and his friend Mr. MURPHY.

If the Democracy of New York is to be dragged out of the ditch where Crokerism has buried it, now is the time to begin the work. There must be radical changes in personnel and purpose, in leadership and method, in the habitual attitude of the party organization and toward men of brains and character in the party who have been excluded from its councils and made ashamed of the name and association. The local organizations up the State can be saved, in the main. The State Committee can be saved, probably. But in New York City there must be a new organization from the ground up if the work is to be made effective. Denunciations of vice, the appointment of purification committees, and the sending of scapegoats into the wilderness will not answer the purpose at all. It must be a new birth altogether in Manhattan, and if the Democrats of Brooklyn are tired of nerveless senility in their leadership and of the contemptible victuals-and-drink basis of their present Tammany alliance, they will bear a hand in the work and help to make it successful. There is no good reason why a Brooklyn Democrat should oppose the effort to make his party respectable.

It is a work of public utility, and in the general interest. Nobody but a shameless partisan Republican will pretend that it is a good thing for the State that the Democratic Party should be so weak and worthless that the party in power can with impunity continue to make the support of its Payns and Aldridges a lien upon the public funds, and from time to time throw nine millions into the bottom of the canals without visible result or satisfactory accounting. A Democratic organization can and should be created in the City of New York that, as the majority party, will stand for good government in the city and will send to State and National Conventions representatives who will not be regarded with distrust and loathing by the other Democrats.

A CANAL FOR SHIPS, OR A CANAL FOR GUNS?

The Administration wishes to construct the Nicaragua Canal in order that ships may pass through it from ocean to ocean. The enemies of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty and of the principle of neutrality wish to construct a canal for forts and guns. They want a chance to exhibit the military power of the United States, a place where we can show our teeth to the nations.

We do not think the American people will care to spend $200,000,000 for a canal and then spend $200,000,000 more for fortifications, guns, and garrisons. They have not yet shown themselves willing to spend money enough for the construction and equipment of coast defenses for their own seaboard. They might disappoint the canal fortification party by declaring themselves content to use the canal as a commercial waterway without going to enormous expense to secure by the building of forts what they can get for nothing under the treaty.

Is there anybody at Washington so dull and credulous as to believe that the persons who are raising all this commotion about fortifications, the Monroe doctrine, and an American canal, really want to see any canal built? Is it not as plain as a pikestaff that they seek to kill the canal by killing the treaty?

THE PROBLEMS OF CITY CHURCHES.

At a conference of the Baptist ministers of Chicago a few days ago a prominent and evidently courageous member made the startling statement that "unless the church becomes a continuous vaudeville it cannot hold its congregation." Chicago experience seems to show that this generalization is warranted by the facts. Concerts, popular lectures, stereopticon entertainments, and the like are gradually taking the place of the customary Sunday services, and still more radical departures from the established order of things are said to be in contemplation. Ministers of the old school view these proceedings with consternation; but the advocates of such methods of holding their flocks together vigorously defend them, and seem to have the best of the argument, since they are keeping their churches full and paying expenses, whereas those who adhere to the old methods find that the number of their empty pews is steadily increasing. It is reported that some of the Chicago churches have adopted the vaudeville idea, but are keeping their arrangements profoundly secret until the second week in January, when a concerted effort for church rehabilitation is to be made.

These are matters concerning which lay opinion cannot be expected to carry much weight. The Baptist ministers are evidently confronted by a condition and not a theory, and are trying to do the best they can. In the spirit of helpfulness, however, we venture to suggest that perhaps the trouble is chiefly in the pulpit, and results from a mistaken idea of the best way in which to make its teachings impressive and effective. It is also possible, from the lay point of view, that congregations find the continuous pastoral relation a trifle monotonous, and that however deep their attachment to their pastors, it is asking a good deal of intelligent people to expect them to be profoundly interested in listening to them week after week and year after year, until every phase of their thought, every habit of expression, every inflection, every oratorical trick, and every characteristic mannerism can be anticipated. The ministers lay great stress upon the superior attractions of the theatres. We will not discuss the questions of taste or of morals involved in this popular preference; but it is pertinent to ask, How attractive would a theatre be to the throngs which visit it if it had but one actor, however clever, and kept one piece on the boards, year in and year out, with the same songs and everything as nearly unchanged as possible? Comparatively few people see a play or any other entertainment twice, unless at long intervals. Even the vaudeville has to change its programme frequently to attract paying audiences. We do not know how the deadly monotony of the pastoral function can very well be avoided, but perhaps the matter is worth thinking of.

To the lay intelligence the difficulty which the churches in large cities are experiencing is perfectly intelligible. Congregations may be divided into two general classes—those who are religious and go to church because it is a place of worship and instruction, and those who maintain a church connection because it is socially good form to do so, but find it difficult to become really interested in the services. For the sheep of the flock who not only do not go astray, but who could not be driven or enticed away, the churches as conducted in the usual manner are perfectly satisfactory; but for sheep possessed of a wandering propensity it looks as if the folds could be made attractive only by means which cannot fail to be distasteful to the devout. The second phase of the difficulty is that the church accommodations exceed the requirements of the devout by about as 16 to 1, and that fixed charges and running expenses can be met only by attracting and holding large and liberal congregations, which must be attracted and held by other means than the devout are likely to find edifying. That every one should attend church regularly and devoutly may be true enough; but that the masses do not, and will not under present conditions, is sufficiently obvious to be extremely disquieting to those who have the welfare of the church and of the human race at heart. What will bring the irreligious within the good influences of church association and keep them there is so different from what those with pronounced religious tastes and tendencies consider legitimate church work that the conscientious minister is often forced to decide whether he shall make the spiritual or the temporal welfare of his church a first consideration. It is a hard choice in most cases, no doubt, but it seems to be the one which is forced upon the Baptist denomination in Chicago, as, indeed, it is to a greater or less extent upon Protestant churches generally in all large cities. The logical solution of the problem would seem to be to make the churches as attractive as possible, and maintain within them a nucleus of holiness which, always sufficiently in evidence to make its influence felt, need not, and perhaps should not, interfere with anything innocent and proper which will attract those who are needed to fill the pews and help swell the church revenues. This, at least, is a business view of the question, and the modern city church has to be managed on business principles.

There is undoubtedly much sense in the suggestion by Dr. NEWTON that the fight undertaken by the Committee of Fifteen for the repression of vice cannot succeed thoroughly without the cooperation of the leaders of those we call the working class. But we think that the doctor is a little premature in assuming that the committee will not welcome and seek that co-operation. He cannot have attended closely to the composition of the committee if he is not aware that there are several of its members who are especially devoted to the interests of this class, intimately associated with its leaders, and sympathetic in the highest degree with their hopes and plans. Certainly the other members are not without usefulness in the task before them, which will require the utmost energy and labor of all that can be enlisted in it. Meanwhile it will be well to bear in mind that the work of the committee is not so much the extirpation of vice, which all admit is impracticable in a great city, as the repression of vice in its public manifestations, the protection of the innocent and especially the young from its pollution, and above all the exposure and abolition of the corrupt protection afforded to the vicious and to the traffic in vice by the authorities. It is undoubtedly true that this can be immensely aided by the help of the labor leaders, and every effort should be made to secure their counsel and co-operation.

We do not yet know the exact terms of the letter addressed to the Count VON WALDERSEE by Gen. CHAFFEE and returned to him because its language was not considered sufficiently respectful, but as the subject of the letter was the looting of public property for no military purpose, we can imagine that the feelings of the Count may well have been hurt. The matter is one that presents some difficulties to letter writers more skilled in using words to conceal their meaning than officers of the United States Army presumably are. If you have occasion in the line of official duty to protest against thieving to one who is directly or indirectly responsible for the thieves, it is not easy to do it in a manner pleasing to the person addressed But we should say that the sensitiveness of the Count might with advantage have been manifested earlier and have prevented him from doing or permitting the things which he dislikes having mentioned to him. Nor is the resentment of the Envoys toward Gen. CHAFFEE more intelligible. He refuses to allow persons to pass the American guard at the entrance of the palace, in order to prevent looting. Why should the Envoys object? They represent Western civilization in China. They must know that the things that have been done there without their efficient opposition, and in some cases with their complicity, are universally condemned and despised in the lands from which the Envoys come. We should suppose that it would be refreshing to find one man in a responsible post willing to call things by their right names and to bring his associates to some sense of the feeling they are arousing at home as well as in China.

It is a circumstance worthy of note that within six months of the time when our Minister was besieged in Peking, fighting for his life and the lives of his family against imperial troops, Minister Wu, the representative at Washington of the Imperial Government, should appear before a lecture audience in New York to deliver an address upon the religion of the Chinese and be received not with mere curiosity but with warm and friendly interest. It is an evidence of the broad and enlightened spirit of the Americans; it speaks eloquently of the interesting qualities of the Chinese Minister, who has discharged with conspicuous ability and high-mindedness duties of a most difficult and complicated nature during the troubles in his country.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—By failing to prevent the suicide of young SONDHEIM, the two Central Office detectives, REIDY and ARMSTRONG, showed, according to all accounts, really remarkable courage—in looking out for their own safety as distinguished from that of SONDHEIM'S relatives and the general public. Even by the fiercest critics of the police, and even at times like this, when the morale of the force is at lowest ebb, consolation has always been found in the belief that, though some or many of its members were venal, they were all exempt from physical timidity, and that, though criminals might purchase safety, they could not gain it by inspiring fear. Unless appearances are strangely deceptive, these detectives were either afraid of SONDHEIM'S revolver, or else they were utterly ignorant of their rights and duties in a case like this one. Some credibility is lent to the second interpretation of their conduct by the fact that similar ignorance seems to exist in the mind of their commanding officer. At any rate, Capt. MCCLUSKY, the head of the Detective Bureau, is quoted as saying that REIDY and ARMSTRONG were justified in not jumping in and disarming the man before he killed himself, adding in explanation, "SONDHEIM was not about to commit a felony, and the detectives had no right to risk their lives unnecessarily." It would be interesting to know what authority the Captain has for this statement. He certainly has not that of the Criminal Code, which distinctly declares: "Every person guilty of attempting suicide is guilty of a felony, punishable by imprisonment in a State prison not exceeding two years, or by a fine not exceeding $1,000, or both." The detectives had SONDHEIM'S own word, and much corroborative evidence, to prove that he intended to take his own life, and that he was very likely to take the lives of several other people. They evidently did not mean to be included among those "other people" if they could help it, and there is small reason for doubting that the suicide would have remained unaccomplished, for a while at least, had this policy not been adopted.

—In commenting on the troubles of the Anglo-American Mutual Loan and Savings Association, the State Superintendent of Banking, Mr. FREDERICK D. KILBURN, laid down the soundest of sound doctrine for the guidance of people with savings to invest in "building and loan" enterprises. "The building and loan association organized in a small town," he said, "and conducted on the principle of taking first mortgage loans on the property of shareholders is a good thing, but these National associations are bad. They acquire property and make loans all over the country, and it stands to reason that they will get a lot of bad securities." Mr. KILBURN might have refrained from restricting his ideal association to small towns, for they can be carried on exactly as well in a great city as anywhere else, and as a matter of fact some of the safest and most successful societies of the kind he commends have long existed within the limits of New York City. It would be highly advantageous if the name "building and loan association" could be restricted to organizations managed by and for the stockholders, as distinguished from the officers, and conducted under rules that made the taking of title to real estate a rare and deeply regretted incident. Speculation in land and houses is as legitimate as any other speculation, but it should be carried on with the money of men inclined toward that form of activity and willing to incur the risks that go with it. The building and loan association, properly so called, has for its chief and only important object the helping of men with small means to the ownership of their own homes. This can be, and is, done at very slight expense and with as close an approach to safety as mortals can easily attain. Such associations are obliged to foreclose mortgages only at wide intervals, and some of them have never had occasion to do so in the course of a history extending over many years. This is the finest record a real building and loan association can possibly have, and the wise shareholder is far happier to know that his society, however small, does not own a dollar's worth of real estate, does not hold a single second mortgage, and has lent no money on property the value of which is not, or cannot be, known to himself, than he is by any showing of extensive operations scattered over one or many States. The trouble with the "Nationals" is that they attract people whose place is in the other associations.

—We are getting constant assurances nowadays that the war in South Africa is only well begun, and that the ultimate result will be the independence of the Boer republics. These assurances come from men who were drawn into the Boer Army, possibly by a passionate love for weak nations that are threatened with extinction, possibly by hatred of England and a yearning to get the big pay which the Boers were able for a while to offer for the assistance of aliens. It is a most notable fact, however, that these eloquent friends of the Afrikanders are no longer in the field, but are drifting home as rapidly as circumstances will permit. Evidently an opportunity to fight for liberty was not quite all they wanted, for that is still to be found in the Boer approximation to an army, and anybody really fond of danger and excitement could get both in large quantities by actively opposing the plans of the energetic KITCHENER. So, why are they returning? They say that the Boers are not whipped yet, or likely to be. Can it be that, having taken part in the earlier proceedings and given their valuable aid at a time when everybody except themselves supposed that England would make but a single mouthful of the two republics, they have now departed in order that the Boers may not have to share with foreigners either the joys or the fruits of triumph? That may be the explanation, but its acceptance involves the crediting of these far-traveled warriors with a delicacy and magnanimity almost superhuman. Of course, they are not talking just to keep themselves in countenance, just to distract attention from the uselessness of the assistance they rendered to the Boers, just to delay as long as may be the dreaded admission that England's inevitable victory is close at hand. Theories like these are not to be considered for a moment. Once circulated among the Committees on Welcome and Reception, they would have the worst effects imaginable.

—Close observers of passing events may well suspect whether fear of the Mormon propaganda was everything, or even much, to do with the present effort to add an anti-polygamy amendment to the Constitution. All through the late Presidential campaign there was a lot of talk among Mr. MCKINLEY'S opponents about his "recognition" of multiple marriages in that part of the Philippines inhabited by Mohammedans, but, of course, that was mere politics. Now it is proposed to forbid polygamy, not only in the United States, but also in any territory under its jurisdiction. The movement is fathered—no, mothered—by a certain "Women's Interdenominational Union," which may or may not be the "W. C. T. U." under another name. Anyway, its demand pairs well with that of the better-known organization for the abolition of the army canteen. Polygamy is undoubtedly a bad thing, in Utah or the Sulus, but not quite all of the reasons for coercing the Mormons apply in the Far East, or if they do, the difficulty and danger of applying them at once are far greater. England, after years and years of mostly peaceful occupation, has not yet found it practicable to abolish polygamy in India, and we, whose occupation of the Philippines has hardly begun, would find our troubles infinitely increased if we were forced to destroy immediately the whole structure of social life as it has existed for centuries among the subjects of our little Sultan. He and they would undoubtedly cling to their extra wives as fiercely as they would to their religion, and their present friendliness would instantly turn to bitterest hate if their peculiar institution were attacked. The Women's Interdenominational Union, regarding polygamy anywhere as sin, is presumably as indifferent to the consequences of the action it asks as are the foes of the canteen to the effects that will follow the destruction of that institution. Other folks, however, may deem it wise to think twice, and even three times, before resolving upon a course that will necessitate the extermination of practically everybody in a whole group of now peaceful and fairly prosperous islands.

REV. DR. NEWTON'S CRITICISM.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you permit me a line to correct a word in your report in this morning's issue of my letter to the conference of labor organizations concerning civic reforms?

Your report of my letter makes me criticise the recent action of the Chamber of Commerce as tending only to "help" professional men and business men without rendering any "help" to wage workers. It goes without saying that, in so far as the Chamber of Commerce Committee may be successful, it will "help" all classes in the community, and wage workers most especially. My criticism of the action of the Chamber of Commerce was that it failed to "represent" on its committee the wage workers—the very class in whose interests the movement was initiated. This I regard as a grave error—an error which I hope may be rectified without delay.

Such a movement should know no distinction of class. If it is to succeed it must carry the great body of the wage workers with it. R. HEBER NEWTON.

ENGLAND'S MILITARY CONDITION.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have noticed with some astonishment that in your very able editorials on the South African war you have more than once stated that the weakness—unpreparedness is the better word—displayed by England at the beginning of the war had destroyed her prestige and made her a less desirable ally and a less formidable foe.

I don't understand how you reason this out, for certainly no Government in Europe, except England herself, was unaware of her military shortcomings. I don't believe that any foreign Chancellor or Minister was overjoyed that England has been rudely awakened and has now 200,000 seasoned, thoroughly trained (in the modern sense) soldiers in South Africa, officered by men who have learned their profession in a bitter school, with the further knowledge that unless they attack England in the next two or three years they will find her a first-class military power, even according to their standards. And what about the beautiful enthusiasm and unity with which her colonies have supported her and the perfection of her transport service?

In my opinion, this little war—for the cost and loss of life have been slight considering the great result—was sent by Providence to warn of her peril the only nation in the world that understands and practices that liberty and freedom so dear to Americans.

Is it not remarkable that the two great Anglo-Saxon nations almost at the same time have been taught the same lesson by wars forced on them by weak nations which they were sure to conquer in spite of martial blunders? VETERAN.

NAGLE'S DEPARTMENT CONDEMNED.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I beg space for a few remarks on the amendments to the charter. All honest citizens must admit that the commission has done good work for the city, and the citizens should ask the Legislature to adopt them, and at the same time to add a little to them. The commission did not touch one department, which is as corrupt and wastes as much money as any in the city, viz., the Department of Street Cleaning. It is a "Klondike" for some of the Tammany leaders, middlemen, and padrones. One-third of the Italians are not legal citizens. They got into the department by paying from $50 up.

During Col. Waring's time any man had a good chance to be appointed. Capt. Gibson's letter to Assemblyman Egan will prove it. You can find Italians, Inspectors, &c., who cannot write six words of English properly. There are many superfluous officials drawing large salaries and doing nothing. One-half the District Superintendents would be sufficient. James S. Coleman cleaned the city with one Superintendent, one Assistant Superintendent, and four District Superintendents, and they had no light wagons to ride on or drivers to wait on them, as now. At the present time you can always find them in the stable offices.

One-third of the foremen could be dispensed with by making the sections larger, and there would be an additional saving in rent. Each foreman has two assistants at $900 each per annum. They take turns in riding the "bicycle" around the district.

There is a snow office kept in the City Hall Park during the twelve months of the year, with the following officials: One Superintendent, at $1,800; one Dump Inspector, $1,200; one Tug Scow Inspector, $1,200; two detailed sweepers, $1,800. These could be dispensed with. When there is snow they favor the contractor.

The city should own its own tugs and scows for the removal of ashes and garbage. The person who has the hiring of these craft will soon be able to associate with the 400.

Some honest Senator and Assemblyman should introduce a new Street Cleaning bill and take the department out of civil service, and the next Mayor and the next Commissioner would be able to get rid of the whole crowd and put honest, faithful citizens in their places. There is not a single head of any department in New York who would be elected by the people. They got their places through the grace of the "King" and money. M. M. J.

ONE VIEW OF IT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

THE TIMES seems to be quite worked up over the Dewey Arch fizzle, and resents the little digs from newspapers of other cities. I think that we are very much in the position of anybody else who has made a miserable failure of a ridiculous scheme. The Boston paper quite hits the truth when it says, in answer to THE TIMES'S accusation of jealousy, that it is "never jealous of New York's frequent frothings and fizzlings." Froth, pure and simple, is what a good many of our schemes generally end in. New York is full of ridiculous monuments now, and it would have been the height of folly to have perpetuated the Dewey monstrosity, wholly out of proportion, as it was, with its surroundings. For over a year it blocked our finest street, ruined our finest square, and dwarfed everything near its ungainly proportions. Put up in one of those moments of New York's "frothings" over what time proved to have been a very ordinary affair, and in honor of a very ordinary man who later made himself ridiculous, New Yorkers, in order to apologize for its absurdity, refused to carry out the scheme of perpetuating their folly. Any one who has seen in foreign cities monuments raised by patriotic people, and any one who knows the history of the events that they commemorate, must feel contempt for such an event as our Dewey Arch and all its attendant fuss and frothings celebrated. Let us wait until we have something to immortalize more than the kowtowing to pieces of a lot of old antiquated tubs almost ready to sink with a fleet of modern, first-class ships.

Plea for a Naval Arch.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With feelings so strongly in concordance with the editorial on the Naval Arch and the letters which you have published relating to it, I cannot refrain from entering my own urgent plea. By all means, as soon as possible, let us eliminate the specialization which makes it the "Dewey Arch" and let it be rebuilt, in permanent form, and stand as a magnificent memorial to all our heroes, living and dead, who have bravely gone forth on the waters, each helping to make the strong girdle of safety that encircles "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean."

In the late war with Spain no better service is on record than was rendered by the Naval Militia of this State. The mother of one of them, the friend of them all, I recall with proud emotion how readily they enlisted, how cheerfully they endured all the concomitants of war, deprivation, rough work, long hours of service and night watches, sickness, danger, death; how brave and unflinching they were in action at Santiago; how one was brought back, and with honors of war is taking eternal rest. Every man in the organization, in his place, did his duty, did his best; to my knowledge one, at least, stands ready to do it again when his country needs him. With no derogatory thought, has the Admiral of the Navy done more? I feel that the mothers, wives, sisters, and sweethearts of the men composing the New York State Naval Militia are with me when I beg that it share in HONOR TO ALL.

Commendation for Mr. Cauldwell.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with great pleasure your editorial in to-day's TIMES on "American Art in Paris," and would like to corroborate all that you say of Mr. Cauldwell.

As a member of the Advisory Committee of the Jury of Selection in Paris and of the International Jury, I can speak with some authority. I know all the details of the combinations made by some of the Paris artists to force Mr. Cauldwell to do their bidding, and I can vouch for the tact, patience, and courage with which he dealt with them, and how completely he routed the individual and kept always in view the best interests of the American section as a whole.

It would have been a very hard task to find another man to do the work as Mr. Cauldwell has done it, and the great success of the section is largely due to his exertions. He has worked night and day for months, making the slightest detail his personal task, and we need no stronger proof that he did it well than the dissatisfaction of some few men who found they had run up against a stone wall when they attempted to dictate to our Art Commissioner. As an artist and an American I agree with you that we cannot honor him too highly. J. W. A.

Temperance Union Defended.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I "swear" by THE TIMES, and am unhappy when for any reason I am deprived of my daily copy. But, just the same, I cry, "Shame on you!" for your unnecessary and unjust reference to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in to-day's paper, (editorial.) They may be "cranks," but, my, what an incentive there is to be one in the horrible abuse of liquor!

It seems incredible to think you are sincere in believing that the "legislators actually voted at their dictation." Without attempting to combat your statement that they (the Woman's Christian Temperance Union) are at times "absurd;" the good they have done and are doing surely should relieve them from such references as you make to "barren" and "old women," which seem to me as bad, considering the source, as the insults given by the Tammany Police Captain to some of Bishop Potter's workers recently.

Significance of Church Bells.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I beg leave to dissent from your statement in to-day's issue that "bell ringing is no part of religious worship, and has no necessary connection with the tenets or traditions of Christianity."

Millet's famous painting beautifully depicts the significance of bell ringing, and the devotion of the Angelus contains the essentials of Christianity.

FROM HILL TO HILL.

I. Mench Chambers, in The Ram's Horn.

The sun had cross'd from hill to hill,
Its path we call'd a day;
We saw each other face to face,
Then each one went his way.
Descending darkness supervened,
We term'd its substance night,
And in its folds, save but in thought,
Each vision pass'd from sight.

And yet along the sun's bright trail
We read another's need;
And answer'd it, through brotherhood,
In loving word and deed.
And when the evening hills of life
With gold and crimson burn,
That day in memory proves the best
Which holds some kindly turn.

A VANDERBILT-ASTOR ALLIANCE

Wedding of J. Lawrence Van Alen and Miss Daisy Post.

A Quiet Ceremony, Only Sixty-two Guests Being Present—Some of the Guests and Gowns.

J. Lawrence Van Alen, only son of J. J. Van Alen, and grandson of Mrs. Astor, and Miss M. Louise ("Daisy") Post, second daughter of the late William Post, and niece of Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt, were married yesterday at noon at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. William Post, 100 East Thirty-ninth Street. The Rt. Rev. Henry C. Potter, Bishop of New York, officiated. The bridesmaids were the Misses Sarah Van Alen, younger sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Mabel Gerry, daughter of Elbridge T. Gerry. Mr. Van Alen's best man was M. Orme Wilson, his uncle by marriage; and the ushers were Robert Livingston Gerry, Frank W. Andrews, Jr., of Boston and Newport; Lawrence L. Gillespie, and George Griswold, second.

The bridal party formed in the library on the second floor, and as the orchestra played the wedding march, Miss Post, on the arm of her brother, William Post, came down the stairway, through an aisle formed of white ribbons, and entered the drawing room. The ceremony took place in front of the mantel, which had been transformed into an altar formed of white orchids and Bride roses. The prie dieu of white satin was trimmed with Bride roses and asparagus vines, and large palms were placed on either side. In the hall the newel post and balustrades were trimmed with bunches of white roses and festoons of roses and vines.

The bride was gowned in white peau de sole, made in Princesse style, with a long square train, and elaborately embroidered all over with bowknots in seed pearls. The bodice was cut in a low V and filled in with exquisite pointe de Venise, which also formed the sleeves, and which belonged to the bride's grandmother. The veil was of tulle, fastened with a diamond crescent, the gift of the bridegroom, and she wore a superb collar of diamonds nearly three inches deep, the gift of her aunt, Mrs. Frederick Vanderbilt. The bridal bouquet was of orchids, with trails of white ribbon. The two bridesmaids wore gowns of applique lace over white cream satin, the skirt trimmed with three flounces of lace and critfon. The bridesmaids carried bouquets of lilies of the valley and roses. Miss Van Alen wore a white rose behind her right ear, and Miss Gerry also wore a rose in the coiffure.

After the ceremony there was a seated breakfast of sixty-two covers. The bridal party occupied a table in the centre of the room, and with them were seated Miss Lila Sloane and Miss Bishop. At the conclusion of the breakfast, the bride's cake, which contained two gold rings, a gold thimble, a gold, bachelor button, and two sixpences, was cut.

The menu for the breakfast, served by Sherry, was as follows:

Les hors d'oeuvres.
Oeufs a la Parisienne.
Tornedos a la Riche.
Pommes Hollandaise.
Poissons Grille.
Jambon Grille a la Diable.
Salade Escarole.
Poir a l'Imperatrice,
Café.
Champagne.
Apollinaris.

There was music during the breakfast by a Neapolitan orchestra.

Some of the more striking gowns worn were as follows:

Mrs. John Jacob Astor—Black chiffon, with satin stripes of white, and a toque of white tulle.

Mrs. M. Orme Wilson—Black velvet, trimmed with appliqued bands of black satin and a cream lace toque.

Miss Angelica Gerry—Pale blue crepe, with lengthwise insertions of lace, and white aigrette in coiffure.

Among the most notable of the presents received by Mr. and Mrs. Van Alen were the new house, 40 East Fiftieth Street, the gift of Frederick W. Vanderbilt; a diamond collar, given by Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt; a tea tray of old English silver, a diamond bracelet set with rubies, a diamond sunburst, a large Old English silver centrepiece for a table, and a china tea service, given by Mrs. Astor and Col. and Mrs. Astor. RECEIVER MAY BE APPOINTED.

Officers of Anglo-American Savings and Loan Association Must Show Cause Against Such Action.

BUFFALO, Dec. 10.—Attorney Wartman, acting for a number of local shareholders of the Anglo-American Savings and Loan Association, has obtained an order from Justice Kruse requiring the officers of the association to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed to take charge of its affairs.

The order is returnable at Special Term here on Dec. 18. Mr. Wartman will make his proceeding a test case.

Samuel G. Dorr, Postmaster of this city, returned from New York last night, where he went to investigate the affairs of the Anglo-American Savings and Loan Association. His visit, he said, had resulted in his joining his interests with those of a New York syndicate or land company, which will try to bid in the property for the shareholders in the event of a receiver being appointed. MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S REPLY TO ATTACKS

Declares Accusations Regarding Contracts "Rubbish."

SAYS HIS HONOR IS INVOLVED

His Interest in Government Awards Described as Nominal—The Secretary Loudly Cheered.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—In the House of Commons last evening David Lloyd-George, (Radical,) member for Carnarvon, brought together the series of accusations against the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain that have been figuring in the newspapers, and moved a resolution to the effect that no member of the Government ought to have a direct or indirect interest in concerns competing for Government contracts.

He pointed out that the Secretary of State for the Colonies held 5,000 shares, and other members of his family 67,000 shares, in the Birmingham Trust, which in turn was a shareholder in the Tubea Limited, making £10,000 a year out of Government contracts. He asserted also that Mr. Chamberlain and his relations held shares worth from £230,000 to £250,000 in Elliott's Metal Company, contractors to the Admiralty, and shares valued at £250,000 in Kynoch's Dynamite Company, contractors to the War Office.

After enumerating other companies in which he asserted the Chamberlain family had interests, including the Colombo Company, Mr. Lloyd-George declared that he was not attacking the private character of the Minister, but had raised the matter because "this case might be used as a precedent later to justify corruption."

Various speeches were made for and against the resolution, and then Mr. Chamberlain replied. He said:

"It is my personal honor that is involved in this question, and I think it hard, after twenty-five years of life in the full light of Parliament, to have to stand up and explain that I am not a scandalous thief. These attacks are monstrous and absurd. I took no notice of the charges during the election, although there had been a conspiracy of insinuation. I had been charged with fattening on the profits of a war I had provoked.

"Of all the companies mentioned, I hold shares in two. My relations intend to take legal proceedings, and the public will see how these abominable charges will be dealt with by the courts. My relations are all business men, and have had to make their own fortunes. I come of a family which boasts nothing of distinguished birth or inherited wealth, but has an unbroken record for nearly two centuries of unstained commercial integrity. Never during the whole course of my political career have I been asked to use my influence to secure pecuniary gain for myself or my relations."

Proceeding to explain his connection with the two companies he mentioned, Mr. Chamberlain said he had joined the Colombo Company twenty-three years ago. Its shares had never been quoted on the Stock Exchange. The contract to build huts for Boer prisoners in Ceylon was given to the Colombo Company on the responsibility of the local Government, without any communication with himself.

So far as the Birmingham Trust was concerned, he said he knew nothing whatever of its investments, although he had recently ascertained that there was a trifling investment in the Tubea, Limited, but the company's already small business with the Admiralty had largely decreased. After having made further explanations of a similar kind, Mr. Chamberlain exclaimed amid Ministerial cheers:

"Is it not hard to have to deal with such rubbish as this? When all is reckoned up, perhaps my indirect interest in Government contracts is to a few pounds, or shillings; and yet the House of Commons is called upon to pass a solemn resolution which will not strike me, but will be a self-denying ordinance for many members who do not anticipate that result."

In an eloquent peroration the Colonial Secretary declared that the attacks had not injured him, but had given pain to a number of private individuals. Those who had made them, he asserted, had introduced into public life unworthy methods, and had made it more difficult for honorable and sensitive men to serve the country.

Mr. Chamberlain was loudly cheered as he resumed his seat.

His son, J. Austen Chamberlain, Financial Secretary to the Treasury Department, followed with similar denials.

After Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, R. B. Haldane, (radical,) and others had spoken briefly in support of the amendment, Mr. Balfour followed with a warm and generous defense of "a Minister so pitilessly traduced, but who, I believe, never stood higher in the opinion of the country." The Conservatives cheered wildly.

Mr. Lloyd-George's motion, which was offered as an amendment to the address, was then rejected by a vote of 269 to 127.

Mr. Balfour then moved the closure, which was carried by 255 votes against 106, and the address to the Throne was adopted by 265 votes against 23.

SALISBURY ALSO ATTACKED.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—In the House of Commons yesterday Joseph Walton, (Radical,) member for the Barnsley Division of the West Riding of Yorkshire, withdrew his amendment to the address, offered last Friday, to the effect that more adequate measures should be taken to safeguard the interests of China; that no demand should be made on the Chinese Government for the punishment of Chinese officials which could not be equally imposed in the case of a European power, and that reparation should be sought in trade facilities rather than money indemnity.

G. C. T. Bartley, (Conservative,) representing North Islington, then moved an amendment to the address, asking the House to express regret at the fact that Lord Salisbury had recommended so many of his own family to offices under the Government.

One-fifth of the Cabinet members, Mr. Bartley said, were of the same family. Sons would obey their father, and sons-in-law and nephews would yield to the same influence. Such conditions precluded an independent inquiry into the army failures in South Africa and were calculated to impair gravely the efficiency of the public service and diminish the chances of reform in the system of national defense. The same canker worm of nepotism had entered the army and navy, and it was the general opinion that many of the disasters in South Africa were traceable to officers who had obtained their commissions, by family influence.

When the Premier's nephew, the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, Government leader in the House, rose to reply there was a buzz of expectation. Mr. Balfour said the unhappy accident of birth ought not to be a bar to public service. There was only one member of Lord Salisbury's family in the present Government who was not in the list. Mr. Bartley, he added, had not shown that the appointees complained of were incapable, while the country, at the recent election, had shown confidence that the Premier would carry out with ability and integrity his thankless, heartbreaking task.

The amendment was lost by a vote of 230 to 128.

INTEREST IN THE DEBATES.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—It has been long since the House of Commons has experienced a sitting of such intense personal character as that of yesterday, and during the debate the Chamber was crowded. The interest in the discussion of Mr Bartley's amendment was not lessened by the fact that the mover was a Tory, a spokesman of Tory disappointment, and murmurings, whose speech was characterized by a candor approaching bluntness.

Although the occupants of the Treasury Bench smiled during the attacks, it was evident that they felt considerable embarrassment, and the smallness of the Government's majority, considering that almost all the Irish members were absent, testified to many abstentions among the Conservatives.

Nothing really new, either in the attack or the defense, was elicited during the debate on the amendment proposed by Mr. Lloyd-George, but the house was painfully, and almost dramatically, absorbed.

Mr. Chamberlain, by narrowing the issue to a vindication of his personal honor and ignoring the ground that a Minister should avoid the causes even of suspicion, made a masterly speech. It was a triumphant defense, with an occasional emotional outburst, as when he disclaimed aristocratic descent for his family.

For the opinion of the public on the subject it is not necessary even to consult the Liberal papers. The Conservative Standard, in an editorial this morning, approves the verdict of Parliament, but puts the matter in a nutshell thus:

"We could have wished that Lord Salisbury had been able to obtain more talent outside of his family circle, and that Mr. Chamberlain held no shares in any public company to which Government contracts are given."

COUNT VON BUELOW EXPLAINS.

Tells Why Krüeger Was Not Received by the Kaiser—Says Quixotic Policy Would Be Folly.

BERLIN, Dec. 10.—The Imperial Chancellor, Count von Bülow, replying to-day in the Reichstag to a question on the subject of Mr. Krüger's failure to be received by Emperor William, said the Government did all in its power to ward off war, and left the two Boer republics in no doubt as to the state of affairs in Europe and as to German neutrality.

When, in 1899, arbitration seemed not altogether excluded, the German Government, Count von Bülow said, recommended it to Mr. Krüger, who thought the time had not yet come. When Mr. Krüger later sought intervention, his feelings were too highly inflated for the Dutch and German Governments. For the German Government it was lost time to give advice. Germany was convinced that any step of a great power at that moment would be critical and lead to no result. "There was no use for us," said the Chancellor, "to pinch our fingers between the door and the hinge."

The Chancellor added that when the suggestion of mediation was made to Great Britain by the United States in a quite gently worded inquiry, it was rejected officially and categorically. Intervention might have led to war.

The Chancellor described the reply of M. Delcassé, the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, to Mr. Krüger as:

"France will in no case take the initiative, but would not oppose it when certain eventualities became known, provided they were calculated to serve French interests."

The Chancellor thereupon remarked that he could not have dealt with the situation better himself. Ovations to Mr. Krüger in Germany, he pointed out, would have displaced international relations and served no purpose of Mr. Krüger or of Germany. Germany was not bound to Great Britain by a hair's breadth more than Great Britain was bound to Germany, but to act the Don Quixote against Great Britain would be a piece of folly for which he (Count von Bülow) would not be responsible.

Although the Krüger matter will be taken up again in the Reichstag, Count von Bülow's speech, evidently prepared with great care, was so overwhelming in its array of powerful facts that it amounted to a sweeping victory over the entire opposition. The Imperial Chancellor's humor and his particularly apt quotations extorted hearty laughter from his bitterest opponents.

So far as German politics go the incident is closed. At all events this was the evident opinion in the Reichstag when adjournment was taken at a late hour.

Baron von Rheinbaben, Prussian Minister of the Interior, has ordered the Chief of Police at Cologne to make a special report as to disorderly incidents connected with Mr. Krüger's visit to that city, and especially with reference to the anti-British demonstration before the British Consulate.

Krueger Receives German Deputation.

THE HAGUE, Dec. 10.—Mr. Krüger today received a deputation from the Alt-Deutscher Veenband and thanked his "German brothers" for their token of sympathy. Later the Boer statesman returned the Foreign Minister's visit.

OVATION TO LORD ROBERTS.

Official Reception in Cape Town—Sword of Honor Presented.

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 10.—The official reception to Lord Roberts to-day, together with the presentation of the addresses and the sword of honor, formed a magnificent spectacle, witnessed by 20,000 people. The ceremony began with a luncheon at Good Hope Hall, where Lord Roberts made a speech, in the course of which he expressed the utmost confidence in Lord Kitchener.

The open-air function followed in the principal square of the city, which was splendidly decorated. The Mayor of Cape Town presented the sword amid a scene of tremendous enthusiasm.

Representative troops of all the colonial forces, including the Canadians, joined in a procession from the Town Hall to the square, which was accompanied by a continuous roar of cheers, women throwing flowers from windows and balconies.

After the presentation of the sword and a casket, subscribed for by 10,000 Cape Colonists, Lord Roberts presented to a number of troopers distinguished service medals and other decorations.

This evening the streets were splendidly illuminated. Transparencies of the popular Generals were displayed, and an enormous crowd of cheering people filled the principal thoroughfares.

Lord Roberts's wife and daughters are expected to-morrow. They will sail with the Field Marshal on the Canada for England.

THE BURNING OF FARMS.

Roberts Says What Measures of the Kind Were Taken Were Strictly in Accord with War Usages.

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 10.—In a memorandum to the Premier of Cape Colony, (Sir John Gordon Sprigg,) Lord Roberts explains that farm burning has been ordered strictly in accordance with the usages of war. He says, in part:

"Whether the people whose houses are burned are actual accessories to the cutting of railways and other damage must be left to the general officers commanding to decide. They must be trusted to make a full inquiry before having recourse to extreme measures, but as this is essentially police work, I anticipate that, when the police are established we shall find the necessity for burning gradually disappear, with less danger of the innocent suffering, and that my successor will eventually be able to abolish altogether a distasteful punishment."

NO FAVORS FOR CAPTURED IRISH.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—In the House of Commons yesterday, replying to Timothy M. Healy, (Nationalist,) Member for North Louth, who asked whether the Irish-American and Irish prisoners captured in the fights with the Boers could not be permitted to return to their homes, Joseph Powell Williams said prisoners of Irish nationality could not be treated differently from others.

Mr. Williams was Financial Secretary to the War Office in the late administration, but is now a plain Member of the House of Commons, representing South Birmingham.

CANADIANS START FOR HOME.

Men, Women, and Children March with Them Through London Streets.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—The detachment of the Royal Canadian Regiment, consisting of Companies A, B, and I, which reached England about a fortnight ago on its return home from South Africa, left London this morning for Liverpool. The Scots Guards' band accompanied the men to the railway station, where Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, High Commissioner for Canada, and other prominent personages bade them farewell.

To what extent the Canadians had won the hearts of Londoners was evident from the curious mixture of men, women, and girls, who, hurrying upon the arms of the soldiers, marched with them to the station, crying, cheering, and waving their hats.

The Canadians will sail on the steamer Lake Champlain to-morrow. From Col. Otter, who is in command, down, they expressed intense appreciation of the warm reception accorded them in London.

Pro-Boer Meeting Prohibited.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 10.—A pro-Boer meeting, at which Miss Maud Gonne was to preside to-night, has been prohibited by the police.

MARLBOROUGH LOSES CASE.

Court of Appeal Decides He Must Pay Jointure to Lady William Beresford.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—The Court of Appeal has dismissed the appeal of the Duke of Marlborough and has confirmed the decision of Judge Byrne, in the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice, in March last, which gave to Lillian, Duchess of Marlborough, (formerly Mrs. Louis Hammersley of New York, and now Lady William Beresford,) a jointure of £1,500 yearly.

The case decided against the Duke of Marlborough by the Court of Appeal is not the only litigation between Lady William Beresford and her stepson, the Duke. She is also suing him for the large sums she spent in renovating Blenheim Palace.

The relations between Lady William and the Duke have recently become strained, but the action decided yesterday was of the friendliest order. Lady William sued to recover the jointure granted to her by the eighth Duke of Marlborough, her former husband, who had previously granted a similar sum to his first wife, Lady Alberta Frances Ann Hamilton, daughter of the First Duke of Abercorn, who divorced him in 1883. When the eighth Duke of Marlborough died the first wife received her jointure, and an action was brought to decide whether the second wife of a divorced man could receive a jointure. Judge Byrne ruled that Lady William was entitled to her jointure.

The case will probably be carried to the House of Lords, the supreme British tribunal, as on the decision will rest an important precedent.

Banquet to Duke of Marlborough.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Last evening at the Hotel Cecil the Knights of the Primrose League gave a banquet to their Prior Duke, the Duke of Marlborough, in celebration of his safe return from South Africa. The Earl of Yarborough presided, and the company included the Marquis of Salisbury, Lord Glenesk, (Sir Algernon Borthwick, proprietor of The Morning Post,) and Lord Churchill of Wychwood, Lord in Waiting to the Queen and Prince of the Holy Roman Empire.

NORTH POLE EXPEDITIONS.

Americans, Russians, Canadians, and Germans Preparing to Start Out Next Year.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Evelyn B. Baldwin of the United States Weather Bureau, who is preparing an expedition in search of the north pole, has arrived here to consult with scientists and inspect ships. He will go to the Continent at the end of the week. Mr. Baldwin said to-day that he had definitely decided to adopt the Franz Josef land route, the Greenland route being well covered by Peary and Sverdrup, and that he hoped to get away next Summer.

The famous Russian ice crusher Ermack, which is to attempt to reach the north pole in 1901 under the command of Vice Admiral Makaroff of the Imperial Russian Navy, is now being fitted out at Newcastle for the expedition, and Capt. Bernier, the Canadian explorer, is busy in London fitting out the Scottish King. He will shortly appear before the Royal Geographical Society and outline his plans.

With these expeditions and the German expedition the year 1901 promises to be eventful in the history of searches for the north pole.

The expedition to be commanded by Mr. Baldwin is being fitted out under the auspices of William Ziegler, a New York millionaire, who is ambitious to have the American flag placed at the north pole before any other ensign gets there. This expedition will use two steamers and a number of balloons.

Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, the Norwegian explorer, and the Duke of Abruzzi, a nephew of the late King of Italy and a cousin of the present King, who recently returned from an arctic expedition, have united to form a joint expedition North.

The Russian expedition under Vice Admiral Makaroff, which is to go on the ice-breaking steamer Ermack, promises to be very interesting. The sides of the Ermack are fifteen times as strong as those of the usual commercial steel ship, and she can run astern as easily as she can go ahead. Her propellers can be brought short up against the most formidable obstruction, with engines going at full speed, and not be damaged by the contact. She has cut her way through solid ice fourteen feet in thickness and through heaped up or "hummocky" ice of more than twice that thickness. She is 302 feet long and has three propellers aft and one forward. The forepropeller is an American invention which Admiral Makaroff has adopted. Its purpose is to reduce the resistance of the ice by sucking away the water underneath it.

The plans of Admiral Makaroff for reaching the pole are based upon his experience in navigating the arctic regions. He will enter the region of perpetual ice a little to the east of Franz Josef Land and will avoid the Spitzbergen region because the East Greenland current encountered there carries the ice over against the coast of Greenland and enormously increases its pressure. By starting further eastward the Admiral hopes to take advantage of the current setting toward the pole.

It is also the opinion of Admiral Makaroff that the ice in this region is not so thick or not so compressed as to the westward, and he thinks that as the pole is approached progress will become less difficult and the Ermack may be able to steam to the pole. If not, she will get as near as possible to the pole and then an expedition in dog sleds will be pushed forward.

THE THEFT OF NELSON RELICS.

Vandals May Be French—Almost Everything Portable Taken.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—No trace has been found of the thieves who, on Saturday last, stole relics of Lord Nelson, including his watch and many of his medals, from Greenwich Hospital. The popular belief in Greenwich is that the depredators were French, owing to the alleged discovery of a letter in broken English, left behind, in which the writer promised to return and carry off a French flag which is among the relics.

The vandals abstracted almost everything portable. Even the gold hilts of the swords were wrenched from the blades, and the gold and jewels were stripped from the scabbards. Nelson's sword of honor was broken.

RUSSIAN STUDENTS AROUSED.

Condemn Last Week's Production of an Anti-Semitic Play.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 10.—The scandal caused by the demonstration Thursday evening last on the first production of the anti-Jewish play entitled "The Contrabandists," during which the actors were pelted, personal conflicts followed, and the performance had to be stopped, is still the subject of considerable discussion here and threatens to start a student agitation, the university sympathizing largely with the hundred demonstrative Christian students who signed a statement that they participated in the riot.

About 400 students met Saturday and, after listening to some fiery speeches, condemned M. Suvorbin, editor of the Novoe Vremya, for his activity in the attempt to launch the anti-Semitic play, the theatre management, the police, and others. The police late Thursday night released all the persons, about fifty, arrested during the disturbance, and no prosecutions have yet been announced.

After the students' meeting it became known that the Minister of the Interior had sent the newspapers a circular positively forbidding further allusions to the scandal.

The authors of the play, which was formerly called "The Children of Israel," printed two years ago, and which led to a similar demonstration at Odessa, have relinquished their efforts to produce it.

Sultan Receives Kentucky's Officers.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 10.—A dinner was given at the Yildiz Kiosk to-night in honor of the officers of the United States battleship Kentucky, now at Smyrna. Previous to it United States Chargé d'Affaires Griscom introduced the officers to the Sultan. The Grand Vizier and other dignitaries were present at the dinner. Subsequently Mr. Griscom and Capt. Colby M. Chester were received in private audience by the Sultan, who afterward received the other officers, and addressed to each of them a few gracious words.

Philadelphia society has had two sensations. One was the marriage at the Church of the Incarnation in this city on Wednesday afternoon last of John B. Morris of Baltimore, a brother of Mrs. Frederick Gebhard, and Miss Violet Willing, daughter of Arthur Lee Willing of Philadelphia, and a cousin of Mrs. John Jacob Astor and Mrs. Frank C. Lawrence. Mr. Morris and Miss Willing have known each other for several years, and during this time Mr. Morris's devotion has been marked. So far as is known, there was no opposition to the match on the part of the family of either of the couple, so that the receipt by Miss Hoy, an aunt of Mrs. Morris, and with whom she lived, of a telegram from Baltimore on Wednesday last announcing the marriage, caused some surprise.

The other sensation that is exciting Philadelphia society was the action of Mrs. Alexander Van Rensselaer, formerly Mrs. Drexel Fell, in presenting to the Marquis don Carlos de Pedroso, a distinguished Spanish nobleman, at a luncheon recently given by her in honor of the Marquis and his wife, a relic of the Viscaya, the Spanish warship sunk off Santiago in July, 1898, and which Mrs. Van Rensselaer secured when cruising in those waters last year on her yacht May. This trophy of American heroism and symbol of Spain's defeat was accepted by the Marquis in a polite way. It is understood that Mrs. Van Rensselaer saw no other significance in the presentation of the relic than an act of kindliness and courtesy.

GERMANY FACES HARD TIMES.

Secretary of the Treasury Looks for Period of Diminished Trade.

BERLIN, Dec. 10.—In the Reichstag today, during the debate on the estimates, the Secretary of the Imperial Treasury, Baron von Thielmann, took a decidedly gloomy view of the economic situation in Germany. He said the situation had been undergoing a radical change since Summer, and people must be prepared for a number of years to see a gradual shrinkage of the inflated condition. The decline, however, would not take the form of a general financial crash, as in 1873. This period of diminished trade could not pass without affecting the imperial budget. Therefore, it was neccessary to strengthen the reserves of the Treasury.

In regard to the abolition of the sugar bounties, the Secretary of the Treasury said the negotiations between Austria, France, and Germany were not concluded, but they would probably provide a basis for definite agreements.

The Secretary also announced that a bill taxing sparkling wines would shortly be presented, and that another bill taxing saccharine was in course of preparation. In 1901, said the Secretary, an increased expenditure of 53,000,000 marks must be provided for. Consequently, the transfer of surplus revenues to the Federal States would cease.

A general survey of the present estimates afforded, the Secretary remarked, a decidedly less pleasing picture than last year.

Murderer of Seven Persons Beheaded.

VESTERÅAS, Sweden, Dec. 10.—Philip Nordlund, who, May 17 last, on the steamer Prins Carl, on which he was a passenger, murdered seven men and wounded five others, subsequently escaping in a boat to Koping, and who was convicted and sentenced to death in June last, was beheaded this morning. The condemned man chanted the verses of a psalm as he laid his head upon the block.

Picquart Does Not Want Amnesty.

PARIS, Dec. 10.—Col. Picquart, who was so prominently identified with the Dreyfus case, has addressed a memorial to the Chamber of Deputies protesting against the Amnesty bill, which, he says, will include him "among the forgers and utterers of forgeries who will profit by amnesty."

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Dr. Edward A. Smith.

Dr. Edward A. Smith died yesterday at his residence, 105 East Eighteenth Street. He was born in Stonington, Conn., in 1830. After completing his professional training at the University of Pennsylvania he became assistant physician in the State Lunatic Asylum at Worcester. In 1856 he was appointed an assistant physician in the Pennsylvania Hospital for the Insane at Philadelphia. Six years later he resigned to become one of the surgeons in the United States Military Hospital, Philadelphia, which was established by the Federal Government during the war of the secession. After the war he took up private practice in Philadelphia. In 1878 he moved to New York, where he had since lived. For several years he had been closely identified with the New York Othoposdic Dispensary and Hospital, as Trustee and Treasurer, and lately as Vice President. He leaves a wife and two daughters.

Prof. Karl De Bubna.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 10.—Prof. Karl De Bubna, a music teacher and composer, highly esteemed in Philadelphia, died here yesterday.

He had attended the musical service in honor of the late Sir Arthur Sullivan at the Central Congregational Church, and on leaving the church had an attack of heart trouble. He was taken to a drug store, where he expired.

Karl De Bubna, Baron von Libiez, was born in Darmstadt, Germany, his father being a Field Marshal in the army. The professor also served in the army with distinction, receiving two medals for bravery, but the life did not suit him, and he came to this country in 1848 and finally settled in this city. Later he became a member of the music firm of Marsh & De Bubna.

THE SMALLPOX DANGER

Case of Car Conductor Killoran Causes Apprehension.

Health Board Officials Deny that Any Cases Have Been Kept from the Public—300,000 Vaccinations.

Danger of a general spread of smallpox has by no means passed, but has been materially lessened by the wholesale manner in which residents of the city have responded to the oft-repeated appeals of the Health Department officials to be vaccinated.

Dr. Alonzo Blauvelt, Chief Inspector of the Division of Contagious Diseases, said yesterday that probably not less than 300,000 people had been vaccinated in the various boroughs since the disease appeared about three weeks ago, and the rush still continues. Figures furnished by the department yesterday showed three new cases discovered and removed during the day, 45 cases under treatment at Riverside Hospital on North Brother Island at noon, and 9,632 vaccinations performed by the department doctors during the week ending Saturday. It was suggested to Dr. Blauvelt that there might be cases concealed from the authorities, but he refused to discuss the possibility of this, and Dr. Charles F. Roberts, Sanitary Superintendent, and his assistant, Dr. Frederick H. Dillingham, both expressed their conviction that there were no such cases.

"It is a misdemeanor for any person, physician or not, to conceal a case of any contagious disease," said Dr. Blauvelt. "This department has prosecuted such cases, and doctors would not be willing to take the risk. I hardly think that there could be a case of smallpox that we did not know of, although there might be some mild attacks that would not be recognized by the attending physician. The great number of cases reported to us as suspicious also indicates that it would be a hard matter to conceal the disease itself. We have any number of such reports from different sources, and always act promptly upon them, sending a doctor experienced in smallpox to the place. Nearly every time it is found that there was no cause for the alarm."

The department claims and often exercises the right to suppress news of illness, as it is sometimes for the best public interest to do so, but when it was hinted to the three doctors that some cases might have been kept from the public by the department they denied it emphatically, saying that there had not been a case since the present outbreak began that had not been given to the reporters, although in two cases they refused to state the names of patients or the precise location of their homes. Both, however, were discovered.

"Under certain circumstances we allow a smallpox case to remain in a private dwelling," Dr. Dillingham said, "but the conditions are seldom complied with, and it is years since a smallpox case has been kept at home in this city. The first condition, that the house must be placarded, generally brings them."

The new cases reported yesterday were Annie Clemmensen, thirty-four years old, of 302 West Sixty-ninth Street, James Brennan, eighteen months old, same address, and Mary Caffratta, thirty-two years old, of 225 West Sixty-ninth Street. These cases gave the authorities little concern, for the house is in the heart of the district where the present infection started, and they expect occasional cases there for some time from persons who have escaped the vaccinators, but they are very much exercised over James Killoran, who was removed from his home at 129 East One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street Saturday with a malignant case of the disease.

Killoran is a street-car conductor on the newly opened Forty-second Street and Broadway electric line, and while the disease was at the most contagious stage worked upon the car, passing to and from among the passengers, often so crowded that he had to force his passage. When the case was reported Saturday, the Inspector who was sent to his house had to wait two hours for his return. He was on the Lexington Avenue line that day, and had just been down to Twenty-third Street.

"I expect we'll have at least twenty-five cases from that man in the next fourteen days," said Dr. Dillingham. He has traveled all about the city with the smallpox; he has gone among hundreds of people from all the different parts of the city, and undoubtedly will have caused a spread of the disease. He didn't know what was the matter with him, and I blame those who will get it from him just as much as I do him for not taking the only sure precaution against it by being vaccinated after the repeated warnings the department has given."

Late yesterday afternoon Dr. Blauvelt said that Killoran was in a very serious condition.

The department is still unable to supply all the calls upon it for virus.

"We have virus enough on hand to vaccinate 500,000 people," said Dr. Dillingham yesterday, "but the trouble is in putting it up. We have a factory in Vermont working day and night on the capillary tubes, and a paper box factory in this city also working day and night making the boxes to hold them."

Outside manufacturers have come to the aid of the department, however, and Dr. Blauvelt said yesterday they are now shipping into the city very excellent virus in greater amount than the department laboratory is able to produce. One great drug and chemical concern in Detroit is doing much of the business, but the line of druggists and doctors and their messengers waiting up stairs to get all the virus they could at the department headquarters at Sixth Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street at times yesterday almost equaled the line of anxious persons waiting to be vaccinated by the doctors on the ground floor.

DEPARTMENT STORE FAILS.

Receiver Appointed for H. Reinhardt's Son & Co.—A Tragedy Recalled.

A petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed yesterday against Louis Reinhardt and Isidor Weisbader, doing business as H. Reinhardt's Son & Co., dry goods department store at 1,524 Third Avenue, corner of Eighty-sixth Street, by the following creditors: Gross, Engel & Co., $131; Lazarus Rosenfeld & Lehmann, $611, and the Excelsior Shirt Company, $9. It was alleged that they are insolvent and have transferred merchandise and accounts to the amount of $5,000. Walter P. Long was appointed receiver of the assets by Judge Brown of the United States District Court, with a bond of $50,000, so as to run the business for the holiday trade.

It was stated that it was believed they had defaulted in payment of rent, and the landlord had commenced proceedings for eviction; that they have a valuable equity in the lease of the premises, and that numberous suits had been commenced against them. Myers, Goldsmith & Bronner, attorneys for the petitioning creditors, said that the liabilities are $100,000 and assets about $75,000, and the trouble was due to the recent mildness of the weather.

The firm had no rating at Bradstreet's. They succeeded Reinhardt & Co., a corporation of which Louis Reinhardt was President, in April last. He is the son of Henry Reinhardt, who started the business thirty years ago and made an assignment in December, 1894. Mr. Weisbader is a brother-in-law of Louis Reinhardt. The business has passed through a number of changes since it was started. In some of the departments other parties besides the firm, it is said, claim to have an interest.

It was in Reinhardt's store that Mary Brannigan, also known as Mary McCarthy, who was employed there, was deliberately shot and killed on May 17 last by Aaron Halle, her sweetheart, who was crazed by morphine and cigarettes. He said that Mamie had "thrown him down," refusing to marry him. Halle was arraigned before the Coroner, indicted, tried, and convicted in just thirty-five days from the time of the murder. Four days later Justice Fursman sentenced him to die in the electric chair on Aug. 6. An appeal was taken, and he is now in Sing Sing Prison awaiting the action of the Court of Appeals.

Local Australians Will Celebrate.

A meeting of Australians interested in celebrating the inauguration of the Commonwealth is to be held in the Reform Club, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-seventh Street, on Wednesday evening. All Australians in sympathy with the movement are invited to co-operate. A provisional committee is now attending to preliminaries. Haddon Chambers, the Australian dramatist, will identify himself with the movement.

BEER DISCUSSED IN COURT.

Counsel for "Tom" O'Rourke's Bartender Gives Detectives an Unpleasant Quarter of an Hour.

Many thirsty prisoners and attendants in the West Side Police Court were treated yesterday morning to a learned and long-drawn-out discussion on beer. The point at issue was the difference in the ingredients composing lager beer as compared with those constituting weiss beer. The thirst-creating discussion was carried on between Detectives Kennedy and Shattenkirk of the West Thirty-seventh Street Police Station and Emanuel Friend, who appeared as counsel for George Merrill, who was charged with violating the excise law.

Merrill is a bartender employed by Tom O'Rourke in the American Theatre Café. He was accompanied into the courtroom by his employer and a number of other men of the sporting fraternity, who appeared surprised and pained by the proceedings. The detectives told the Magistrate that they went into O'Rourke's place at 8 o'clock on Sunday evening and called for "two beers." Merrill served them and was arrested.

Mr. Friend, on behalf of his client, asserted that the detectives were served with weiss beer, a comforting and refreshing beverage, but not intoxicating. All the sporting men in the room nodded their heads gravely.

Mr. Friend then drifted into an elaborate dissertation on beers and ales, referring to all the various brands and the ingredients thereof by their technical names. At first the detectives were not sure that they had not been drinking weiss beer after all, but they rallied finally, and both declared positively that they had drunk lager beer, and that they could so swear, "if a life depended upon it." They were quite sure it was not champagne.

Mr. Friend, then warming up, asked Shattenkirk if he knew what was in the rooms over the café.

"A dance hall and a bar," answered the detective.

"Do you know if the bar has a license?" asked the lawyer.

"I don't know."

"Isn't it your business to know?" persisted the lawyer.

"I don't know that it is," replied Shattenkirk.

"Then I'll tell you that it is," said the lawyer, "and I'll tell you further that that bar has no license, and that the law is being violated there every day."

The detective appeared shocked, but did not reply, and when asked further if he knew that there was a poolroom in the building, said that he did not.

"Is it not a fact," said Mr. Friend, "that you play the horses there yourself?"

Magistrate Mayo interrupted at this point, declaring the question irrelevant.

The case was finally adjourned until to-day.

PABST HOTEL PORTICO CASE.

Adjourned for the Twelfth Time, and May Be Heard Next Monday.

The case of the Raines law hotel keeper Simon Strasburg against President Holahan of the Board of Public Improvements and others, to compel the removal of the portico of the Pabst Hotel, in Forty-second Street, between Broadway and Seventh Avenue, because it exists against law and ordinance and squats on the domain of the public, was adjourned for the twelfth time yesterday, in Part I. of the Supreme Court. It was on the calendar of litigated motions, before Justice Leventritt. When it was called, Gen. S. F. Kneeland appeared for the relator and Terrence Farley for the Law Department and the official defendants.

Emanuel Blumenstiel, counsel for James B. Regan, who says he is the proprietor of the Pabst Hotel, was not present. Gen. Kneeland asked for an adjournment of a week or ten days, and said that an agreement to this effect had been entered into between counsel last week.

Mr. Farley said with some asperity that he was not a party to such agreement, had not been consulted, and was ready to proceed.

Justice Leventritt was disposed to set down the case peremptorily for argument after the call of the calendar and evinced disapproval of the agreement which ignored Mr. Farley. Gen. Kneeland, however, made his request to put off the argument with such urgency that Justice Leventritt consented to an adjournment to next Monday.

MALLORY LINE DOCKS.

Col. McLean Denies that There Has Been Any "Hold-Up" of Plans.

It became a question of municipal importance yesterday as to what department was holding up the plans for the new piers to be built for the Mallory Line, on the East River. A statement was published that the plans had been approved by the Dock Department and had been forwarded to Controller Coler's office, so that his engineers could investigate the matter last Spring. The statement was made that Controller Coler's engineers had neglected to report on the plans and that the piers now being used had been condemned as dangerous.

An inquiry at Controller Coler's office yesterday showed that on Dec. 7 there was sent to the Engineer's Department a letter from the Dock Department. The letter contained an extract from a communication written to the Dock Department by the Mallory Line officials on June 12. Col. McLean, who is in charge of the engineers of the Finance Department, said that there had been no "hold up" of the matter in his office and that the first he knew about the improvements to Piers 19, 20, and 21, now occupied by the Mallory Line, was when the letter was received from the Dock Department, dated Dec. 7.

BROKER HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

Bail of Lawrence, Underhill and Wolbert Fixed at $5,000.

Chester B. Lawrence, Jr., the discretionary broker of 32 Broadway, arrested Nov. 23, on complaint of Mrs. Catherine Ronckerdorff of 51 West Eighty-fourth Street, with his bookkeeper, Edward Underhill, and his manager and assignee, George H. Wolbert, when rearraigned in the Centre Street Court yesterday waived examination through their counsel, Vernon M. Davis, and were each held by Magistrate Flammer in $5,000 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Lawrence is specifically charged with the larceny of a thousand-dollar Rochester bond, one of three placed in his hands for investment by Mrs. Ronckerdorff. The latter alleges that she received neither profit nor bonds back after so doing.

C. W. Zaring, counsel for Lewis G. Van Riper, who is said to have written the glowing circulars inviting investors to place their money with Lawrence, and who is still at large, inquired of Magistrate Zeller what bail would be fixed in Van Riper's case should he give himself up. The Magistrate said that the same bail required for Lawrence would be fixed for Van Riper. It is expected that the latter will surrender himself to-day.

Sherman, Shreveport and Southern Railway Company.
Dated June 1, 1893. Due June 1, 1943
Interest Payable June 1 and December 1, in New York.
Unconditionally Guaranteed
BY THE MISSOURI, KANSAS AND TEXAS RAILWAY COMPANY
The bonds offered are part of $5S9,000 authorized and issued for the purpose of constructing an extension of about thirty miles, in order to secure an outlet for Western traffic to the East through the QUEEN AND CRESCENT System at Shreveport, and an entranee for Eastern traffic to points reached through the Missouri, Kansas and Texas System.
The interested obligations are $84,450 per annum on $1,689,000 of bonds, or about $0,100 per mile.
Following is a statement of the Sherman, Shreveport and Southern Railway Company for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900:

Gross Earnings	$398,033 39
Net Earnings	89,390 32
Interest on Bonds	58,047 91
Surplus	$31,348 41
Surplus on June 30, 1899	170,397 53
Total Surplus	$201,745 94

The road earned net largely in excess of interest charges without the important connection recently completed. The following statements show how greatly this event has benefited the property:
Extract from a letter of Henry C. Rouse, President of the M., K. & T. Ry.
"H. W. Poor & Co.: On October 24, 1899, I addressed a letter to you in which I said:
'Our traffic officials give the assurance that the extension to Shreveport and the consequent desirable connection with the East will result in doubling the present earnings of the Sherman, Shreveport and Southern Railway.'
"The current business of the railway justifies the belief that this estimate is to be fully realized, promising gross earnings at the rate of $800,000 per annum, with operating expenses of about seventy per cent. of the gross receipts."
Following is a statement of the earnings of the current fiscal year compared with the same period of last year:

MARKET MOVEMENT.

Advancing prices were the rule in the stock market yesterday, with the general tone stronger and better than for some days. The buying influencing the advance was by the financial interests who were conspicuous in the upward movement immediately following the election, while London also was a buyer. A fairly considerable line of short stocks was, however, put out and the borrowing demand now shows a more extended short interest than ever—one of the largest, in fact, in many months.

Leading in activity and strength were two of the Morgan properties, Reading and Erie. The securities of each of these properties were heavily bought all day by large financ

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Transactions in the outside market yesterday were even smaller than on the closing days of last week, and prices, with few exceptions, were not much changed from Saturday's final figures. In one or two stocks sharp fluctuations occurred, but none of these was accompanied by heavy transactions. Net changes were about evenly divided between advances and declines.

DISTILLING OF AMERICA was fairly active, but not as strong as last week. Both issues declined fractionally, the common to 6⅜, and the preferred to 25½. Special interest was taken in the stock yesterday on account of the published reports that the Kentucky Distilling and Warehouse Company had sold the bonds held in its treasury for the purpose of increasing its working capital. No official confirmation of the report could be had, officers of the company stating that it was premature. The bonds held in the treasury of the company were authorized for the specific purpose of increasing the working capital, and it is said that they will sooner or later be sold for this purpose. It would appear that negotiations for the sale of the bonds are under way, and from statements made in well-informed quarters it is probable that it will soon be effected. But those in authority refused to confirm or absolutely deny the published reports.

ELECTRIC BOAT preferred, which closed so strong on Saturday, followed a very erratic course. The transactions in. the stock amounted to only a few hundred shares, but the price fluctuated between 46½ and 40, closing at 43 bid, a net loss of 2 points. The common stock sold between 25 and 24¼, closing at 24½ bid, a net loss of a quarter of a point.

CONSOLIDATED EQUIPMENT was steady and dull. Total transactions did not amount to more than about 500 shares, which sold between 11⅝ and 12.

CRAMPS' SHIPBUILDING was active and strong. It sold up to 75½ on transactions in about 500 shares, and closed at 76 bid, a net gain of 3 points for the day.

AMERICAN HIDE AND LEATHER preferred, on the sale of 500 shares, declined to 37¾. Subsequently it was bid up to 39½, but again at the close the stock was offered at 38. No transactions in the common stock were reported.

AMERICAN WOOLEN was firmer, and closed with a slight net gain for the day. The preferred stock, which on Saturday had been offered at 76⅞, with no bid, sold to the extent of 200 shares at 78, and closed at 77 bid.

BRITISH COLUMBIA COPPER was traded in to the extent of about 2,000 shares, which sold between 19½ and 19¾. It closed with a net gain of three-eighths of a point, at 19⅜ bid.

UNION COPPER was traded in only to a small extent. It sold as on Saturday, at 4⅝ and 4¾.

UNITED RAILWAYS OF ST. LOUIS preferred were dealt in for several hundred shares at 65, and closed at 64¾ bid. St. Louis Transit sold up to 19, but closed unchanged at 18⅝ bid.

EX-JUDGE HILTON'S ESTATE.

Schedule of Personal Property Filed by Appraiser and Distribution Ordered.

The report of Charles K. Lexow, State Appraiser, on the value of the personal property of ex-Judge Henry Hilton, was filed in the Surrogates' office yesterday, and on the basis of this report Surrogate Thomas signed an order for the distribution of the personal estate. The total value of the personal property is given as $1,495,526; from this, deductions aggregating $847,138 are made, leaving $648,388 to be distributed among the heirs. Among the deductions some of the items are a note made by ex-Judge Hilton in favor of Mrs. Hetty R. Green for $250,000 and interest of $5,430, other notes aggregating $359,557, taxes $75,755, and debts of the estate to Mrs. Cornelia M. Stewart $13,007. The commissions of the executors are given at $30,220, and the cost of administration about $50,000.

The total personal estate was made up as follows: 100 shares in the Chemical National Bank, which sold for $395,000; cash in the Chemical National Bank, $255; cash in hands of Horace Russell, in Washington Trust Company, $107,335; cash in Park National Bank, $80,765; proceeds of auction of pictures, statuary, and bric-a-brac in house at 7 West Thirty-fourth Street, $185,314; jewelry, $18,439; wine, $6,331; cigars, $700, and furniture at Saratoga, $47,000.

The distribution of the personal estate to the heirs will be as follows: To Cornelia N. Hughes, a daughter, a life interest in $102,251, remainder to her children; to Josephine H. Russell, daughter, $154,462; to Edward R. Hilton, a son, life interest in $102,251, remainder to his children; to Albert B. Hilton, $154,462; to Henry G. Hilton and his wife, $25,000, and about $110,000 to be divided among various other relatives.

Ex-Judge Hilton died at his Summer home, Woodlawn, Saratoga, on Aug. 24, 1899. In his will he cut off his son, Henry G. Hilton, with only $25,000. The son began a contest in the Surrogates' Court, but this was discontinued. Ex-Justice Horace Russell, a son-in-law of ex-Judge Hilton, and Edward D. Harris were the executors under the will. They estimated that the real property of ex-Judge Hilton was worth about $5,000,000 in addition to the value placed on the personalty.

LEGAL NOTES.

FILING ANNUAL REPORTS UNDER THE STOCK CORPORATION LAW.—The Court of Appeals last week gave an important decision, reversing the conclusion arrived at by the Appellate Division in this city in reference to the construction of the provision of the stock corporation law making Directors of a manufacturing corporation liable for its debts for failure to make and file a properly verified annual report. The Manhattan Company, as creditor of the F. J. Kaldenberg Company, secured judgment in February, 1897, against F. J. Kaldenberg and Eberhard Faber, Directors of the debtor company, and that judgment was affirmed by the Appellate Division, in an opinion by Justice Patterson. An annual report had been filed by the F. J. Kaldenberg Company, signed by a majority of its Directors, but it was verified only by Mr. Kaldenberg, the President, who, since the resignation, prior to such verification, of Mr. Faber, its Secretary and Treasurer, had exercised the functions of these officers, but the court held that this verification did not constitute a sufficient compliance with the provision referred to, requiring a verification by oath of the President or Vice President and Treasurer or Secretary. The neglect of the Directors, where the company's by-laws declared it should have a Secretary and Treasurer, to select such officers, it was held, did not exempt them from liability for the penalty incurred for neglect of the corporation to file a legally executed report. Justice Ingraham gave a dissenting opinion, in which Justice McLaughlin concurred, holding that the corporation, having then no Secretary or Treasurer, performed the duty of filing a verified report as well as it was able. The Court of Appeals, in an opinion by Justice Werner, decides that the office of Secretary and Treasurer being vacant at the time of filing the report, and if the Directors had been unable, after due diligence and without any neglect on their part, to fill the vacancies, the report might be signed by a majority of the Directors and verified by the President alone. The trial court is held to have erred in taking from the jury the question whether Mr. Faber had resigned, or whether Mr. Kaldenberg was acting in his stead as Secretary and Treasurer when the report was made.

MARITAL COMPLICATIONS.—The Independent Order Ahawas Israel, a fraternal organization, issued to Schaie Circus a certificate agreeing at his death to pay $500 to his widow, Paulina Circus. When she brought suit, after payment was refused, to recover the money, the defenses set up were that she was not decedent's widow, and that the subordinate lodge of which he was a member had been suspended before his death for nonpayment of dues, and that this forfeited all benefits due to the beneficiary under the certificate. Justice Ramsey, on appeal from judgment rendered on the trial in favor of Mrs. Circus, gave the unanimous opinion of the Appellate Division, affirming it. It was conceded that Mrs. Circus, who is a Rouumanian, had lived in that country with one Brenner and by him had four children. After having lived with him seventeen years, she came to this country, and a year and a half later she was followed by Brenner. She lived with him again about eighteen months, when he left her, and she had never seen nor heard from him since. The association calmed she had been married to Brenner, and was his wife when, six years after he deserted her, she contracted the marriage with Circus. The referee before whom the case was tried determined that she had been married to Brenner, but that because he had absented himself for six successive years without being known to her to be living during that time, her marriage with Circus was not void. Justice Ramsey holds the question to be whether this woman did what a reasonable person would do under the circumstances to ascertain the whereabouts or the existence of Brenner after he had left her. She was an ignoram person, having very few acquaintances in this country. She said that for nine years at the time of the trial she had never seen nor heard from Brenner; that she had inquired about him from the same man with whom she had seen him back, but that she had written to no one, because there was no one to write to. The Court holds that, taking these things together, the referee was justified in coming to the conclusion that the woman had acted in good faith, and that her marriage with Circus was valid; also that the subordinate lodge was not suspended, although in default in the payment of its dues.

LIABILITY OF STOCK CORPORATION DIRECTORS.—The Tenney Company, a New York corporation, having, in April, 1899, failed to pay Wood & Selick a balance of $2,258.81, due for goods sold during the previous year, Wood & Selick sued Benjamin Vandervoer and others, who were Directors of the Tenney Company during this time, to enforce against them the liability imposed by the stock corporation law, because of the failure of the company to file an annual report of its condition. The defense set up was that in June, 1899, the Tenney Company was adjudged a bankrupt in involuntary proceedings brought against it, and that a subsequent composition in bankruptcy, whereby it gave notes to pay 50 per cent. of its indebtedness, was confirmed by the United States District Court. The Appellate Division of the New York Supreme Court has reversed a judgment given in favor of the defendants, on plaintiffs' demurrer to the answer. The Court holds, by Justice Rumsey, that, although the right to recover from the corporation had been taken away by operation of law, that did not affect the rights of the plaintiffs to recover from the Directors, who were also made liable for the debt. As the defendants in this action were not parties to the bankruptcy proceedings, and their liability was not in any way questioned in those proceedings, the Court holds it to be clear that the discharge of the bankrupt, which affected it only and was personal to it alone, could have no effect whatever upon the right of the plaintiffs to recover against any other persons whose liability for the debt was created by the statute, but was entirely independent and separate from the cause of action against the company. Presiding Justice Van Brunt dissented, saying: "If the trustee paid the debt, he would have the right to be subrogated to the plaintiffs in his claim against the company, which is the foundation of the recovery. In the case at bar there is no debt which can presently be enforced against the company."

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Charles A. Gould Buys 830 Broadway for $330,000 — Other Dealings—Transfers to Astor Tenants.

Charles A. Gould has bought, through Harry L. Moxley, from the Mela Realty Company, for about $330,000, the eleven-story building 830 Broadway, between Twelfth and Thirteenth Streets, on a lot 27.2 by 127.7. In part payment Mr. Gould gives his former residence, at the southeast corner of Lenox Avenue and One Hundred and Nineteenth Street, on a plot 100 by 83. It is said that the latter property will be resold to a builder for improvement with an apartment house, although, according to Mr. Moxley, this part of the transaction has not yet been closed.

Brokers Holdridge & Ward would neither confirm nor deny a report that the Rev. Dr. Eugene A. Hoffman is the buyer of the building 122 and 124 Fifth Avenue, sold by Henry Corn.

Whitehouse & Porter have sold for the Manley estate to William B. Hornblower, the lot, 25 by 100.8, adjoining his residence, on the north side of Eighty-ninth Street, just east of Fifth Avenue.

Mrs. Austin Corbin was the buyer of the dwelling 76 Park Avenue, the sale of which, through Herbert A. Sherman, was reported last week.

J. Clarence Davies & Co., in conjunction with J. Pollatschek, have sold the six-story brick apartment house 82 East One Hundred and Thirteenth Street, 37.3 by 91 by 100; also, two lots on the west side of First Avenue, 50 feet north of One Hundred and Eighth Street.

The first of the deeds by which John Jacob Astor will transfer to the present tenants his holdings in the block bounded by First Avenue, Avenue A, Fourth and Fifth Streets, was recorded in the Register's office yesterday. In all, eleven transfers were made. For the northeast corner of First Avenue and Fourth Street the stated consideration is $27,500. First Avenue lots adjoining it on the north, each 21 by 87.11, are conveyed for $15,000 each. On the north side of Fourth Street, 87.11 feet east of First Avenue, Louis Gunther paid $16,000 for a lot 25 by 96.2. The southwest corner of Avenue A and Fifth Street, 24 by 100, was transferred for $27,000. Nearly all of the purchasers have mortgaged their properties—some of them for 80 per cent. of the purchase price—the mortgagees in the majority of cases being either the Title Guarantee and Trust Company or the Dry Dock Savings Institution.

Partition proceedings have been begun affecting a number of properties of the Chesebrough estate in a suit in which Mary S. Brandes and William M. Chesebrough are plaintiff and defendant. The properties involved are 182 and 184 Broadway, with an "L" at 2, 4, and 6 John Street; 21 John Street, 81 Water Street, 326 and 328 Bowery, 395 Bowery, 302 Second Avenue, 307 East Seventeenth Street, 382 Pearl Street, 139 Greene Street, 33 Howard Street, 57 Bond Street, and a parcel containing three and a half acres, bounded by Two Hundred and Fourth Street, Tenth Avenue, and the Harlem River.

More mechanics' liens to the amount of $20,745 were filed yesterday at the County Clerk's office against the apartment house property of Alonzo B. Kight, at the southwest corner of Central Park West and Seventy-first Street. The largest claim is that of Johnston & Kelly for $11,655, other liens being the American Lumber Company, the Bradley & Currier Company, and M. Harrison & Son.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

In the following list "mtg" stands for mortgage and "R S" for revenue stamps. The war revenue law provides that stamps shall be placed on all conveyances at the rate of 50 cents for each $500 of consideration. This "consideration" has been held to mean only the equity above the mortgage, except in the rare cases where the purchaser assumes payment of the mortgage. The amount of the mortgage plus the conveyances should therefore show the true consideration:

What does "price revision" mean?

With us it means overhauling our clothing stock; and wherever any one kind of overcoat or suit has sold down to comparatively few, or where the sizes are such that it becomes difficult to fit every comer, or where a pattern for some unknown reason has been given the cold shoulder; snipping the price.

That's what we've been doing for the last few days with our Winter suits—costs less to keep warm now than a week ago.

Snipping doesn't describe the harsh treatment given several hundred sack suits of 32, 33 and 34 inch chest measure.

THE OLEOMARGARINE SUITS.

State Admits that It Has No Evidence Against the Armours—Actions May Be Dropped.

The suits instituted by Commissioner of Agriculture Frederick C. Schraub against Philip D., Jonathan C., and Philip D. Armour, Jr., the Armour Packing Company, and others to collect penalties for the illegal sale of oleomargarine may be dropped. The penalties amount to nearly $1,730,000, and the State has spent about $16,000 in the litigation. The Armours offered, when Frank S. Black was Governor, to compromise for $20,000 under a special act of the Legislature which authorized such a settlement. Gov. Black declined to sanction the compromise. The papers in the case are now before Justice Frank H. Hiscock.

Frank H. Platt, who defended the Armours as their counsel, has asked for the dismissal of the suits, and Attorney General John C. Davies has practically concurred by informing Justice Hiscock that the prosecution has not evidence to sustain the charges because papers and books of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company and other transportation corporations have been destroyed under their system of periodically destroying accumulations.

Mr. Platt said yesterday that he was the general counsel of the Armours when the suits were instituted and that their various phases, should be familiar to newspaper readers. Commissioner Schraub began the litigation because he was fearing office. He did not specify any particular transactions, but as a matter of guesswork stated that the Armours had sold ten packages of oleomargarine each day for a certain period in each of a number of cities in the State so that a fabulous sum in penalties was figured up. When it came to specifications the State furnished no legal evidence. Railroad officials who were called did not furnish it because it did not exist. The case is now in the hands of the court.

"There has never," added Mr. Platt, "been any politics in the case."

Ex-Gov. Black said he stood by his act as Governor.

"I did not," he added, "when I refused to sanction the settlement know that the Armours owed the State $1,721,000. The courts are to decide that sooner or later. As to my renomination for Governor being defeated by my act, that's a question no man living or dead could tell. I certainly don't care to speculate on it myself. I stand by my act and don't care to discuss it."

Ira A. Place of counsel for the New York Central said that the company was never a party to the oleomargarine suits even as a witness.

The Rice Wills Hearing Set.

The taking of testimony as to the wills of William Marsh Rice will commence on Dec. 20. This was decided yesterday by Surrogate Thomas. The order will start the actual contest sooner than was expected.

CHASE FOR BURNING MAN.

Exploding Gasoline in a Bicycle Shop Covers Employe with Blazing Fluid —His Rescuers Burned.

An explosion of three gallons of gasoline yesterday in the bicycle repair shop of Charles Ayers, at 70 West One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street, burned Charles Thompson, an employe in the shop, so badly that he may die. Ayers, the proprietor of the shop, and Policeman Goldman, of the West One Hundred and Twenty-Sixth Street Station, in rescuing Thompson, were badly burned about the hands.

Thompson was at work in the rear of the shop cleaning a wheel with gasoline. The open can of the liquid was standing near him. Thompson was smoking a cigarette and a spark was blown into the can, with the usual result. The blazing fluid was thrown all over the workman's clothing. He dashed out into the yard ablaze. In an agony of pain and fright, the man, with one leap, cleared a five-foot fence.

Ayers, together with Policeman Goldman, who had been attracted by Thompson's screams, gave chase and cleared the fence. They caught him in a vacant lot and, grappling with him, threw him down and tore the burning clothing from him. When Thompson had been stripped by his rescuers, he was found to be burned from head to foot. He was taken to the Harlem Hospital in a critical condition. Ayers and Goldman had their wounds dressed by the ambulance surgeon and went home.

Mrs. Coutant Held for Trial.

When the case of Mrs. Alice Coutant, charged by State Senator-elect Samuel S. Slater with attempting to extort money from him, was called, in the Jefferson Market Court yesterday, the defendant waived examination and was held in $500 bail for trial in Special Sessions. Senator Slater was not in court when the case was called.

POLICEMAN SNUBBED IN COURT.

Arrested Man for Looking at Him While He Was Talking to a Girl.

Policeman Burton G. Thayer of the Church Street Station, when engaged in conversation with a lady friend in a more or less public place, resents any undue scrutiny on the part of passers by, and, according to Charles F. Ording, in the Centre Street Court yesterday, manifests his disapproval in a quite strenuous manner.

Ording says he has been a saloon keeper at 15 West Street for eleven years, and that he was standing in Fulton Street, near West, Sunday evening, waiting for a car, when he perceived Thayer on the covered walk of the West Street side of Washington Market talking to a young girl. The girl was Carrie Ellis of 24 Warren Street, Jersey City. Ording asserts that he merely glanced at the two in passing, and then looked at them once or twice while standing on the corner. His glances, however, displeased Thayer, and the latter strode up to him and said:

"What do you mean by looking at me that way when I'm with a woman? You're a dirty loafer, and I've a mind to punch you."

Whereupon, continued Ording, he carried his purpose into effect and struck the relator in the face, afterward arresting him.

In court Ording was charged with disorderly conduct and annoying the young woman. Thayer claimed that he had gone across the street to speak to Andrew Conroy, a friend, and that, while he was away, Ording approached Miss Ellis and spoke to her. The girl corroborated the policeman's statement.

Magistrate Flammer discharged Ording and said to the policeman:

"You are not paid to talk to women under sheds. The citizens of this city do not pay you for that. It was a violation of the department rules, and without passing on the merits of the case, I will say that you had no warrant to arrest this man."

Ording announced his intention of preferring charges against Thayer.

MEN SCURRY FROM BUILDING.

Crack Appears in Front of New Eight-Story Structure in Chatham Square.

Passers-by in Chatham Square were surprised at 11 o'clock yesterday morning to hear a chorus of warning cries in many foreign tongues come from the big eight-story building in course of erection at Nos. 7, 8, and 9, on the north side of the square, and a moment later to see a troop of about forty mechanics and laborers of various sorts who are finishing the interior flock out into the street, some of them without their coats or tools. All the trouble was due to a big crack which suddenly appeared across the inside of the front wall on the third floor. Several Italian laborers were rolling out the cement floor at the time, and when they saw the split they thought the skyscraper was about to tumble about their ears, and fled to the street, shouting the alarm, which brought the roofers, masons, plumbers, and gasfitters running after them.

For a time there was great excitement, and people ran from stores and restaurants on all sides of the square, until the pavement was crowded. Two policemen from the Elizabeth Street Station made a passage through, and then, finding out what the trouble was, cleared the sidewalk and ordered the workmen to build a barricade of barrels and timbers about the front of the building and extending out to the elevated railroad structure.

There were no carpenters among the men, and they demurred a little on account of union rules, but finally obeyed the policemen, and the building could have easily dropped into the inclosure without hurting anybody.

Building Inspectors were soon on the ground, and, while they refused to say just what had happened, said that the department would not allow dangerous conditions to exist in any building where they were known. They refused to allow anybody to enter the structure, and called out a man who started in to recover his kit. Great shores were propped against the front of the structure last night, and it was then said that the crack had been caused by the settling of a brick column supporting the centre of the façade. A steel binding rod about the injured wall will make all safe, it was said. The building is being erected for factory purposes.

DUPED HIS FIANCEE'S FATHER.

Hart Goes to Sing Sing for Stealing the Proceeds of a Carload of Eggs.

For appropriating to his own use $1,161.38, the proceeds of the sale of a carload of eggs, obtained from A. Loewenstein, an egg dealer of Chillicothe, Mo., upon the strength of his engagement to his daughter, Gustav Hart, alias Steinhart, after conviction in General Sessions, was yesterday sentenced by Judge Foster to three years and a half imprisonment in Sing Sing. In pronouncing sentence, Judge Foster said:

"You not only injured this man Loewenstein, but you did a great injury to his daughter, whom you promised to marry, never intending to keep your promise. Your conduct was most reprehensible and dishonorable.

Chief Croker Blames Policemen.

Fire Chief Croker made a report to Commissioner Scannell yesterday morning on the alleged claim that the firemen were ten minutes late in reaching the fire in the building of the Mattison Rubber Company, at 241 Greenwich Street, on Saturday night, and also the claim that the fire boxes were out of order. The report states that the boxes were found to have been in perfect working order. The Chief believes that the policemen failed to pull the hooks in the fire boxes after they had opened them.

KNIBBS PATENT HELD VALID.

Judgment Against the City Entered for $818,074.32 with Interest.

A judgment rendered Nov. 17 in the United States Circuit Court of the Southern District of New York by Judge Hoyt H. Wheeler in favor of C. C. Campbell, as trustee, complainant against the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New York, for $818,074.32, with interest from May 14, 1897, was entered yesterday. Execution is stayed for thirty days from and after the entry in this court of the mandate of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

The suit, begun twenty-three years ago, grew out of a patent that resulted from a valuable invention by James Knibbs, which increased the efficiency of the Fire Department and saved much damage to apparatus and delay in getting a stream of water in operation. Knibbs, in 1864, interested himself in the old-time system of checking a flow of water at the nozzle of a line of hose. This was done at the nozzle so that whatever the pressure was at the nozzle it was suddenly thrown back on the hose and engine. Damage often resulted, and the only remedy was to send word to the engineer to check the pressure, and this caused delay that had serious consequences in many instances. Knibbs discovered a relief valve, which was patented and did away with the trouble experienced under the old system. The city immediately adopted it and has continued to use it. In 1877 Knibbs, after failing to secure remuneration or recognition, began suit to establish the validity of his patent and damages. It dragged on until 1897, when Judge Wheeler, who decided that the plaintiff was entitled to $183,000 for saving in damage to hose, $28,000 in machinists, and $600,000 men employed.

The city, in defending the suit, has spent about $300,000, and it will cost it $10,000 to print the case on appeal.

Food Supplies for the City's Paupers.

The enormous amount of food supplies needed to feed New York's paupers was shown yesterday in the announcement made by the Bureau of Charities that bids for the furnishing of the year's supplies to the department would be opened next Monday. The bids are on the following amounts: Two million four hundred and ninety-five thousand pounds of meat, 1,050,000 quarts of fresh milk, 110,000 quarts of condensed milk, 105,000 pounds of chicken, 55,000 pounds of turkey, and 2,000 pounds of geese. There will be needed, besides this food, 27,100 tons of coal.

CANAL TREATY'S CHANCES

Vote on Thursday Is Expected to Decide Its Fate.

Discussion in Executive Session in the Senate on the Effects of Various Clauses of Old Treaty.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Among the advocates of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty when it shall be amended either by the adoption of the Davis amendment or some other amendment that shall give to the United States the right to protect the canal, the expectation is general that the treaty will be disposed of on Thursday. Meantime, many expedients are being tried and many influences are at work. It cannot be ascertained, in conversation with Senators that hostility to Great Britain animates all those who favor the Davis amendment, or that it is considered wise to seek a solution of the dispute with Great Britain about the validity of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty in a manner that might provoke needless opposition from the British Government. The talk of the former advocates of the Canal bill does not reflect the asserted confidence that the treaty will be ratified, with or without amendment.

A prominent official of the State Department said to-day: "There is no foundation whatever for the story that this Government has received assurance from that of Great Britain that the canal convention will, if ratified by the Senate with the pending amendment, be accepted by the British Cabinet. No such promise, suggestion, or intimation has ever reached the State Department from any official source, and the department does not know what action the British Government would take in the event that the pending treaty is amended as proposed. Every intimation, however, that has reached here goes to show that the adoption of any amendment would be regretted by the British authorities."

Senator Morgan would be glad to see the Hay-Pauncefote treaty approved, since he considers it a desirable preliminary to the passage of a canal bill, but he is not alarmed about what may be the course of Great Britain in case the treaty shall be changed so as to eliminate those provisions incorporated in it during the stage of negotiation. There is still left in the Senate some sensitiveness to the fact that it was after the United States had sought this treaty, and not upon the motion of Great Britain, that it was negotiated. It is this feeling, the extent of which is not accurately ascertained, that has continued to make the fate of an amended treaty doubtful. Canvasses that have been made are declared to be so largely conjectural as to be worthless to show what will be the final vote if the treaty is changed.

Whether the ratification of the treaty will assure the passage of the Canal bill remains to be seen, but the advocates of the Canal bill are extremely confident and say there is as much chance for its passage as there is for the passage of the Ship Subsidy bill. That assertion, made by a friend of the Canal bill, gives some color to the report that the fortunes of the treaty, the Canal bill, and the Subsidy bill are linked together, and that all will fail or all succeed.

There were no set speeches on the treaty in the executive session of the Senate today. Such discussion as there was consisted of questions and answers directed toward clearing up doubts concerning the effect of the treaty, generally regarding the rights of the United States in Central America. This exercise was opened by Senator Beveridge, (Rep., Ind.), who, taking the floor, announced his desire to have more light upon the effect of the pending negotiation on the questions disposed of for the time by the Clayton-Bulwer negotiation. His questions brought out replies from Senator Lodge, (Rep., Mass.,) in charge of the bill, and after Mr. Lodge had concluded a number of Senatorial lawyers found occasion to participate in the controversy which ensued. Those who spoke included Senators Foraker, (Rep., Ohio,) Teller, (Silver, Col.,) Money, (Dem., Miss.,) Mason, (Rep., Ill.,) and Spooner, (Rep., Wis.)

Senator Beveridge did not announce his own views, but asked for information as to the effect of the retention of the pending agreement on three points. The first of these was as to the provisions of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty relating to the acquisition of territory. He wanted to know with reference to that article whether it still would be in effect so far as it prohibits the United States from acquiring territory in Central America. Secondly, he desired information as to whether, in case the Hay-Pauncefote treaty should be ratified by the United States and then accepted by say, twenty other nations, it could be modified without the consent of all the signatory powers. His third inquiry related to the right of hostile nations to station ships in the vicinity of the canal in case of its construction under the Hay-Pauncefote agreement.

In presenting his inquiries Senator Beveridge quoted a portion of the second article of the Clayton-Bulwer agreement, basing his first question largely upon it. Referring to that article of the old treaty, he said that it not only appeared to guarantee the neutrality of the canal, but to prohibit fortifications which would stand in the way of either Great Britain or the United States acquiring territory in Central America. In that article, he said, the two contracting parties agree as follows:

> Neither will occupy, or fortify, or colonize, or assume, or exercise any dominion over Nicaragua, Costa Rica, the Mosquito Coast, or any part of Central America; nor will either make use of any protection which either affords or may afford, or any alliance which either has or may have to or with any State or people, for the purpose of erecting or maintaining any such fortifications, or of occupying, fortifying, or colonizing Nicaragua, Costa Rica, the Mosquito Coast, or any part of Central America, or of assuming or exercising dominion over the same.

This clause had raised a doubt in his mind, as he believed it had in the minds of others, and he thought it should be cleared up.

Replying to the first of these inquiries, Senator Lodge said frankly that in his opinion under the pending treaty the United States would be estopped from extending its domain into Central American territory, as the new negotiation did not abrogate that portion of the old treaty.

Senator Foraker expressed the opposite view, saying that unquestionably the United States could extend her dominion into that region if she so desired, just as Great Britain had done in taking possession of the Mosquito country. The Ohio Senator replied affirmatively to a question from Senator Mason as to whether the United States could acquire and annex a South American country as Hawaii was annexed, with the complete assent of the country coming under American protection; but on this point Senator Lodge differed from his colleague on the Committee on Foreign Relations, as he had on the matter presented from another standpoint by Senator Beveridge.

Mr. Lodge said that under the new treaty the United States as a Nation would be allowed to secure and hold property in connection with the canal, but not to extend its territory in the region of the proposed waterway. In reply to other questions he said that he did not believe that under the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, even as it was proposed to amend it, there would be any authority to fortify the canal permanently. He did believe, however, that under that instrument as it was desired by the Foreign Committee to amend it, there would be ample provision for the defense of the canal by the American people.

Senator Lodge also agreed that if other powers should assent formally to the agreement between the United States and Great Britain the consent of all to the modification or abrogation of the treaty would be necessary.

Senator Teller announced his intention to formally offer his amendment, which he has already suggested, striking out the provision of the treaty prohibiting the fortification of the canal. Senator Penrose, (Rep., Penn.,) announced his opposition to the new treaty without the Teller amendment.

CLARK CASE UP AGAIN.

Mr. Chandler Apparently Opposes the Montana Man's Effort to Return to the Senate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—It is not at all certain that W. A. Clark of Montana will secure a place in the Senate, notwithstanding that he is waiting to come in as an appointee of the Lieutenant Governor, and will later apply as the duly elected Senator to succeed Senator Carter.

Mr. Carter (Rep., Mont.,) to-day called up his pending motion to refer the credentials of Mr. Clark and Martin Maginnis, both appointed Senators from Montana, to the Committee on Privileges and Elections, and after some discussion the motion prevailed without division. Mr. Chandler, (Rep., N. H.,) Chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, asked that the resolution on the calendar declaring that William A. Clark was not duly and legally elected to a seat in the Senate of the United States by the Legislature of Montana be recommitted to the committee.

Mr. Bacon (Dem., Ga.,) inquired what the object of the request was.

Mr. Chandler replied that before the Senate had had an opportunity to act upon the resolution, the Senator from Montana (Mr. Clark) "had gone through the form of resignation." That changed the entire aspect of the situation, said Mr. Chandler, and for a time forestalled and prevented discussion of the question involved. To be entirely frank with Mr. Bacon, he said, another reason why he desired a recommittal of the resolution was that the committee might desire to take some positive action upon the matter with which the resolution dealt. The whole case, he maintained, had not been disposed of by the resignation and departure of Mr. Clark.

In the course of a long reply, Mr. Bacon held that he could conceive of no legitimate purpose in the desire for a recommittal of a resolution which dealt with the question was practically dead. He intimated that the Chairman of the Committee on Privileges on Elections might have some ulterior purpose in view, which he could not at this time divine.

After Mr. Chandler had retorted facetiously that the Georgia Senator was "too suspicious, especially of the Chairman of the committee," the matter of recommittal, by consent, went over until Thursday.

Senator Chandler does not say what is his object in calling up the resolution reported in the last session by his committee. He does not satisfy conjecture as to what he intends to do, but it is assumed by Democrats, and the fact is shown by their conduct, that he contemplates doing something that will not help Mr. Clark to get the place he covets.

Mr. Clark was last session waiting for action upon the resolution declaring that he had not been legally elected, and was not entitled to a seat when he resigned. He was then appointed by the Lieutenant Governor, the Governor appointed another man, and the credentials of both appointees were referred. The understanding of Clark's friends was that his resignation took him out of the view and jurisdiction of the Senate, and that his appointment would be considered as a new matter, wiping out altogether the offenses of which he was found guilty by the unanimous vote of the Elections Committee.

It is found that this view is questioned in the Elections Committee and in the Senate. The finding of that committee was that Clark had been guilty of irregularities of so gross a nature as to unfit him to associate with Senators properly elected. His resignation is looked upon as an avoidance of the announcement of the verdict, but not as a vindication in the eyes of the Senate, and it will be asserted by members of the Senate, it is believed, that not even a perfectly honest election in 1901 can wipe out the verdict of the Senate in 1900, that Mr. Clark had procured his election by irregular means.

Mr. Chanler leaves it to be conjectured, therefore, that his object in insisting upon consideration of the postponed resolution is to have the judgment of the Senate passed upon the first election. Should it be decided that Clark did commit the offenses charged against him and that the verdict of the Elections Committee was just, his disability to be Senator is continuing and not merely effective against him for the term to which he is held to have been illegally elected.

The Democrats see that if he is barred out now, on his application to be seated as the appointee of the Lieutenant Governor of Montana, the Senate, having the right to judge of the qualifications of its members, may decide that he disqualified himself to sit in 1900 and 1901 by his actions in the Montana campaign.

TELEGRAPHERS WANT MORE PAY.

Northern Pacific Operators Ask for a 20 Per Cent. Increase.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 11.—The telegraph operators along the line of the Northern Pacific to-day made a demand on General Manager Kendrick for more pay and shorter hours. The Grievance Committee stated that the operators were receiving the poorest pay of any of the company's employes, and that they are practically on duty on the prairies and mountain stations for twenty-four hours each day. They demand an increase of 20 per cent.

Some time ago the Northern Pacific announced that it had decided to substitute telephone for telegraph service, and this has hastened the demands of the telegraphers, as at best they do not expect to be employed for more than a year.

THE SANTA FE STRIKE.

Officials Say Trouble Is Over, Strikers Say Road Is Tied Up.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—To-night Third Vice President J. M. Barr of the Santa Fé Railway notified all the agents of the company not to employ any more operators, as enough men had been engaged to fill the places vacated by the telegraphers who responded to the strike call. He said:

"At fifteen other points on the system we have been hiring new operators since this trouble began. To-day I notified our agents not to engage any more."

"The strike is practically over and our business is normal," said President Ripley. "A little delay and some annoyance has been the burden of our trouble. The report that officials of the company are opposed to labor unions is false. We have no quarrel with labor unions. On the contrary, we believe they are a good thing when properly governed."

The company claims to be able to receive and care for all the ordinary business with which it may be intrusted, and that as far as the strikers are concerned, the road need not recognize their existence.

Local striking operators insist that the tie-up is practically complete, and are urging the striking operators to remain out.

A RUN ON THE HARLEM SAVINGS BANK

Its Officers Say There Is No Justification for It.

Anxiety of Depositors Caused by Reports Whose Origin Is Unknown—Trustees Declare a Dividend.

Officers of the Harlem Savings Bank, at Third Avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Street, one of the best-known institutions up town, and which has been in existence for thirty-seven years, have been very much annoyed during the last fortnight by reports concerning the bank which have resulted in quite a serious run upon its deposits. The run continued all day yesterday with greater proportions than ever, and at a meeting of the Trustees last evening Charles B. Tooker, the President, formally called their attention to the matter.

The run started on Nov. 27, it was said. Some of the Trustees ascribed it to the recent failure of D. M. Williams & Co., who conducted a big department store in Harlem, inasmuch as Mr. Williams is one of the Trustees, but the President was unable to give any adequate reason for the action of the depositors. It was decided to take vigorous measures to stop the run, and it was said afterward that detectives either had been, or soon would be, put to work to trace the damaging reports to their source, and before adjournment the Trustees declared a dividend for the depositors of 4 per cent. on accounts of $500 or less and 3 per cent. on accounts running from that up to $3,000.

Every day there have been crowds of depositors at the tellers' windows making anxious inquiries, if not withdrawing money. The bank has 35,000 depositors who have a total of $3,782,167.37 in its care, according to the report for July 1. The majority of these depositors are small storekeepers or people in comparatively moderate circumstances on the east side, but who for many years had the utmost faith in the institution.

Six years ago, however, there was a panic among the depositors caused by similar rumors, which were never traced. A large amount of money was withdrawn, but was eventually redeposited.

Recently the bank has foreclosed a number of old mortgages, and according to Mr. Tooker, this may have given rise to some suspicion that the bank is in need of money.

"There is absolutely no trouble of any kind in the bank," said Mr. Tooker after the meeting. "There has been no defalcation and there is no deficit. The July surplus was $678,448.24, which indicates the best condition of affairs for a bank much larger than the Harlem Savings Bank. Possibly Mr. Williams's failure may have had something to do with the run. We have indulged in no speculation which could in any way impair the capital of the bank. We are fully able to meet all demands that may be made upon us."

He admitted the run yesterday was more serious than on Monday, and that more money was withdrawn by the depositors than put in.

"It would please the Trustees and me greatly if we could lay our hands upon the person or persons who started these reports," he said, in conclusion.

Richard Webber, a prominent meat dealer, one of the Trustees, also admitted that there was a run on the bank, but said there was absolutely no cause for it. "I feel sorry for the depositors, who are mostly poor people," said he, "because they will lose their interest, due now in two or three weeks."

The officers of the Harlem Savings Bank are: Charles B. Tooker, President; Michael Duff, First Vice President; Thomas Crawford, Second Vice President, and William E. Trotter, Granville F. Dailey, Joseph Spears, Israel C. Jones, Augustus Gareiss, Richard Webber, David M. Williams, William H. Caldwell, William B. Reed, John J. Bell, William Somerville, and George Fencil, Trustees.

GOV. BECKHAM INAUGURATED.

Ceremonies the Most Elaborate Seen in Kentucky for Many Years.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Dec. 11.—Gov. Beckham was inaugurated to-day for a term of three years. The inaugural ceremonies were the most elaborate witnessed in this State in the present decade. The parade was made up of all of the military companies of the State, three regiments, the Duckworth Club of Cincinnati, political clubs from this city, Louisville, and other towns of the State, civic societies and distinguished citizens in carriages and on horseback, forming a procession of great length. When the procession reached the State Capitol, the oath of office was administered to the Governor by Chief Justice Hazelrigg in the presence of a great crowd. After the ceremonies at the inaugural stand the Governor reviewed the State troops.

Gov. Beckham in his inaugural address did not refer to the murder of William Goebel, but devoted himself entirely to State matters. He thanked the people for the honor conferred upon him by electing him Governor for the remaining part of the present term. He promised the State a clean and honest administration, conducted in a spirit of fairness and tolerance, with no feeling of partisan hate or malice, with the sincere desire to remove as far as possible all friction and ill-feeling from among the people.

He stated briefly some of the leading policies by which he will be guided in his administration, and promised his cordial support in the development of Kentucky's industrial interests. He said it would be his policy to keep the State Guard in a first-class condition, but that the military power shall always be in absolute subordination to the civil authority and shall never be called into active service except as a last resort in carrying out the decrees of judicial tribunals.

HOTEL WITH A THEATRE.

Navarre to Have an Extension, Together with a Playhouse.

The syndicate which owns and controls the Hotel Navarre, at the corner of Thirty-eighth Street and Seventh Avenue, and of which Richard H. Stearns is the managing Director, is having plans drawn for an extension of their present building. When completed it will front on the entire street from Thirty-seventh to Thirty-eighth Street on Seventh Avenue, and extend back in Thirty-seventh Street for a distance of 200 feet.

Mr. Stearns confirmed the report last evening that his syndicate had completed arrangements with the White estate, which owns the property upon which the hotel stands, and also the property upon which the five small buildings are now located adjoining the hotel.

"We propose to maintain the present style of architecture throughout," said Mr. Stearns. "In addition to having hundreds of additional rooms we will have as thorough and complete a theatre in the building as can possibly be built, with a seating capacity of between 1,500 and 1,800.

"The entrance will be on Thirty-seventh Street, and entirely separate from that of the hotel. The construction of this theatre is absolutely independent of the theatrical profession, and no idea has as yet been outlined who the lessees for it will be."

Work on the new structure will begin in the early Spring, and the company anticipate that the entire building will be completed before next Autumn.

STANDARD OIL WINS A CASE.

Ohio Supreme Court Refuses to Entertain Contempt Charges Preferred by Mr. Monnett.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 11.—The Supreme Court to-day dismissed the proceedings brought by former Attorney General Monnett, charging that the company was in contempt of court for having failed to comply with an order issued in 1892 directing a dissolution of the Standard Oil Trust. The six members of the court divided, Chief Justice Shauck and Justice Burkett and Justice Davis favoring dismissal of the information in contempt and Justices Minshall, Spear, and Williams dissenting. Under a rule of the court the failure of a majority to sustain the information in contempt is in effect a dismissal of the proceedings.

The litigation against the Standard Oil Company, which is thus closed, dates back to May 8, 1890, when Attorney General D. K. Watson brought suit in the Supreme Court to have the Standard Oil Trust dissolved. Nearly two years later, March 2, 1892, the allegations in the petition were sustained, and the company was "ousted." On March 21 following, a meeting of stockholders was called, and a liquidating board, consisting of John D. Rockefeller, H. M. Flagler, and others, appointed to wind up the affairs of the company.

The company then set up the claim that it was impossible to close up the business of so great a concern in the time allotted. The Judge of the Supreme Court declined to take action extending the time in which the company's affairs might be wound up, but informally addressed a letter to the attorney of the company, which stated in effect that, as long as the Standard Oil Company continued its efforts to comply with the decree of the Court and to wind up its affairs in Ohio, the Court would not be disposed to interfere.

Nov. 9, 1897, F. S. Monnett, then Attorney General, filed information in the Supreme Court alleging that the Standard Oil Company had not complied with the decree of the Court, and asking that its officers be cited for contempt, which information was dismissed to-day.

WEARS HER HAT IN THEATRES.

Mrs. Apthorp of Boston Refuses to Comply with City Ordinance.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 11.—Mrs. William F. Apthorp, wife of the musical critic, and sister of Joseph A. Iasigi the former Turkish Consul at this port, who is now at the Massachusetts State prison, is evidently out on a crusade against the theatre hat ordinance, which has been in force in Boston for three years. Mrs. Apthorp is hardly second to Mrs. "Jack" Gardner as the social queen of Boston, and is very elaborately dressed when she goes out in public.

Last evening, with her husband, she occupied an orchestra stall at the Hollis Street Theatre and did not remove her bonnet when the curtain rose. An usher requested her to do so, but Mrs. Apthorp declined to comply. The management was appealed to and the lady was informed that she must either remove her hat or leave the theatre. She chose the latter alternative and went home and wrote a letter about it to The Evening Transcript.

This evening Mrs. Apthorp went to the Boston Museum and again refused to remove her bonnet. This time she fared a little differently, Manager Field taking her to his box behind the curtain, while Mr. Apthorp remained in his seat.

ELECTIONS IN MASSACHUSETTS.

Democrats Win in Boston—Prohibitionists Make Gains.

BOSTON, Dec. 11.—The Prohibitionists of Massachusetts have won a great victory in their crusade against license in the city elections of last Tuesday and to-day, for out of the 300 and more cities choosing municipal officers and expressing an opinion scarcely one shows a gain in the license vote, while the additions to the no-license column are many. Salem, Woburn, Fitchburg, and Waltham went that way. To offset these, only Taunton changed to license.

The elections in many of the cities today had contests apart from that annually fought out on the liquor question. Of these, the Street Commissioner fight in Boston and the Mayoralty contest in Lowell absorbed the most outside interest. In the last named city, Gen. G. A. R. Dimon, the agent for the United States Cartridge Company, was elected Mayor as a Democrat over the Republican candidate, ex-Senator George A. Putnam, and the Citizens' candidate, Solon W. Stevens. Gen. Dimon's personality and popularity led to a sweeping Democratic victory.

In Boston the Democrats won a substantial victory, electing ex-Senator James A. Gallivan Street Commissioner. Five were elected: H. E. Woods, Frank M. Weeds, W. P. Bonbright, J. A. Hayes, Albert E. Carlton, John H. Hobbs, and A. W. Stevenson. The Wood's Investment Company, Edsall, Kay & Co., and W. P. Bonbright & Co. are associated in the deal. Mr. Hayes is President of the First National Bank of Colorado Springs.

The deal ends costly litigation over Apex and other rights now in court, besides making one of the strongest companies in the camp.

KIDNAPPED BOY FOUND.

William Jaeger of Philadelphia Discovered in Uncle's House at Newark.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 11.—Nine-year-old William Jaeger, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Jaeger of this city, alleged to have been kidnapped a week ago while playing in the streets, was recovered in Newark, N. J., to-day. According to the police, Mr. and Mrs Jaeger have lived apart for about seven years. Within the last year divorce proceedings were instituted, and the father and mother sought to obtain possession of their son, the courts deciding in favor of the mother.

While playing with some youthful companions, the boy was accosted by a paternal uncle, who lives here, and was, it is said, taken to Newark, where he was delivered to another uncle, Frederick Jaeger, of Brick Street, in that city.

The mother notified the police, and Detective Ritchie of this city, was assigned to the case. He communicated with the police in Newark, and the boy was located. Mrs. Jaeger and Detective Ritchie arrived there to-day. At their demand the uncle gave up the child, who was at once brought home.

THEATRE PARTY RATES.

May Be Reduced in Territory West of Chicago.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—It is probable that the present rates made for theatrical and other organized parties in the territory west of Chicago may be materially reduced. General Passenger Agents of these lines met in this city to-day and during the conference it was suggested that the fares charged for large parties moving together were too high and ought to be reduced if all roads would stand by whatever reductions were made and cease manipulating agreed tariffs.

Passenger fares, as applied to parties, vary in the West according to the district. Between Chicago and St. Paul and Minneapolis any party of ten or more persons traveling on one ticket may take advantage of the 2 cents per mile rate. Between Chicago and Omaha and Kansas City the rate will not be granted by the transportation companies unless the party is a bona-fide one, organized for the purpose of giving entertainments or exhibitions.

The double rule has led to all kinds of confusion, and there have been threats to bring charges of discrimination before the Inter-State Commerce Commission against the lines that operate between Chicago and the Twin Cities and between Chicago and Omaha and Kansas City that differentiate in the rates.

MAN SUES FOR MILLIONS.

Says He Has 13,240 Judgments Against the Adams Express Company.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 11.—Harrison Wagner of Cardington, Ohio, who a few days ago instituted suits in the United States Circuit Court against citizens of Frederick County, Md., in which the damages claimed aggregated hundreds of thousands of dollars, filed another paper to-day against the Adams Express Company, in which he claims the sum of $2,297,007 as a debt, and the interest on $1,342,022.40 from Oct. 22, 1900.

It is contended by the plaintiff that he sued the Adams Express Company before John Haynes, a Justice of the Peace of Frederick County, in 13,240 separate and distinct suits, claiming in each $100. He states that the defendant company was duly served with process in each and every suit on the return days from Dec. 10 to 22, 1888, inclusive. In each one of these suits Wagner alleges judgment was rendered against the express company in the sum of $100 principal and $1.38 interest.

Wagner states that he has not had execution or satisfaction on any or either of the judgments, and that every part thereof remains unsatisfied and is in full force and effect, not reversed or otherwise vacated. The plaintiff acts as his own lawyer and prepared and filed the bill of complaint. The numerous judgments, it is stated, were for "persecutions" the plaintiff has suffered at the hands of the corporation.

MISS ALICE BROWN TRIUMPHS OVER THIEF

Wrests Stolen Parcel from Him After Struggle on Broadway.

Man Had Taken It from Professional Woman's League Club, Where He Found the Secretary Alone.

Miss Alice Brown, the Secretary of the Professional Woman's League, whose clubhouse is at 1,509 Broadway, had an experience with a thief yesterday afternoon that she says she will remember for some time to come. Womanlike she was equal to the emergency while it lasted, but when it was over she admits having come as near to a swoon as she ever came in her life.

Miss Brown was sitting in her office in the League House when the bell rang. The clubrooms are on the second floor of the building, and the door is opened by an electric contrivance similar to that used to open the front door of flathouses. Miss Brown was all alone, and, thinking it was a member, she pushed the button.

Some one shuffled up the stairs, but Miss Brown paid no attention until a shadow fell across her desk, and when she looked up she was confronted by one of the worst species of the genus tramp that she had ever encountered. The man looked around with easy insolence, hiccoughed, and then mumbled something about not knowing that the people lived up stairs.

"What do you want?" demanded Miss Brown, putting on a bold front.

"Money, and damn quick," said the man, now grown insolent when he saw that the woman was apparently alone.

"You get right out of here, and get out quickly, or I'll ring for a policeman," said Miss Brown, fingering the handle of the messenger call.

"Oh, lady, just gimme a cent," whined the tramp, changing his tactics. "I ain't going to hurt ye."

Miss Brown hurried to the door and called to an imaginary man up stairs, and the tramp, taking the cue, shuffled off down stairs. Miss Brown returned to her desk, flurried and angry, when she heard a suspicious rustling in the hall below, where a number of packages were piled up ready to be shipped to a bazaar now being held by the club at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Some of the valuable articles were there, and it came to Miss Brown like a flash that the man had taken one of these. She ran to the head of the stairs just in time to see him disappearing through the door with a bundle under his arm.

Without waiting a moment she darted down stairs and out of the door. The man was walking rapidly along Broadway between Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth Streets, and Miss Brown, hatless and coatless, came up with him, and seizing him by the arm, shouted:

"You thief, give me back that bundle!"

The man struggled to free himself, but Miss Brown clung to his coat, demanding again the return of the bundle. He turned and, grabbing her by the arm, shook her roughly. A number of persons stopped, but they seemed either too dazed or afraid to interfere. Miss Brown paid no attention to them, but struggled with the thief.

An opportunity offered itself to seize the bundle, which he still carried under his arm, and she gained possession of it. Just as he made a grab to take it again several men rushed up to help her, and then the tramp took to his heels, leaving Miss Brown standing in the street triumphant, but shaking with fright.

She hurried back to the League House, deposited the bundle in a safe place, and then sat down at her desk and made a struggle against the faint feeling that was overcoming her. She mastered it as she had mastered the thief, and then some of the members happening in, she was comforted by their sympathy and congratulations.

Miss Brown avers that she will exercise more care hereafter before pushing the button in answer to a ring at the bell. One such adventure as that of yesterday, she says, is quite enough to last for a while.

Between Chicago and St. Paul and Minneapolis any party of ten or more persons traveling on one ticket may take advantage of the 2 cents per mile rate. Between Chicago and Omaha and Kansas City the rate will not be granted by the transportation companies unless the party is a bona-fide one, organized for the purpose of giving entertainments or exhibitions.

The double rule has led to all kinds of confusion, and there have been threats to bring charges of discrimination before the Inter-State Commerce Commission against the lines that operate between Chicago and the Twin Cities and between Chicago and Omaha and Kansas City that differentiate in the rates.

THE BATTLE WITH DE WET.

Reported to Have Continued Yesterday—No Particulars Yet Known.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—The Evening Standard yesterday said the battle between Gen. Knox and Gen. De Wet continued, and that the forces were changing ground incessantly. Lack of definite information on the battle was said to be due to the absence of telegraphic communication with the scene of action.

While the War Office is most reticent on the subject, there are indications that the officials have received news suggesting considerable British success against De Wet.

VESSEL IN A WHIRLWIND.

Burgemeister Petersen's Crew Had Exciting Experience.

Transatlantic liners and coastwise vessels that have arrived in port during the past six weeks have reported hurricanes, gales, and, in fact, weather of almost every conceivable degree of roughness. It remained, however, for the German steamship Burgemeister Petersen to bring in the news of a whirlwind.

The Burgemeister Petersen, Capt. Stege, arrived yesterday from Shields and Dantzic. The whirling column took only five minutes to pass by, but when it did pass, and an inspection of the craft was made, Capt. Stege found that two large ventilators had been whisked away, while splinters from broken railings and other deck fixtures gave the ship the appearance of having passed through a small naval engagement.

Capt. Stege, in describing the phenomena, said that the sky was as clear as crystal, when about fifty miles off Nantucket a little patch of clouds that didn't appear much larger than a man's hand was noticed. Suddenly and before any one realized what the matter was, the vessel was enveloped in a whirling mass of spray, superinduced by a wind of terrific force that seemed to sweep the decks clear of everything on them. The officers and sailors on deck had a hard time trying to keep from being swept overboard, clutching at anything that happened to be near. The wind passed in a few minutes, and while the men were wondering what had happened to them a tiny whirling spiral column of water disappearing in the distance answered the question for them.

"It was probably a whirlwind," said one of them, "but it might have been a cyclone or a tornado for all I know. It was fierce enough anyway."

The Burgemeister Peteraon was in ballast to Philip Ruprecht and docked at Bayonne.

CHICAGO USES MORE FUEL GAS.

Next Report of the People's Gas Company Will Show Large Increase.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—The annual report of the People's Gas Light and Coke Company is expected to show a large growth in the sales of fuel gas. This is a branch of gas industry which up to a few years ago was practically overlooked in this city, and Chicago is still almost a virgin field for its development.

Possibilities in this line are best appreciated through comparison with other cities. In Chicago a year ago fuel gas sales were equal to about 17 per cent. of the total business. This year they are expected to show nearer 25 per cent. of the total. A city of 30,000 inhabitants north of Chicago shows a fuel gas business equal to over 50 per cent. of its total gas sales, while another, further up the north shore, shows fuel gas sales amounting to 65 per cent. of the total gas business.

The last mentioned consumed 24,000,000 cubic feet of gas last year, and sales increased to the comparatively enormous amount of 76,000,000 feet this year. Of this amount, 42,000,000 feet were fuel gas.

LOOKING FOR STEEL PLANTS.

British Syndicate Has Agents Out Near Reading, Penn.

Special to The New York Times.

READING, Penn., Dec. 11.—W. R. Rannie and A. R. Sheffer of New York, in the interest of a British syndicate, have examined the Carpenter Steel Works with a view of purchasing them for the men they represent. Superintendent Brooks, however, says he knows nothing of a prospective sale.

The plant of the Brooke Iron Company at Birdsborough, and the Pottstown Iron Mills have also been inspected by the same gentlemen

Frank L. Dodds of the Ninth Infantry. All the Governments have entered into the plan, except France, whose representatives insist that the French territory shall be excluded from the rule of the commission. A number of sub-committees were appointed.

Several high Chinese officials, on being asked to do so, expressed a desire to assist in the work of the commission. Though army officers have been appointed members of the commission, it is the desire of the Generals to make the rule civil, as far as possible.

THE LOOTED RELICS.

Travelers have described the collection of astronomical instruments on the wall of Peking—the relics which the French and Germans have been removing and packing up as part of the loot of the city—as an "observatory." It is doubtful whether the instruments were ever collected together for this purpose. They are of all ages and descriptions, the majority of brass and copper of exquisite workmanship. Some of them are said to date back to the days of Kublai Khan, but the majority of them were made by the Jesuits in the seventeenth century.

When they first visited China the Jesuits were well received, but afterward they were thrown into prison, and they escaped from probable death through one of their number pointing out an error in the Chinese calendar. The then Emperor, Kang-Hi, signalized his appreciation of the superiority of Western over Eastern science by turning out all his astronomers and putting Jesuits in their places. They shortened the Chinese year and made other changes in the calendar, and it is probable that after they were at last turned out of the country the Chinese took the astronomical instruments they had used and placed them with the native instruments on the city wall.

CHINESE ENVOYS' POWERS.

Foreign Ministers Disposed to Accept Credentials of Li and Ching.

PEKING, Dec. 10.—At to-day's meeting of the Ministers, called to consider if Li-Hung-Chang and Prince Ching had power from the Court to conduct negotiations for a settlement on behalf of China, some of the Ministers stated that they were authorized to treat with them as representatives of China, while others, including the German Minister, had not received instructions in the matter.

All decided, however, that as soon as Sir Ernest Mason Satow, the British Minister, shall receive word to agree to the joint note, they will commence negotiations with Earl Li and Prince Ching unless otherwise instructed by their home Governments.

Count von Waldersee has turned over $63,000 as the British share of the result of the Pao-ting-Foo expedition to Gen. Gaselee, who, in turn, gave the money to the British Minister, to be used for the benefit of Chinese who may need help during the Winter.

Li-Hung-Chang visited Gen. Chaffee today. He says that his powers to negotiate with the foreign envoys, though conferred by telegraph, are absolute and complete.

WU REPLIES TO CRITICISM.

Declares He Made No Attack on Christianity in His Address Last Sunday.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 11.—Wu-Ting-Fang, Chinese Minister to the United States, who came here to deliver an address to-night before the Contemporary Club, made a statement in regard to his address on Confucius before the Society for Ethical Culture in New York last Sunday, adverse comments upon which have since been printed. He says:

"I am afraid the scope of my address delivered at New York last Sunday is not made clear by the reports published in the papers. It was far from my intention to make any attack on any religion whatever in the world, much less on Christianity. My theme was Confucius. The doctrines of Confucius are imperfectly understood in this country, and my task was to make clear in as succinct a manner as possible, without taking too much time, the cardinal points of Confucianism. In order to make these clear to an American audience, I chose the best form of religion, and that is Christianity, to be the standard by which comparison can be made, and I tried to compare the doctrine of Confucianism with the superior form of religion. Instead of being considered as an attack, what I said should be considered as a compliment. I wanted to make a comparison on what points Confucius could come up to the standard of Christianity, and if the full text of my address were published, this would be clear to the reader, but unfortunately I have not seen a full account of it in any of the papers containing my speech.

"I expressly stated that some of the sentiments of Christ were very noble and grand, so much so that it was very difficult for men to attain to them, and I quoted some of the sayings of Confucius to show that Confucius, though not up to so high a standard as that of Christianity, was a practical man. He was preaching his doctrine to his countrymen, and inculcating in them to follow his advice in a practical way, and he himself set an example of his doctrine. And it is true that I said that some of the Christian people, or people professing Christianity, did not act up to the tenets of Christianity. That is not the fault of Christianity, but the fault of those in not following the tenets of their religion. That surely cannot be considered an attack on Christianity.

"I have been reading portions of the Bible, and have the greatest respect for and appreciate the Bible and greatly respect Christianity, and I have never in my life made any attack on Christianity. I may have said that some of the doctrines are too grand and too elevated for man to follow, but that, instead of an adverse criticism, is in praise of the high standard of that creed. I hope that the clergymen and missionaries will not come to any conclusion by reading the incomplete reports published in the papers."

BANQUET TO PROF. WOODBERRY.

Tenth Year of His Connection with Columbia University.

A banquet will be given to Prof. George Edward Woodberry, head of the department of comparative literature, Columbia University, at Sherry's, Fifth Avenue and Forty-fourth Street, on Friday evening next, in recognition of the tenth year of his connection with the institution.

The speakers will be President Seth Low, Dean J. Howard Van Amringe, Hamilton Wright Mable, John Kendrick Bangs, Profs. A. V. Williams Jackson, Thomas R. Price, and Harry Thurston Peck, and Lindsay Swift. Joseph Meyer Proskauer, '96, will preside.

DINNER TO THE COLONIAL ORDER.

The annual dinner of the Society of the Colonial Order was held last night at Delmonico's. There were sixty-five persons present, and among the guests were Bishop Potter, Rear Admiral Erben, United States Navy, retired; Nicholas Fish, Frederick de Peyster Foster, John R. Abbey, Col. H. G. Prout, and Howland Pell.

While punch was being served the National emblem and the society flag were carried around the room by two colored men in Colonial dress, led by a trumpeter in red silk plush and knee breeches, such as Peter Stuyvesant wore, the usher with his mace, servants in livery, and the stewards of the society. The trumpeter played "Way Down Upon the Suwanee River" and "Dixie," and the flags were deposited at the back of the table at which the guests were seated.

After coffee, Chancellor Sanger proposed "The President," which toast was drunk standing. Bishop Potter then proposed the toast "Colonial Zeal." The earnestness of the early fathers is emulated by the clergy of to-day. Bishop Potter in a humorous speech, said: "A year ago to-day I was in Japan. I went to take part in a function, and the members of the lower house appeared in dress which is something like in which you have figured or have disfigured yourself this evening.

"One of the members appeared as a German Count. I asked him: 'Are you going to give up your beautiful dress for the stiff dress of the German or American dress?' 'Oh,' he said, 'you may be sure that he took that dress off as soon as he got home.' If you invite me to your next dinner I hope to see you all wearing the colonial dress."

Rear Admiral Erben spoke of the Colonial courage, and John T. Apner responded to "Colonial Romance."

The Tivoli Opened Again.

The Tivoli, the dance hall on West Thirty-fifth Street, which has been closed ever since the raid by the police last Summer, was reopened last night under the old name. At present, however, nothing but soft drinks and eatables are sold. There is a big sign on the door to the effect that no women who are not accompanied by escorts will be permitted to enter. There is an orchestra in the place which is being run under a concert hall license. J. Clifford, a saloon keeper of Eightieth Street and Third Avenue, is the new proprietor. Three policemen from the West Thirtieth Street Police Station, dressed in plain clothes, were stationed opposite the door all evening. They found no occasion to make any arrests.

At 1,000 miles Elkes led; 49 hours and 50 minutes.

Still the bicycles continue their fast, incessant whirl around the steep, ten-lap track in Madison Square Garden, and still the enthusiasm by day and night continues with unabated ardor.

The galleries contained more persons last night than at any other time since the start of the race, and event the top tier had its fringe of rooters hanging half way over the balcony with eyes glued upon the backs of the whirling racers below. The more expensive seats and most of the boxes presented an unbroken sea of faces, and every spurt of the racers was promptly acknowledged by encouraging cheers from the crowd.

The features yesterday were the loss of first position by one of the former triumvirate of leaders and some sensational spurts in the evening, in which the German team, Kaser and Ryser, picked up a lap and Aronson soon after did the same thing.

Neither of these teams are among the leaders; in fact, the Germans are next to the end, but less than a mile separates them from the head men, and the fact that a lap could be picked up, with the others holding to their stiff pace of nearly twenty miles an hour, is significant in showing that possibly the last may be first.

It demonstrates that the riders who have endured forty-eight hours of hard riding are in excellent condition, notwithstanding the appearance of weariness on some faces, and it opens possibilities of future surprises.

Gougoltz, the plucky Frenchman, was dropped from his leading place with Elkes and Pierce, which he, with his partner, Simar, have held since the first hour, shortly after 2 o'clock in the afternoon. He had the misfortune to break his tire, and, as Simar was in his training quarters at the time, several valuable seconds were lost before Gougoltz could be placed on another wheel.

Elkes and McEachern, who were riding for their teams, dashed ahead like mad to use the advantage for what it was worth, and although Gougoltz was on again in less than a dozen seconds, the other leaders had gained a lap, and they held that lead for the rest of the day. Gougoltz, with the irritation that comes from long exertion, claimed that his wheel had been tampered with, but no evidence of such action could be found. The management, however, in order to obviate all disagreeable possibilities appointed "Charley" Murphy as wheel custodian.

Gougoltz worked like a Trojan for a mile to recover his lost ground, and then Simar was brought on to complete the job. He shot away from the bunch like a rocket, and by an almost superhuman effort gained half a lap, but more than that he could not accomplish. The spectators made the great arched roof fairly ring with cheer upon cheer, for sympathies were strongly with the Frenchmen's misfortunes.

The sensation of the evening came when Kaser and Ryser sprang a sharp trick on their rivals, which they worked out to complete success. Kaser, shortly before 11 o'clock, surprised the riders and the galleries by shooting ahead in a terrific spurt, and kept it up until he had gained one-fourth of a lap on the others. Ryser then appeared to take up the race, and he at once made his wheel practically fly over the boards.

The galleries went wild with excitement. The speed of all the other men was increased to a terrific pace, but still Ryser went on, faster and faster, gaining yard after yard, until amid the wildest cheering he overtook Muller, the end man in the bunch. He did not slacken pace here, but kept on until he was well up with the leaders, when Kaser, who had been waiting to relieve him after his fierce ride, resumed the race.

This quick relay of riders threw temporary consternation into the ranks of the others, and the trainers at once scurried down stairs to bring up the fresh riders, and Elkes, Turville, Simar, Waller, and Babcock soon came on to relieve their partners.

SIX RIDERS IN A SPILL.

The second fall since the race started occurred shortly after 8 o'clock in the morning on the big northwest turn, and, as it carried down six men, it looked decidedly serious for a time. Waller and Gimm were the men who caused the trouble, although perfectly unintentional on their part.

They got too close together and collided, and in a twinkling McFarland, Simar, Babcock, and Pierce crashed into them. There was a distinct snapping of broken gear, and the excitement caused a general awakening all through the Garden among the all-night contingent, a dozen or more of whom were snoring peacefully in the upper galleries.

To the surprise of all Pierce was the only one at all hurt. He had three or four bad cuts on his knees and legs, and was immediately relieved by his partner, McEachern. After a brief rest and careful bandaging Pierce came back on the track a few minutes after 9 and continued to ride as fast as ever for the rest of the day. The laps lost by the six men were restored by the referee.

Jimmy Michael and Champion Major Taylor were again the extra attractions of the evening. Little Michael was greeted with salvos of applause from his friends as he clung to the rear wheel of his pacing motor tandem cycle, and he rode the mile in that way in 0:57 1-5.

Taylor made an exhibition half-mile unpaced run in 0:56 4-5 and afterward sauntered around the Garden in the genial rôle of a spectator. He declined to give any expert opinion regarding the probable result of the six-day race.

"It is a fearfully hot pace," he added, "but all the men who are now riding are in very good condition, and, having passed the second day, they all appear fit to continue now to the end."

There was a noticeable slackening of the pace all day long. At 6 o'clock in the morning, the forty-second hour, the leaders had covered 850 miles and 7 laps, as against 843 miles and 1 lap a year ago, 7.4 miles ahead of the record. At 11 o'clock last night the leaders had done 946 miles and 8 laps, only 2.7 miles above the record.

At 12:25 o'clock Accoutrier quit the race, saying that he was exhausted. His partner, Muller, who is long-distance champion of Europe, and who rode forty-eight hours without dismounting from his bicycle in a race, continued riding without knowing that his partner had quit. When he was informed by the management, he left his wheel, and going to his training quarters almost pulled Accoutrier from the quarters to the track and started him in the race again.

PRESBYTERIAN REVISION.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 11.—At its two hundred and sixty-third stated meeting the Baltimore Presbytery went on record to-day as favoring a revision of the Confession of Faith by a vote of 47 to 24. The other overtures handed down by the General Assembly of 1892 touching upon the question were disposed of at to-night's session, as follows:

In favor of a supplemental explanatory statement, 24 to 17; opposing a supplement to present doctrinal standards with a briefer statement of the doctrines, 7 to 38; and against the dismissal of the whole subject, so that doctrinal standards shall remain as they are, without any change whatever, whether revisional, supplemental, or substitutional, 6 to 37.

The last three questions were voted upon when the attendance was appreciably less than when the main question was put late this afternoon. The summary at present as developed by the votes of the various Presbyteries in the United States is, out of 189 Presbyterics, 145 have voted for revision.

DR. STANTON COIT'S LECTURE.

The Speaker Undertakes to Give Reasons for "the Failure of Democracy."

Dr. Stanton Coit was the principal speaker last evening at the regular meeting of the Social Reform Club, 45 University Place. The subject of the address was "King Demos—the Failure of Democracy."

Dr. Coit stated at the outset that he had been incorrectly reported as saying in Philadelphia that "our workingmen should have no voice in government," and that "Democracy is a synonym for corruption." Neither of these statements, he declared, had been made by him.

A better title for the lecture," said Dr. Coit, might be "Is Democracy a Failure?" Great changes had taken place during the last ten years among the Western nations, and the greatest, the speaker considered, was the growing distrust of government by the people. Anarchy was feared if the people should come to power. Even the Liberal Party in England has ceased to believe in the principles of democracy.

Democracy is now a failure because it is based on false principles. The ideal democracy must be an enlightened democracy. It was only the old aristocracies that sought to keep the people in ignorance for selfish motives. The American workingman to-day is the leader in the true democracy of the future, but he is not now in condition to vote. He is not a freeman at the polls; he must vote the way his employer votes. He is illiterate. He has not the leisure nor the education to study economic questions. Present conditions, therefore, are anti-democratic, anti-human, and must be improved before the true democracy can exist.

Dr. Coit believes in expansion and imperialism, if done in the cause of the propagauda of a socialistic democracy and if efforts are made to elevate the Filipino to the equal of American manhood. The only remedy for political evils, he said, is the teaching of a new democracy and the educating and elevating of the workingman.

RENTED BY EMMA GOLDMAN.

Proprietor of Everett Hall Warned Social Science Meeting Against Anarchy.

At the Social Science mass meeting in Everett Hall, 31 East Fourth Street, last night, the proprietor of the hall, Harry Bimberg, threatened to turn out the lights should the meeting develop into one of Anarchistic tendencies. He said that Emma Goldman had rented the hall from him by concealing her identity. The hall was crowded and the announcement of the proprietor was received with a howl of protest.

Emma Goldman said Bimberg was influenced by fear of the police. She stated that this only went to prove her contention that there was no liberty, personal or otherwise, in America, and that under "your Platts, your Crokers, and your Hannas there can be no such thing as liberty, any more than there is in the Republic of France to-day."

"King Humbert," she said, "was justly put to death by a brave man, who dared to act for the good of his fellow-men, among whom he considered himself but a unit in a universe." She said she should hate to be in the shoes of a monarch or of President McKinley, owing to the "fickleness of the masses."

THE AMERICAN UNIVERSITY.

Annual Meeting of Board of Trustees Held in Washington—Members Call on President McKinley.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The Board of Trustees of the American University held its annual meeting here to-day. In the absence of John E. Andrus of New York, President of the board, John F. Robinson of Illinois presided.

Bishop Hurst reported that there was now between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 on hand, and urged that every effort should be put forward to secure $1,000,000 during the coming year. The money would be used, he said, as a basis for opening the institution for actual work in instruction. Everything was reported to be in a prosperous condition.

The report of the Financial Secretary showed that $75,000 will soon be added to the endowment fund. It was also reported that within the last few days a quantity of land near the site of the proposed university had been given by a friend. Its value is about $5,000. A subscription of $10,000 was made by a member of the board whose name was not announced.

To-day the members of the board called on President McKinley, to whom the prospects of the university were outlined by Bishop Hurst. The latter spoke of the success which the promoters are meeting with and the determination to start one new building in the coming year, if the contributions meet expectations. The President showed deep interest in the project, and suggested that the board invite contributions, small as well as large in amount, in order that all classes may contribute. The President has already made a contribution to the university fund, and purposes to make another.

In the afternoon the board passed a resolution indorsing the organization of the Woman's Board of the American University. The following were elected officers of the board: President—John E. Andrus; Treasurer—Matthew G. Emery; Secretary—The Rev. Dr. Charles W. Baldwin, all re-elected. The Rev. John A. Gutteridge was elected Financial Secretary. Gov. Roosevelt of New York, Willis G. Emerson of Wyoming, and William L. Woodcock of Pennsylvania were elected members of the Board of Trustees to fill vacancies.

LAWYERS HOLD AN ELECTION.

A stated meeting of the Association of the Bar was held last night at the association house. After certain routine reports had been received, nominations were made for members of the Nominating Committee, and also for Inspectors and canvassers of election. On motion of Mr. Wickersham, it was ordered that the polls be kept open for an hour. Mr. Wickersham said that for the first time in the history of the association there was a contest for the Nominating Committee.

There was no contest for Inspectors and Canvassers of Election, and the Secretary was instructed to cast the ballot of the association for them. They are George S. Coleman, Abraham I. Elkus, and Jordan J. Rollins. The same course was taken with the Auditing Committee, which was made up as follows: William F. Dunning, Edwin W. Coggeshall, and Robert Shaw Minturn.

The list of the nine candidates for the Nominating Committee on the "regular" ticket was as follows: Augustus C. Brown, Almon Goodwin, George Zabriskie, Lewis Cass Ledyard, William P. Dixon, Eugene A. Philbin, John S. Sheppard, J. Mayhew Wainwright, and Thomas N. Rhinelander.

There were five names on the "opposition" ticket—Edward C. James, Rastus S. Ransom, George M. Pinney, Jr., James M. Gifford, and P. Tecumseh Sherman.

The supporters of the regular ticket concentrated their attention upon the first five names, who were all elected, thus giving the regulars control of the ticket. The four members of the opposition chosen were Edward C. James, Rastus S. Ransom, P. Tecumseh Sherman, and James M. Gifford.

The general report regarding the running of an opposition ticket was that it was a "young men's" ticket. So far as could be learned in the gossip about the clubhouse there was no special dissatisfaction with the present management, though there was a hint that perhaps there was too much of a reform element to suit some. On motion of Albert Stickney of the committee appointed a year ago to confer with the National Commission to revise and codify laws relating to the organization and jurisdiction of the United States courts, eight members were added to the committee.

A resolution was passed authorizing the President of the association to appoint special committees to assist the committee heretofore appointed to confer with the Legislative Committee on Statutory Revision.

The election of officers will be held at the annual meeting of the association in January.

MINNESOTA SENATORSHIP.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 11.—Robert G. Evans of Minneapolis is now the only avowed candidate for the United States Senatorship made vacant by the death of Cushman K. Davis. At a meeting of the Hennepin County delegation to-night announcement of the withdrawal of Thomas Shevlin from the race was formally made. Then followed statements from Thomas Lowrey and Loren Fletcher that they have no desire for the place.

This left the field clear for Evans, and the vote that was taken showed the following result: Evans, 14; Fletcher, 1; Lowrey, 1; Pillsbury, 1. A formal ballot followed, which showed a gain of 1 for Evans and a loss of 1 for Pillsbury. Evans then was declared to be the candidate of Hennepin County.

THE ANTI-TAMMANY FIGHT

Big Meeting in Cooper Union by the Vigilance League.

LETTER FROM DR. PARKHURST

Efforts Should Be Concentrated Against One Boss This Year—Police Corruption Exposed.

A mass meeting at Cooper Union under the auspices of the City Vigilance League last night was the occasion for a gathering that nearly filled the large hall. There was considerable enthusiasm at times, the demonstration reaching its height at the conclusion of a speech by Dr. Adolph M. Radin of the Society for the Aid of Jewish Prisoners, who maintained that the immigrants had not corrupted New York, but that New York had corrupted the immigrants.

An unusual feature of the meeting was the reading of the platform by several thousand persons. It was Frank Moss who, in the course of his speech, said:

"I'll help you to make a speech and you help me. We will read the platform together." Then the audience read the following:

Our city is our home, and on it we will concentrate our patriotism. We love it and will work for it, fight for it, and live for it.

We will attack as traitors to the Commonwealth those officials who prostitute their offices for partisan or personal gain, and those politicians who manipulate them "for their own pocket's sake."

We will help to deliver it from the selfish and corrupt rule that now oppresses, injures, and disgraces it, and to install a pure, efficient, and non-partisan administration.

We will endeavor to bring all honest citizens into closer relation and deeper sympathy with each other, so that religious, racial, and social differences shall melt away in the warm brotherhood of good citizenship struggling to redeem life home from vicious misrule.

"Are we all brothers on that?" asked Mr. Moss.

"Yes, yes!" was the answer from all parts of the hall.

Charles Stewart Smith, Chairman of the meeting, said in part: "We, as citizens of New York, must look upon our citizenship with some degree of shame. It will be no child's play to redeem the city. The forces of bad government in this city are largely responsible for the falling off of our commerce. This is the most expensive city in the world to do business in. The extravagance in government increases rents and makes the wage-earner pay more for all that he buys. We must change those conditions."

Thomas L. McClintock was made Secretary of the meeting, and read letters from the Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott, George Gunton, the Rev. Hutchins C. Bishop, Gen. George Moore Smith, the Rev. Dr. Maltbie D. Babcock, John Harsen Rhoades, the Rev. Dr. E. J. Belcher, Henry H. Dreyer, the Rev. Dr. Robert L. Paddock, Constant A. Andrews, the Rev. Dr. W. H. Brooks, and H. W. Donald.

A communication from the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst was then read, in which he said:

First—That every other enemy to our municipal well-being should be forgotten in the concentration of our onset upon Tammany Hall. Croker is the only "boss" to be thought about this year. The experiment was tried three years ago of killing off both bosses by a single assault. The experiment failed. Sooner or later we must rid ourselves of both, for either is as bad as the other, if not worse; but not this year. The public mind is not ready for it. This year it is Croker and all the shape of legitimated criminality and organized beastliness that ill-omened name stands for.

Second, allow no discussion of names to be put in candidacy for municipal office.

Third, it is most necessary that all subsidiary questions, whether of ethics or economics, should be ruled out. I see, for example, that there is a movement to drag into the discussion the question as to the proper way of dealing with the social evil. All such discussion is just now an impertinence. Croker, in the tumultuous overflow of his spasmodic regeneracy, says that we ought to segregate the social evil. What we want to do first is to segregate Tammany Hall. Drive out the devil before you discuss ways of cleaning up the litter he makes. There is only one target in this shooting match.

The Rev. Thomas R. Slicer said: "The people who claim to own the Judges and the police have accustomed us to think that administration is not a business, but a game of chance. The administration with which we are now cursed began with a curse. The District Attorney was reported to have said: 'To hell with reform.' The campaign of 1901 is not a political one. It is one intent on business, righteousness, and decency.

Dr. Adolph M. Radin said:

"Those people are wrong who declare that it is the whole east side, and that alone, which needs reforming. I say that it is the whole city.

"Some say that the immigrants are corrupting the city. No, it is not so. The city is corrupting the immigrants. Listen to this: Most of these immigrants are Jews, among which people I have to work. Now, out of 2,000 prisoners in an institution that I know, there are only eight or nine Jews, and out of a nearly like number in a poorhouse where I go there are not more than a dozen of that race.

John P. Faure arraigned the City Government for its failure to provide new hospitals in place of the present Gouverneur and Harlem Hospitals, which, he said, were wholly inadequate.

Frank Moss said that the chief cry in the campaign of 1901 must not be directed against any one department of the city nor against the petty officials and underlings, but against Tammany Hall and Richard Croker.

"It is not the Captains of police," he said, "that are primarily the pecuniary gainers by the system of corruption, nor even the Inspectors, nor yet the Chief. This Chief he characterized as "a poor man of putty," and then described the Police Commissioners as "pasty and wobbly." Finally he said: "It is not even our little Mayor, who is the direct culprit, or who is directly responsible. He is the greatest Mayor we have ever had. Yes, he is. He eits and writes and does nothing. Perhaps, when he gets through writing, he cuts coupons. Who knows?"

The first number of The New York Vigilant, a paper issued by the league and described by Mr. McClintock in his speech as "not the ideal, but better than some," was distributed to everybody in the audience.

The paper contained many articles derogatory to Tammany Hall and Mr. Croker, several appeals to the citizens of the city to forget party affiliations in the campaign of next year, and numerous quotations supposed to show how the corruption now talked about is due directly to Tammany Hall and its leaders. Issues will be gotten out periodically, but not at set intervals. Frank Moss is at the head of the Committee on Publication.

Michael J. Dady Re-elected Chairman.

Michael J. Dady was last night re-elected Chairman of the Kings County Republican Executive Committee, at a meeting of that body held in the Joralemon Street Headquarters. He was unable to be present, as he was obliged to leave for the South during the day in connection with his Cuban contract. Clarence E. Barrow was elected Secretary. It was announced yesterday that John E. Smith of Brooklyn, a newspaper man, had been chosen by Lieut. Gov. Woodruff as his private secretary, to succeed Harry Bates.

SEASON'S FIRST SNOWFALL

Thin White Coating Covered Streets and Bothered Horses.

Shipping Decked with Icicles—One Sleigh Turns Out in Central Park and Wins the Champagne Prize.

With the imperceptible rise in the temperature yesterday came the first snow of the year. There have been flurries on one or two occasions, but they were of such brief duration and the snow was so insignificant in quantity that they were hardly noticed. Yesterday, while the fall was not heavy, there was sufficient to cover the housetops and streets with an apparently substantial yet in reality very thin coating.

It was 2 o'clock in the afternoon when the fall began. It lasted for about two hours, and made the thoroughfares, especially those of asphalt, very difficult to travel. Numerous vehicles were put out of gear, owing to the horses, not shod in accordance with the rules of wintry weather, being unable to keep their feet.

Nobody thought the snow would come down hard enough for a sleigh and horse to trot around in, but John J. Quinn, a Harlem liveryman, thought of the bottle of champagne Mr. Case offers to the first man who reaches McGowan's Pass Tavern in Central Park in a sleigh during the first snowstorm, and he got out his chestnut gelding Wildwood, hitched him to a sleigh, and drove out. The riding was fairly good all the way through the Park, and he reached Case's at 5:25 o'clock. He got a little cheer as he drove up. No others appeared on the ground, and Quinn got the champagne.

The decks and fixtures of steamships in the harbor were in many cases coated with ice, and from the sides of ferryboats and other river craft, long icicles hung.

The surface cars were, as on the days previous, still unheated, the authorities of the lines evidently thinking that the shutting off a draft by means of keeping the forward doors of cars closed, a sufficient measure for the comfort of their patrons. Many open cars were also still in service.

He leaves a wife, two daughters and a son. His funeral will take place at the cathedral to-morrow. The service will be conducted by the Very Rev. Dean Cox.

C. VANDERBILT'S PERSONAL ESTATE

Schedule of Stocks, Bonds, Cash, and Insurance.

WAS APPRAISED AT $52,999,867

Real Property Worth $20,000,000, Making a Total of $72,999,867—The State's Share.

The schedule of Cornelius Vanderbilt's personal estate, stocks, bonds, cash, insurance, and effects was made public yesterday. It was printed in The New York World, which paper also printed what purported to be the valuations finally fixed upon by the Appraiser for the State, the Deputy Attorney General, and the attorneys for the estate. The alleged official appraised valuation of Mr. Vanderbilt's personalty on the day of his death, as given in The World, was $52,999,867. His real estate was valued at $20,000,000, making the total value of his estate $72,999,867.

It was admitted by those in a position to know that The World's list of Mr. Vanderbilt's personal possessions was correct, but the list of valuations given by The World as official appraisements was said to be inaccurate. The Appraiser for the State is Charles D. O'Connell, who has an office in the St. Paul Building. When Mr. O'Connell was asked about the published list, he said:

"The list is not copied from my report. My report is not completed, and probably will not be for a week."

"Will you say whether the list printed is correct?"

"I have not compared it. I do not think it is proper for me to talk about the report until after it is filed."

Deputy Attorney General G. B. D. Hasbrouck was more communicative. The stock and bond list, as printed, Mr. Hasbrouck said, was correct.

"How about the valuations?" he was asked.

"They are off."

"How much off?"

"Probably about $700,000."

Controller Coler, who has represented the city's interest in the settlement of the estate, said that the estimated valuation of $70,000,000, made about a year ago in order to save the estate from interest charges on the inheritance tax, had proved to be very near the true value.

"The amount due, based on the estimate then made, will be paid," Mr. Coler said. "There has been a statement printed that I would get a fee of $52,000 out of the estate. The amount of the tax on the personal holdings, based upon the valuation of $52,000,000, will be $520,000, and I get 1 per cent. of that, or $5,200."

Anderson & Anderson, the attorneys for the Vanderbilt estate, refused to discuss the list of stocks and appraisements. The schedule as printed in The World is as follows:

*Being market value of securities Sept. 12, 1899, the day Cornelius Vanderbilt died.

The dividends and interest earned in all Cornelius Vanderbilt's stocks and bonds was less than 4 per cent. on their market value.

As soon as the appraisers' report is filed the executors of the estate will pay into the State Treasury whatever difference there is found to be between the amount which was due on the estimate made a year ago, and the real value as shown by the appraisement. The difference will not be large.

The Vanderbilt schedules surprise Wall Street vastly. The securities he was supposed most to be interested in he held but scantily or not at all; a long list of stocks which nobody could have suspected him of even knowing about he held in substantial blocks. Canada Southern, Michigan Central, Union Pacific, Nickel Plate, Reading, Chicago and Northwestern common—in none of these did he have any interest noteworthy enough for consideration; but in Peoria and Eastern, in Toledo, St. Louis and Kansas City, and in Quicksilver mining property he had thousands of shares. With the latter he would never have permitted public identification of his name; all of the former have been recognized, more or less authoritatively, as Vanderbilt properties.

Noticeable is the fact that in the very foremost of the Vanderbilt railways the head of the family was an owner of mortgage bonds rather than of stocks. He had $2,000,000 New York Central stocks and $10,000,000 New York Central bonds; 100 shares of Michigan Central stock was overshadowed by over $1,000,000 Michigan Central bonds.

Relatively large holdings in Three C's and in Chesapeake and Ohio are explained by Mr. Vanderbilt's personal friendship for Melville Ingalls, and the personal equation can be recognized in other parts of his security list, in addition to those strictly accommodation investments represented by shares in Summer resort casinos, in dwelling improvement schemes, and the like.

What the conservative observers of the schedules will especially note and be surprised at is the fact that Mr. Vanderbilt was not the owner of a single Government bond. He had over 7,000 shares of Brooklyn Rapid Transit stock. Various are the indications that Cornelius Vanderbilt made his own investments on his own account. Traditional rules he put quite aside. Half of the stocks he selected for investment were under par.

DR. HILLIS ATTACKS CREEDS.

Truth, He Says, Existed Apart from Creed and Dogma—Dr. Purves Replies.

Before the Nineteenth Century Club at Sherry's last night the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis and the Rev. Dr. George T. Purves delivered addresses on "Creed and Dogma," the former taking the stand against both and the latter defending them.

Dr. Hillis took the stand that the Bible does not create religious truth. "Truth," he said, "existed long before the Bible, which rather registered pre-existing truths. As long as God is God and as long as man is man, it will be wrong to kill and to steal." Truth, he said, existed apart from creed and dogma. Creeds, he said, must be constantly changing, just as man was constantly changing. "The 'Church,'" he said, "that is sufficiently dead not to need anything new in its creed is dead indeed. God's name let it rest.

"We want to get over the folly of trying to protect the truth by expelling it," he said. "Whenever a man rises up with a new idea the General Assembly gets together and tries to expel him and the truth. Truth will remain; argument cannot hurt it. God's truth will take care of us. We need not take care of it."

Mr. Hillis made an attack on heresy trials instancing those of Dr. Briggs, Prof. Henry Smith, and Prof. Swing. In the case of Dr. Smith he said the ministers decided to expel him because he thought there were two Isaiahs. "One-half of the judges," he said, "knew nothing of Hebrew and little of Isaiah, yet they put it to a vote. 'All those in favor of one Isaiah,' it said, 'raise their hands,' and so it went on. But they might have gone further and voted to have an eclipse every morning."

Dr. Hillis also made a plea for a reformed theological curriculum. He said that in three large colleges in this country a book was used as a text book that taught 2,450 theories of total depravity and every theory was wrong or society was built on a false basis. In addition to those strictly accommodation investments represented by shares in Summer resort casinos, in dwelling improvement schemes, and the like. The theory of justice in politics, of how to do away with poorhouse and gallows and sin and wrong just as Jesus Christ taught. "Physically," said Dr. Hillis, "we are riding in Pullman cars, but mentally we are jolting along in ox carts."

Dr. Purves, in replying, said that creeds and dogmas were attacked because they offered a shining mark. It was easy, he said, to be an iconoclast. The message of the nineteenth to the twentieth century, he said, was, first, the admitted absolute necessity of religion. Even science admitted that. The other message was the vitality of the Christian religion. All creeds, he said, were born out of intense controversies and great intellectual struggles. He said that churches could not exist without creeds. There was something in a creed, he said, that gave power.

LYING-IN HOSPITAL REPORT.

New Building Described — Poverty of the Immigrant Class—Midwifery Question.

The annual report of the Society of the Lying-in Hospital for the year which ended Sept. 30 last describes its new building, which was donated by J. Pierpont Morgan, and the completion of which at Second Avenue and Eighteenth Street, will commemorate the one hundred and second year of the society's existence. In the building will be 200 beds and every department necessary to the treatment and comfort of patients. The structure will be eight stories high and fire-proof, and the wall materials are buff Indiana limestone and red brick for the front and buff and glazed brick elsewhere. The fiber area available will be 140,000 square feet.

The report calls attention to an increase of 6 per cent. in the number of women treated by midwives, and also to the abuse and malpractice of this class and the introduction of a bill at the last session of the Legislature to regulate the practice of midwifery in this State by others than legally authorized physicians. It also shows the accommodations at the disposal of the Department of Charities in the Borough of Manhattan for women in childbirth, and says that it finds it difficult to believe that the sixty-eight beds for waiting women and fifty-six beds for childbirth cases are inadequate.

Treating of the immigrant class, the report cites statistics to show that the average wages received by the husbands of women treated was $20.84 per month, so that, rent paid, there remained about 70 cents per day on which to support and clothe each family. The data are given to show how impossible it is for these people to save anything for medical attendance.

Reference is made to the work accomplished by the Diet Kitchen and the Ladies' Auxiliary. The expenses of the society in conducting its charitable work during the year were $28,451.20, or $18.16 for each patient.

A tribute is paid in the report to the late Frederic Bronson, Treasurer of the society.

POOR OPINION OF CUBANS

Sam Small Says They Are Inferior to the Southern Negroes.

Constitutional Convention Will Be Delayed Until the Annexation Sentiment Has Been Strengthened.

Sam Small, the Georgia evangelist, who has been serving as Chaplain in the volunteer army in Cuba, arrived in the city on the Ward Line steamship Mexico yesterday. He has a very poor opinion of the inhabitants of Cuba, especially the former insurgents, and considers them, as he says, "immeasurably inferior to the Southern darky."

"The Constitutional Convention," he said, "is, of course, the centre of attraction on the island just now. That assemblage is nothing short of a conundrum. There are four 'niggers' in it, and the rest of the gang is on a par with them. Talk about making a Constitution! They have no idea, conception, or even a faint discernment of what they are expected to do. I could take any thirty high school boys in the City of New York and in thirty days make a better Constitution than that gang can make in thirty months.

"This element is antagonistic to American ideas, and is bitterly opposed to any Constitution, or, I should say, code, that is formed on American lines. It will be December, 1901, before the so-called Constitution can be brought before the United State Congress for ratification, and 1902 before the Government of the island can be turned over to the Cubans. During this time the annexation element will gain in strength and prepare to fight the 'code,' and the final question for the American Congress to decide will be either the approval of this so-called Constitution, or the acceptance of the offer of annexation."

"This idea of annexation is the ambition of Wood's life. He has been very shrewd in constituting his Cabinet of annexation elements, and at the same time playing wide with the revolutionists in the convention. All this time his policy has been to draw things toward the annexation idea, and if he is left in charge indefinitely he will bring that result to pass.

"As to Cuba and its opportunities for American capital they are simply incalculable. If trusts and syndicates are allowed to subjugate the island the inhabitants of Cuba will be in ten years' time simply 'hewers of wood and drawers of water' for foreign capitalists."

Mr. Small said that he had recently spent two days in the Havana Jail for contempt of court. He had been summoned to court as a witness in a case against the city editor of The Havana Journal, of which he was the editor. Thinking himself discharged he came to the United States on a business trip. "When I returned they locked me up for not getting permission to leave. It's a peculiar Cuban custom. I can't understand it at all," he said.

SKIRT DANCERS, NO SKIRTS.

Grand Jury Investigating the Performances at a Dinner.

The Queens County Grand Jury suspended the investigation of the Democratic County Convention scandal on Monday afternoon to listen to a story from the proprietor of a well-known resort in the Astoria section relative to a dinner given at his place on Thursday last.

District Attorney Merrill says the dinner was given by an organization composed exclusively of liquor dealers doing business in Queens. Mr. Merrill claims to have sworn testimony that dancers were introduced, and some fancy skirt work resulted. The skirts became shorter, and it is claimed the altogether was the rule of the dancing.

Mr. Merrill says the proprietor of the place was willing to become a witness, and after obtaining the story from him, he was sent before the Grand Jury. Yesterday there were many liquor dealers before the Grand Jury, and it is rumored there may be indictments.

WOMAN DIES ON BROADWAY.

Excitement of Her Journey Brings Fatal Attack of Heart Disease.

Mrs. Ann English, sixty-four years old, weighing 250 pounds, of 546 North Twenty-fourth Street, Philadelphia, dropped dead from heart disease yesterday afternoon at Broadway and Broome Street. Mrs. English and her husband, Matthew English, arrived in the city yesterday afternoon and took a Broadway car up town, intending to visit Mrs. English's sister, Mrs. Annie Smith, of 404 Broome Street. The couple got off the car at Broome Street, and while walking across the street the woman threw up her hands and fell to the ground.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 11.—Mrs. Matthew M. English of this city, who died suddenly in New York City to-day, kept a small confectionary store at 546 North Twenty-fourth Street. She was afflicted with heart disease. In the excitement of getting ready to go to New York she had a fainting spell, but recovered sufficiently to go on her trip.

GAVE HIS FRIEND HIS MONEY.

Riley Was Found Unconscious in Feeney's House and Died the Next Day.

A motion was made yesterday by Lawyer John L. Leary in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, to open the default taken by the plaintiff in the suit of W. B. Davenport, as administrator of John Riley, against John Feeney. Riley and Feeney were friends, and Riley lived in Feeney's home. In January, 1899, Riley feared he would not survive a necessary operation, and drew $800 from bank. He gave $788 to Feeney, telling him he wanted him to have the money if he died.

Riley slept in a room with three small children of Feeney. The next morning Riley was found unconscious from gas in the room and two of the children were dead. Riley died while being removed to a hospital. It was thought that Riley had turned on the gas to commit suicide.

Some months ago Riley's father, in Ireland, began an action for the recovery of the money alleged to have been given by Riley to Feeney. The case was taken by plaintiff by default. Mrs. Feeney says that her husband was so deeply affected by the death of their children that he neglected his affairs and lost all of his property.

Dinner to Gov.-Elect Odell.

Governor-elect Odell will come to the city to-day and will be entertained at dinner at the home of George L. Rives, President of the Charter Revision Commission. Gov. Roosevelt was invited, and accepted the invitation, but at the request of Senator Platt recalled it to participate in the Centennial celebration in Washington.

WIDOW SUES GAS COMPANY.

Says Defective Meters Caused Her Husband's Death.

A lawsuit of peculiar interest will come up to-day before Judge Beach and a jury in Part III. of the Supreme Court. The New Amsterdam Gas Company is being sued for $25,000 damages for having, it is alleged, caused the death of Alfred Von Mechow in February, 1899, by gas poisoning.

The suit is brought by the widow, Fredericka Von Mechow, whose counsel is Joseph I. Green of 280 Broadway, and it arose indirectly from the recent gas war between the New Amsterdam and Standard Companies. On Feb. 27, 1899, it is alleged, the East River branch of the New Amsterdam Company put in gas meters at 1,364 Third Avenue, and during the operation there was an escape of gas which filtered through the entire house and finally collected in the apartment of Alfred Von Mechow, who lived on the top floor.

The process of filtration was slow, and, although the smell of gas was strong, the Mechow family retired to rest on the night of Feb. 27 without any apprehension of danger.

Mr. Mechow, who was in a low condition physically, occupied a room by himself. It is believed that most of the gas collected in his room. At 8 o'clock the next morning he awoke with a sensation of suffocation. Realizing the situation, he immediately rushed down stairs to the street, where he dropped dead. His wife and daughter were found later in their rooms in a semi-conscious condition. Other tenants in the house were also, it is said, made ill.

"At the inquest," said Mr. Green yesterday, "Dr. Donlin, the Coroners' physician, attributed the cause of death to asphyxiation."

The case is said to have no precedent. The New Amsterdam Gas Company makes a general denial of the allegations in the plaintiff's complaint.

Dinner Sets

Beautiful serviceable Christmas gifts in this greatly belated arrival, that shall cost considerably less than their actual worth. We expected these weeks—almost months ago. Had they arrived then they would without doubt sold quickly enough at the prices they were intended to bring. Now, eighty-four purchasers may each have one of these handsome sets at a saving of $10 or $12.

All are Theodore Haviland goods. One set, comprising 100 pieces, in two elegant decorations, all handles in clouded gold, at $20, though well worth $30.

A few sets of 100 pieces, including soup tureen and 3 large platters, handsome border decoration, heavily gilded handles, at $25, instead of $35.

Some 113-piece sets, in 3 beautiful border decorations, at $30. These would be fairly priced at $45.

Dinner sets of 120 pieces, in the newest, most tasteful border decoration, at $35, though $47.50 would be a reasonable price.

CANDIES

The purest, most delicious, and freshest candies in Greater New York are Wanamaker's. The crankiest candy man in the country rules our factory. He demands the same purity of materials, the same spotless cleanliness, and the same careful work in the holiday rush as at any other time. And he wouldn't think of making candies ahead for the Christmas rush. Do you know what this means in candy buying? He increases his output, but maintains the same high excellence, and keeps the candies constantly fresh.

The Wanamaker Store

The CHRISTMAS DECORATIONS The Chimes and Organ Invite You to Wanamaker's To-day

With business throbbing through every corner of this old Stewart store, we have not allowed the hurry and rush to detract from our preparation for your enjoyment. The decorators have expressed the fullest Christmas sentiment. Here is the church in almost actual size, and from its interior come the full strong tones of the Hymnolia in a spirited recital of Christmas anthems by an expert organist. And between the anthems ring out the merry chimes of Christmas.

Santa Claus is seen from a dozen places; cupids are swaying in the air as they ring the Christmas bells. The whole rotunda is trellised with evergreens; and the store is festooned with it.

The store is full of the Christmas spirit everywhere. It is delightful merely for sight-seers; it is most comfortable and fully satisfying for holiday shoppers. It's display of holiday merchandise is unmatched in Greater New York. Nowhere else is there an equal showing of Books, Toys, Art Goods, Fancy Goods, Handkerchiefs. Splendid gatherings of Furniture, Rugs, Silverware, China and Cut Glass, Furs and other Wraps for Women, House Coats, Neckwear, and other giveable Wear-things for Men—and the list has scarcely started.

To miss Wanamaker's is to miss the great Christmas store of the Metropolis.

The Wanamaker Store

Evening Wraps

Here is an ideal gift suggestion. Many women who are amply supplied with all other garments do not have an opera wrap. This is the opportunity the giver is looking for. We bring more of these Wraps to America than any other store; and this makes possible here such low prices as are unknown elsewhere on these luxurious robes. Take for example these handsome, full-length

Opera Capes at $25

They can scarcely be matched for ten dollars more. Made of Vicuna Chudda cloth, in various light shades, with small shoulder cape, and high collar trimmed with Mouffion fur. Luxuriously lined with quilted satin in evening colors. A wonderful wrap for its price.

Then two more:

$60—Full length coats; Empire effect; yoke elaborately braided with self-color; collar, revers and edges of white Thibet; quilted surah lining.

Men's Winter OVERCOATS

There's some appositeness in talking about winter overcoats nowadays. It's a subject upon which the mind of the average man is likely to drift of itself. We rather enjoy the chance to lead his thoughts in that direction, for we are proud of our overcoat stock—have made a hobby of it, with a particular view to attracting and satisfying the man of taste and ideas in dress. Such a man, by the way, no longer has his overcoats made to order. Why should he?—he can get the best productions of overcoat specialists for far less by coming here for them. Take, for example, the following specimens from our collection:

$55—Overcoat of genuine Sedan Montagnac. Compare this with any made at $100.

$42—Of dark diagonal gray mixed velour; lined with heavy silk. One of the most stylish overcoats we show. The kind for which your tailor would ask $75.

$38—Of imported Irish frieze; dark gray mixture; silk lined throughout; a splendidly wearing quality. Same goods, with black satin shoulders, and striped worsted body lining, at $35.

$32.50—A very swell Raglan, just received. Material of dark gray rough-faced cheviot; silk lined throughout; very loose back and broad shoulders. It's a Wanamaker Raglan. Your tailor would say $50 for one no better.

$25, $20 and $15—Some splendid Raglans and regular overcoats.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Boys' CLOTHING

Does your young hopeful's Christmas list include certain replenishments of his wardrobe, upon which he has set his heart? Or have you, independently, decided to gladden him with a new suit or overcoat, just a little handsomer than usual? Then the path of your best interests lies, well-blazed, towards Wanamaker's. For here, in our Boys' Clothing Store, Yule-tide suggestion is ripe; you cannot but be stimulated by this broad field for choosing.

Of suggestions here a few:

Triple-cape Overcoats, in blue and brown, of fine kersey; sizes 2½ to 8 years, at $12.

Military Overcoats, with Russian hood and belt; sizes 2½ to 8 years, in cadet gray, at $7; same, of plain blue, at $7.50.

Raglan Overcoats, extremely smart in cut; of cheviot; for boys of 4 to 16 years, at $13.50.

Top Coats, for dress wear, in various up-to-date shades of cheviot; with cuffs and velvet collar; sizes 4 to 16 years, at $8.50.

Russian Blouse Suits of silk velveteen, in blue and brown. Very effective suits for boys of 3 to 8 years. $8.50.

Regulation Sailor Suits of storm serge, with chevrons on sleeve, lanyard and whistle. Made exactly like those worn in the navy. 3 to 12-year sizes, $7.50.

Double-breasted suits, in plain and mixed fabrics; sizes for 8 to 16 years, from $6 to $12.

Here are 300 trousers of all-wool cheviot for boys of 3 to 16 years at 75c each. They would be good value if priced $1.

Second floor, Ninth street.

RIBBONETTE

This is delicately perfumed. A Paris idea. Originally intended for the trimming of women's and children's underwear. Found immediate favor for that purpose. But a utility other than that the designer had in mind has been discovered—that of tying up Christmas presents. We're selling a great deal to be devoted to that use.

Ribbonette comes in 7 colors, two odors. Heart-shaped bolts at 40c and 75c each; or 8c and 15c a yard.

Broadway and Tenth street.

Babies' Dresses

This is a very pretty little dress at a dollar. It's of cambric; has a round yoke of 5 rows of embroidery insertion and plaits, then an embroidery ruffle; the skirt is trimmed with cluster of plaits and ruffle of embroidery. Another attractive style is this dress of lawn. It has a round yoke of lace insertion and bands of hemstitching; also lawn ruffle edged with lace; the skirt has deep lace ruffle and row of lace insertion. The price is $2.25.

The above are just a couple of sample styles from a splendid stock of infants' dresses. There are some at but 25c each, and through a wide range up to $60 for exquisitely trimmed imported affairs.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Girls' MACKINTOSHES

Their utility has long since been conceded. They protect the dress on windy, rainy days when an umbrella is little more than an aggravation. These are particularly and conscientiously made, in lengths of 34 to 50 inches, and as a useful Christmas gift can hardly be excelled. They're put up in pretty boxes with that end in view.

$3.25—Of navy blue or garnet plaid-back serge; double detachable cape; velvet collar.

$5—Of navy blue or garnet plaid-back serge; deep circular cape and plaid hood.

Second floor, Ninth street.

Among the FURS

Renewed activity in this fur store of ours the past few days. We've been awaiting this movement with perfect confidence. Our splendid preparedness is apparent everywhere. There's full representation in the most varied gathering of every sort of fur in which you might be interested. $4 to $4,000 is the price-range. That gives widest possible choosing. And every piece here is a worthy one, and in proper style, though the price of it be not so high as some furriers would ask. Here are some prices:

Collarettes—some of black Astrakhan, trimmed with tail, at $9; some of dyed Opossum at same price.

Natural Lynx Collarettes of very fine quality, at $35 each.

Handsome Persian Lamb Collarettes, at $30 to $50.

Mink Collarettes, two elegant styles, at $45 and $50.

Then the coats and jackets. There are the electric seal Eton jackets, with shawl collars; handsome garments, at $37.50. Others at $40 and $50.

Persian Lamb Coats, at $65 and $90.

Persian Lamb Coats, with chinchilla collar and revers, at $125 and $150.

Genuine Seal Coats at $200, and up to $350.

Second floor, Broadway.

House Coats

Make a man's rest-time comfortable—every man's gratitude responds to the donor of creature comfort; and the House Coat is one of the most important accessories of comfort at home.

We have a splendid variety—the smartest-looking, easiest feeling house coats that are made. Sixty-five carefully selected patterns to choose from. Made of plain navy blue, maroon, or brown tricot, reversible wool materials, plain outside with plaid inside showing at cuffs, collar and pocket; also of velveteen and matelasse. Prices range from $5 to $13.50.

Men's Store, Broadway and Ninth.

UMBRELLAS

Men's and women's. A particularly good seller among the men's stocks is the 28-inch Union taffeta umbrella that we show in a wide variety of natural wood and fancy handles, $2 and $2.50 each.

We're selling a great many of the same grade of women's umbrellas also. Some, 26-inch, Union taffeta with all sorts of fancy handles, at $2 each. Same size, of twilled silk, strongly, neatly made, various handsome handles, at $2.50 each.

Broadway.

Eiderdown Sacques

This is the very height of the eiderdown garment season, and reductions in price are rare. But here comes a maker that tired of holding his stock, and it becomes ours at a much lower price than he reasonably hoped to get.

Two new styles. Both bargains. Both of ripple eiderdown, in various solid colors. One has large sailor collar trimmed with satin ruffle; the other with small collar bound with satin. Both close in front with silk frogs and ribbon at neck. Intended to sell for $1.75 each. Price, $1.25.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Women's Skirts

Fifty walking skirts at $2.50 each—an exceptionally good value. They are of single or double-faced cloths—brown, gray and black. Finished with rows of stitching.

Here's a group of handsome, well-tailored skirts at $6. And another that comprises fine, stylish garments, of handsome double-faced cloths, in 2 shades of Oxford, at $9 each—tailoring equal to that in any $15 skirt we know of.

BUILDER GIBBONS ACCUSED.

Held on a Charge of Forging the Indorsements on Three Notes.

Richard Gibbons, a contractor and builder of Brooklyn, has been indicted by the Kings County Grand Jury for forgery in the second degree, and is under $10,000 bail.

The complaint against Gibbons was the outcome of the suit of the Nassau National Bank of Brooklyn against Gibbons and Roger Costello, to recover the value of three notes aggregating $3,100, bearing the indorsements of Gibbons and Costello, and which were accepted by the bank and judgment by default taken. Costello swore his signature on the three notes had been forged.

TENEMENT HOUSE ABUSES

Commission Examines President of the Board of Health.

Mr. Murphy Intimates that Pure Food Is of More Importance than Sanitary Dwellings.

Another public meeting was held by the Tenement House Commission yesterday afternoon. Paul D. Cravath again acted as Chairman, and the principal witness was President Michael C. Murphy of the Board of Health.

Members of the commission present besides Mr. Cravath were Robert W. De Forest, I. N. Phelps Stokes, Dr. G. B. Fowler, Secretary of the Commission Laurence Viller, and Hugh Bonnep.

President Murphy was put on the stand and the Chairman asked:

"How many Inspectors have you in your department in the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx."

"About seventy. We are not quite up to the full limit allowed by law."

"How many tenements that your Inspectors found unfit for habitation have you demolished?"

"Not one. We have very little cause to go into extreme measures, and where cause exists we do not dare destroy a house."

The question of dark hallways was taken up, the law requiring that in tenement houses these be lighted from 8 A. M. to 10 P. M. The Commissioner said that, as far as practicable, the law was enforced though he had no doubt there were many violations. In order to force a complete compliance with the law, Mr. Murphy said, at least 150 Inspectors would be needed.

"But if I had 150 men," he said, "I would employ most of them on the examination of food supplies. The question of sanitary tenements is at best a local one. We find the uniformed sanitary policeman the most efficient in our service. The uniform of the officer does more than any argument of an Inspector can accomplish."

"Is the law requiring owners of tenements to file their names and the descriptions of their properties complied with?" Mr. Cravath asked.

"It is not."

"Why, then, is the penalty not enforced for owners who fail to comply?"

"Because it is impracticable. This tenement-house problem is not and can not be understood by this or any other commission not supplied with years of experience. Speaking of cleanliness, you can appoint five or ten Inspectors and let them meet five of mine, and let them visit any three or two to ten of the most filthy tenement houses in the city. Let them inspect and order a cleaning, following it with a coat of whitewash from roof to cellar. In one month from that date let them visit the place again, and they will find it as bad as ever."

"What, then, do you propose to advise to help the evil?" the Chairman asked.

"Educate the people to cleanliness."

He then suggested to the commission that before it report to Albany it should turn over a copy of its report to the heads of the different departments, who then, after deliberation, might make valuable suggestions. Mr. Cravath thanked him for the suggestion and said he thought it an excellent one.

He did not think well of enforcing the law compelling owners to register their names with the department, because in many cases tenements were owned by highly respectable people with honored names, who acquired the properties when the present district, known as the "red-light" district, was a residential portion of the city. These people, he said, did not know for what purposes their agents leased the buildings, and in many cases would be injured were it known that they owned such places.

The next witness from the Board of Health was the Sanitary Superintendent, Dr. Roberts. His testimony was largely a repetition of President Murphy's. He was in favor of keeping hall lights burning, and added the additional reason as a preventive of fires caused by using matches in dark hallways.

The question of "back to back," or "rear," tenements was then taken up. The witness said there was not a single house of that kind in New York, and therefore he objected to the term "back to back," and preferred the term "rear."

Mr. Cravath produced his inspectors' report, and said:

"According to this report I find eighty-nine tenements in the city that are actually 'back to back,' allowing neither a proper entrance of light or ventilation."

The witness responded:

"If you will give me a list of those houses I will visit them, and report on them to you. Until I have myself seen such tenements I refuse to concede that they exist."

On returning to the subject of dark hallways, Dr. Roberts was asked whether it was not true that the inspections made by the department last May were announced beforehand. A newspaper clipping to this effect was then read to the doctor.

"And what does that prove?" he asked. "The inspection may have been going on for three days before the newspapers got hold of it."

"But it is a fact that our inspectors found an extensive violation of this law," the Chairman put in.

Dr. Roberts denied this. In answer to a question, he said he favored a lock light which could not be turned out.

"We have discovered three houses, tenements, where in each house during the last three years there have been twenty-two cases of consumption. Were you aware of this?"

"Perfectly. I visited those houses myself."

"Why were those houses not condemned?"

"Because there was no tangible reason why the houses should be so infected, and because to this day we cannot tell what caused it. The city now has claims for $3,000,000 for condemned houses outstanding against it, and that is enough. During the past year we have condemned 314 tenements. In most cases the defects were promptly remedied, even before the five days' time allowed the tenants to get out." Other heads of the Health Department, including Dr. Fred H. Dillingham, Assistant Sanitary Superintendent for the Borough of Manhattan, then testified on the same lines as their predecessors.

The commission then adjourned. It will hold an executive session this evening.

MAGISTRATE KNEW THE MAN.

Prisoner, Unkempt, Had Served Him at His Club.

A young man, unkempt in appearance and sullen and sodden from drink, was led up to the bar of the Essex Market Court yesterday morning. He had been picked up from the sidewalk on Eldridge Street the night before, where he had fallen in a drunken stupor.

"Haven't I seen you before?" asked Magistrate Cornell, as the prisoner stood trembling before him.

"Yes, Sir. You saw me often at the University Clubhouse, where I had charge of the cigar counter," replied the prisoner.

"I remember you well, now," mused the Court. "What a pretty boy you were then. How did you come to fall? Was it drink?"

"Yes, Sir," replied the young man, doggedly.

"Too bad, too bad," said the Magistrate. "Will you promise me you won't drink any more? Yes? That's right. I hope I will never see you in this condition again. Discharged."

WILL RETURN TO CHINA.

Cabl. Message Asks for the Rev. R. M. Mateer's Presence.

In reply to messages sent to missionaries in Che-Foo and Tsin-Tau, China, asking as to the advisability of certain missionaries now on furlough returning to China the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions yesterday received the following cable message from the Rev. W. O. Elterich at Che-Foo:

Mateer come. Others await letters.

In accordance with this message the Rev. and Mrs. Robert M. Mateer will probably start for China at an early date. They are now at Chambersburg, Penn. Their station is at Weishien, but, as that is far in the interior, they will hardly go there just yet.

Training School for Servants.

A committee of women had a secret conference yesterday forenoon at a working-woman's boarding house at 219 Second Avenue with Mrs. H. Justin Beale, who is engaged in the effort to organize servant girls into a union. The women discussed a plan to establish a training school for servants in connection with the union. The color line is likely to be drawn if the union is formed.

LEGAL NOTES.

DEMAND OF PAYMENT OF PAST DUE NOTE.—The German-American Bank of Rochester, in April, 1896, held considerable paper that it had discounted for the benefit of the firm of Atwater, Armstrong & Clark, and the firm, being unable to pay its obligations, assigned all the assets of the partnership to the bank, as security for the partnership obligations held by it, among them notes made by the firm to the order of Agnes L., wife of Mr. Atwater, which she indorsed to the bank after maturity. The parties were of the opinion that the assets were more than sufficient to pay the bank in full, and Mr. Atwater was anxious that the balance should be applied in payment of the notes held by his wife, upon which there was $7,467 due. To accomplish that purpose, it was arranged that Mrs. Atwater should indorse the notes to the bank, she to have credit equal to the amount due on them, the deposit to stand as security for their payment. Later, Mr. Atwater was allowed to draw various sums from the deposit of his wife, and on June 8 she drew out $4,400, with which she paid the bank for property purchased from it by a firm of which she was a member. On Dec. 23 but $181.18 remained. After demand upon Mrs. Atwater to pay the notes, as indorser, they were protested, in April, 1897. The suit then brought by the bank against Mrs. Atwater resulted on the trial in a judgment of dismissal, which was affirmed by the Appellate Division, in Rochester. The Court of Appeals has now unanimously upheld that decision. The Court holds, in an opinion by Chief Judge Parker, that the bank was bound to demand payment of the maker of these past due notes within a reasonable time after receiving them, and that, under the circumstances of this case, it became the bank's duty, when it ascertained that the assets to be applied to pay the notes were not sufficient for that purpose, to make such demand, and upon default to give immediate notice of dishonor to Mrs. Atwater, the indorser. Notice in such case served nearly two weeks after the demand was held to be too late to hold the indorser. A demand by the bank upon Mrs. Atwater that the moneys she had been permitted by it to draw against the note be returned, the Court says, was not equivalent to a notice of protest.

THE CIVIL SERVICE LAW.—Edward A. Hayes was appointed nearly two years ago by the Controller, with others, under the law of 1897, as assistant expert accountant to examine the accounts and financial condition of the municipal or public corporation consolidated by the Greater New York charter. On Aug. 10 last Hayes was notified by the Civil Service Commission that these appointments under the act of 1897 terminated, and the positions were vacant. He was told, however, that if he elected to stay and perform the duties of the position efforts would be made to obtain some compensation for him. He did so, and was paid his regular salary to Oct. 14, 1899. Hayes continued to work until Dec. 23, when he left the department. He was paid his salary to the latter date, after legislation authorizing it had been procured. The services he had performed under his temporary appointments were as appointee under the civil service rules. Mr. Hayes having failed to obtain a rating under competitive examination applied to the Supreme Court, at Special Term, for an alternative writ of mandamus to compel his reinstatement, claiming his original appointment was permanent, and his removal was illegal, he having served in the voluntary Fire Department. The Appellate Division, on appeal by Hayes from refusal of his application for the writ, has decided in an opinion by Justice Ingraham that the decision of the Civil Service Commission that ing acquiesced on Aug. 10, 1899, in the decision of the Civil Service Commission that the employment under the act of 1897 was temporary in its character, and then continued in the service under temporary appointment, was in no position to claim he was still employed under the original appointment.

INTERPLEADER.—The Globe & Rutgers Fire Insurance Company admitted its liability for $850 as the amount of a fire loss, under a policy issued by it to Charles H. Leggett, but before the adjusted loss was paid, the money was attached in a suit by Henry Lozier against Leggett, and after judgment had been obtained, Lozier demanded from the insurance company sufficient of the attached fund to satisfy the execution he had issued. On refusal, Sheriff Grell and Lozier sued the company to compel such payment. The company's application thereupon to interplead Leggett, and John S. Butcher, who made some claim to the fund, having been refused, it answered by general denial. The complaint was then amended, and Butcher, before the time to answer had expired, filed with the company notice of claim to the fund, based on an alleged assignment from Leggett. The company, not recognizing this claim, was sued by Butcher, and then asked to interplead the latter with Sheriff Grell and Lozier. The Appellate Division, in this city, has just decided that the denial of that application at Special Term, because the company had a good defense against Butcher's suit, as not being "commenced within twelve months after the fire," was erroneous. Justice O'Brien, in his opinion, holds that where, as here, two persons were contending for the same fund, which the company only desired to pay to the party rightfully entitled to it, there was no reason why it should be put to the expense and trouble of two lawsuits, when the title to the fund could be litigated between the contending parties without the presence of the company.

TEARFUL YOUNG PRISONER.

Annie Trisky, Aged 11, and Her Supposed Mother, Accused of Shoplifting.

One of the most sorrowful and tearful of the youthful prisoners who are confined in the rooms of the Gerry Society is eleven-year-old Annie Trisky. According to the story told by her to a Magistrate in the Yorkville Police Court and corroborated by the woman she calls her mother, her desire to have a new doll is responsible for her arrest, as well as that of her mother, who is locked up on a charge of shoplifting. Agent Whitling of the Gerry Society is making inquiries to find out if Mrs. Trisky is really her mother.

Mrs. Trisky and the little girl were arrested in Bloomingdale's dry goods store Monday afternoon. Miss Tillie Austin, the private detective, said she saw the little girl take a doll from one of the counters and put it in a basket. At the station the basket was examined, and a number of articles which had come from the dry goods store found in it. Mrs. Trisky said that she had paid for them all.

When the woman was examined in the police court yesterday she said that she had two other children, one of whom was named Rose.

"Have you a sister named Rose?" asked Agent Whitling of the Gerry Society of the little girl.

"No," she said; but she insisted despite all cross-questions that Mrs Trisky was her mother.

Mrs. Trisky says that it is ridiculous to suppose that the little girl is not her daughter.

$100 FOR A MISSING BOY.

Mr. Cuneo Thinks His Extraordinary-Looking Son Can Be Recognized.

M. Cuneo of Greensburg, Penn., wants his fifteen-year-old runaway boy Andrew back home in time for the Christmas dinner very badly. The Police Department received a letter yesterday from Mr. Cuneo in which he says that $100 is on deposit in the Farmers' National Bank of Greensburg which will be paid to any one who will furnish on or before Christmas Day any information relating to the boy, who disappeared from his home on Aug. 3 last.

The boy is very large for his age, being 5 feet 6 inches in height, and weighing in the neighborhood of 185 pounds. He has black curly hair and a very red face. It is believed he may be found in a museum or a circus.

REFEREE IN A STRANGE CASE.

Court Papers Do Not Disclose the Nature of the Adae vs. Adae Action.

Justice Blanchard, in the Supreme Court, yesterday, appointed Alfred Lauterbach, a son of Edward Lauterbach, as referee to hear and determine the issues in an action brought by Lillian May Adae against Charles Flamen Adae.

The only paper filed in the court was the order appointing the referee, and this did not disclose the nature of the action. Avery, Schlesinger & Paul are counsel for the plaintiff. At their office no information would be given about the case.

The only Charles Flamen Adae who is known in the city is an artist and architect. He was a member of the Architectural League, but resigned about six months ago. His present address is not known.

THE DURYEA WILL CONTEST

Surrogate Hears Testimony of the Manufacturer's Dissipation.

TOOK FORTY DRINKS IN A DAY

Clerks in Grant Brothers' Brokerage House Went with Him on His Sprees—Generally on the Bowery.

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., Dec. 11.—Surrogate Seabury, having decided to reopen the case in the matter of the will of the late Edgar E. Duryea, testimony was taken to-day in the Surrogate's Court.

J. Campbell Thompson, counsel for the three daughters of the starch manufacturer, who are contesting the will, opened the proceedings by stating that in January, 1896, Mrs. Duryea, wife of the testator, died, leaving a will by which she bequeathed everything to the children. This, counsel claimed, enraged Mr. Duryea, and caused him to lead a dissipated life, and in making his will he discriminated against his daughters in revenge for having been ignored in his wife's will.

The testimony given by all the witnesses called by Lawyer Thompson during the afternoon tended to establish the fact that Mr. Duryea during the last few years of his life resorted to the most violent forms of dissipation.

The first witness called was Willard S. Klein of 943 Belmont Avenue, Brooklyn, who was for eighteen years a clerk in the banking house of Grant Brothers, at 45 Broadway, through whom Duryea frequently dealt in stocks. Witness said he had been on many sprees with Duryea.

"Did you ever see him drink whisky?" asked Lawyer Thompson.

"I never saw him drink anything else," promptly replied the witness.

"With whom did he associate when out on one of those drinking sprees of his?"

"With anybody who came in his way usually."

"What places did you visit together?"

"Oh, when we left the offices of Grant Brothers, on Broadway, we usually strolled up Park Row and the Bowery. We usually stopped first at Steve Brodie's, and then we would probably wind up the evening at McGurk's, on the Bowery. 'Suicide Hall' was a favorite resort of the old man."

"Did you ever see Duryea drunk in the offices of Grant Brothers?"

"I never saw him sober there."

"How many drinks have you seen him take in a day?"

"Often as many as forty."

"Have you seen him so drunk that he fell down?"

"Oh, yes, many times. I have often had to take him to the Long Island Railway station and put him on the train to send him to Glen Cove, where his carriage would be waiting to take him home."

Mr. Duryea, the witness said, went on these sprees two or three times a month.

Cross-examined by Robert A. Honeyman, counsel for the will, the witness admitted that when accompanying Duryea on these trips he himself usually drank from twenty to forty glasses of whisky, but insisted that the liquor did not affect him.

Charles Curtis, twenty-five years old, of 322 Eighth Street, Brooklyn, was next called, and said that he had been in the employ of Grant Brothers eight years, and was also private secretary to Edgar E. Duryea. He said that he had gone out a number of times with Duryea, and drank whisky for half the night with him in various New York and Brooklyn saloons.

Julius Weintraugh, twenty-two years old, of 118 East Third Street, testified that he had been a clerk in the office of Grant Brothers for five years, and that he had frequently gone out and brought women to the front of the office building, where he would introduce Mr. Duryea to them as "Buffalo Bill."

"Did you do this at Duryea's request?" was asked.

"Yes, Sir. I got $5 for my trouble each time."

A recess was taken at this point, and when the hearing was reconvened counsel for the complainants asked an adjournment on the ground that several witnesses were not on hand to be examined. After considerable argument the hearing was adjourned to Friday morning.

There were no members of the Duryea family in the courtroom yesterday.

OLD MAN ROBBED IN A SALOON.

Albrecht Had Come from Meriden to Collect Draft—Suspects Arrested.

Suspected of robbing an old man of a draft and $120 in cash in a Greenwich Street saloon, George Becker and Albert Green, colored, both claiming residence at 68 Greenwich Street, were remanded in the Centre Street Court yesterday. Detectives stated that on Friday last Gottlieb Friedrich Albrecht, sixty years old, of Meriden, Conn., came to New York to cash a draft for $701 at the banking house of Speyer & Co., 30 Broad Street.

In the saloon at 68 Greenwich Street two men obtained possession of the draft and the old man's money, forged Albrecht's indorsement on the draft, and gave it to a person whose name the police would not reveal. The unknown person, into whose hands the draft came, turned it over to the police. Albrecht's son came after his father.

LAWYER SUES A MAGISTRATE.

Joseph Hlavac, Jr., Wants $50,000 from Magistrate Pool for Alleged Slander.

Lawyer Joseph Hlavac, Jr., has sued Police Magistrate Pool for $50,000 damages for an alleged slander which took place while the Magistrate was hearing a case in the Yorkville Police Court, in which Mr. Hlavac appeared as counsel.

The action grew out of a case which has been attracting the Magistrate's attention for some time, in which John B. Porter accused his son and Lawyer Hlavac of a conspiracy to defraud him. Magistrate Pool's alleged slander was in saying he thought he had charged too large a fee.

Mr. Hlavac said yesterday: "I only charged the young man $50, of which he still owes me $10. I showed some courtesy by not having Mr. Pool arrested by the Sheriff, as I might have done. I shall surely push the case unless he apologizes publicly."

THE WEATHER.

LOCAL FORECAST—Fair, fresh westerly winds.

A moderate disturbance which developed Monday night near Northeastern Lake Superior moved southeastward last night to the Southern New England Coast, causing a continuance of the snows in the lake region, and its extension through the Middle Atlantic States, Southern and Western New England. It was followed, however, by clearing weather, except on the Massachusetts coast; elsewhere the weather was fair. Temperatures have changed but little, except in the extreme Northwest, where there has been a rise of 8 to 24 degrees under the influence of a low pressure area, which now overlies the British Northwest. In the Pacific Coast and plateau regions the weather continued generally fair, with little change in temperature. Generally fair weather may be expected, except on the New England Coast, and probably North Dakota, where snow is likely. Snow flurries, however, may continue along the eastern lower lakes. Cloudy weather, with snow or rain, is probable to-morrow in the upper lake region, Upper and Middle Mississippi Valleys, the Lower Missouri Valley, and the central West. On the New England and Middle Atlantic Coasts the winds will be fresh westerly. On the South Atlantic Coast they will be fresh north to northeast.

The record of temperature for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from THE NEW YORK TIMES's thermometer and from the thermometer of the Weather Bureau is as follows:

	—Weather Bureau—TIMES. 1899.	1900.	1899.

THE TIMES's thermometer is 6 feet above the street level; that of the Weather Bureau is 285 feet above the street level.

Average temperatures yesterday were as follows:

The maximum temperature yesterday was 30 degrees at 2 P. M. The minimum temperature was 24 degrees at 7 A. M. At 8 A. M. the barometer registered 30.18; at 8 P. M. it registered 30.04. The humidity at 8 A. M. was 69 per cent.; at 8 P. M. it was 70 per cent.

NEWS OF THE RAILROADS.

RAILROAD TO REFUND BONDS.

Stockholders of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Approve Plan.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Dec. 11.—At a special meeting to-day of the stockholders of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad the matter of reorganizing the financial affairs of the road by issuing refunding bonds that shall bear a lesser rate of interest than the present outstanding securities of the company was discussed. The unanimous vote of the stock represented at the meeting was cast in favor of such action.

It was decided that the formulating of a plan be left with the Board of Directors for action. It is expected that a meeting of the board will be held in the near future, when plans will be decided upon for redeeming outstanding bonds with a new issue at a decreased rate of interest, and for acquiring by purchase lines that are now controlled by the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Company.

PENNSYLVANIA COAL COMPANY.

Rumor of Its Absorption by the Erie Road Revived.

None of the officials of the Pennsylvania Coal Company or the Erie Railroad would consent yesterday to say anything about the reported acquisition of the former company by the latter. Members of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. also declined to either affirm or deny the report. Rumors of such a deal have been current some time.

The basis for the latest rumors is the rise in the quotations of the coal company stock on the Stock Exchange list. A week ago 400 was offered for the stock, and on Friday this offer was raised to 475, but no sales were made at this figure, as those holding the stock wanted 700 for it. On Monday the official quotation was 500, but the firm of A. M. Kidder & Co. of 18 Wall Street later offered 600, and then 625, for the stock.

No sales, however, were made, nor have there been any transactions in this stock on the floor of the Exchange for some time, most of it having been held by the same families for years.

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY MEETING.

Chicago and Grand Trunk Purchase Ratified—Tributes to Mr. Hays.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—At a special meeting of the shareholders of the Grand Trunk Railroad to-day, the purchase of the Chicago and Grand Trunk Railroad was ratified.

Sir Charles Rivers Wilson, the President of the Grand Trunk Railroad, maintained that the new arrangement would reduce the obligations $60,000 a year, enable the whole length of the line to be double tracked, and, within a short time, make a magnificent system equal to any coming out of Chicago.

He paid a glowing tribute to the former General Manager of the Grand Trunk Railroad, Charles M. Hays, (now President of the Southern Pacific Railroad,) saying it was impossible to find a second Hays, but, he added, he believed George Bell Reeve (the former Traffic Manager of the Grand Trunk Railroad, and now the General Manager,) was the best man whose services could possibly be secured. He dilated on the sacrifice Mr. Reeve had made in giving up his retirement to take on the onerous duties of General Manager.

The shareholders congratulated the Directors on the action taken, and gratefully bade farewell to Mr. Hays.

It was announced at the meeting that Mr. Hays's staff will all remain with Mr. Reeve.

Brief Railroad Items.

Rumors were current yesterday that the Erie Railroad would be leased by the Pennsylvania Railroad. No confirmation or denial of the rumor could be had.

The Norfolk and Western Railroad has just placed an order with the Richmond Locomotive Works for ten Class W, 21 by 30, consolidation locomotives. The engines are designed especially for freight service, and are of the heaviest type.

The vacancy in the Board of Directors of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Company, caused by the death of Horace J. Hayden, was, at a meeting of the board yesterday, filled by the unanimous election of Mr. S. R. Callaway, President of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company. Resolutions of respect to the memory of Mr. Hayden were adopted.

The Directors of the various Vanderbilt lines will meet next week at the Grand Central Station to take action regarding the declaration of the semi-annual dividends of the Lake Shore, Michigan Central, New York, Chicago and St. Louis, &c., and the quarterly dividend on New York Central.

After some trouble a lot has been secured for the building of the Harlem Branch of the Railroad Men's Young Men's Christian Association, to be known as the John M. Toucey Memorial Building. The building will be located on the north side of One Hundred and Fiftieth Street, opposite Spencer Place. It will have a frontage of 52 feet and a depth of 62 feet. It will be built of red brick, with bluestone trimmings.

There were meetings yesterday afternoon of both the Passenger and Freight Committees of the Trunk Line Association. At the meeting of the Passenger Committee only routine business was transacted. Commissioner Farmer of the committee said that the passenger rate situation was excellent, and he knew of no complaints about violations of the passenger agreement. The principal business transacted by the Freight Committee related to iron and steel rates. The subject went over.

WOULD SHOOT A POLICEMAN.

Collins Demanded an Explanation of Day's Conduct Toward His Fiancee.

Policeman David Day of the East One Hundred and Fourth Street Station was at One Hundred and Fourth Street and Lexington Avenue yesterday morning, when he was approached by a young man who demanded an explanation from the policeman as to his conduct toward a certain young woman of Long Island City. The explanation was not forthcoming, evidently, and the young man remarked, excitedly:

"Then your time has come. I've been looking for you."

The man reached toward his hippocket, but he was nervous and excited and fumbled for a moment before he produced a loaded revolver. The policeman had been quicker. By the time the other had drawn his weapon he found the revolver of the officer pressed against his temple.

Seeing that he was powerless, the man surrendered and submitted to arrest. When he was arraigned yesterday morning in the Harlem Police Court, on a charge of felonious assault, he gave his name as Roger Collins, twenty-six years old, but refused to give his address. He is said to reside in Long Island City, where he was engaged to a young woman. His fiancée recently became acquainted with Day. The prisoner refused to give the name of the woman in the case, and had nothing to offer in his defense. He was held in $1,000 bail for trial. The policeman would not discuss the case.

QUICK WORK BY POLICE.

Stolen Horse and Buggy Recovered in Fifteen Minutes After an Exciting Chase.

Detectives Cells and Schinner of the Morrisania Police Station made an arrest yesterday, which is said to be the quickest piece of work ever done by policemen in this city. They arrested within fifteen minutes after the theft had been reported to Headquarters a man who was trying to get away with a horse and buggy which did not belong to him.

Dr. Charles W. Oaks of White Plains Road and Third Avenue, William's Bridge, is the owner of the horse and buggy. Yesterday morning he left the horse and buggy standing before a patient's house while he visited him. When he came out they were gone. A few moments later he called up Police Headquarters on the telephone. He was connected with the operator at the Telegraph Bureau there at 12:57 and gave him a description of the horse and rig. All the police stations in the borough of the Bronx were immediately notified and given the description.

Detectives Cells and Schinner were sent out from the Morrisania Station, at One Hundred and Sixty-fourth Street and Third Avenue, four miles from where the rig was stolen. As they left the station house they saw a rig answering the description.

The horse was flecked with foam, and looked as if it had been driven hard, and both detectives started for it on a run. When the man in the buggy saw them coming he jumped out and made a rush for a nearby saloon.

The horse set at liberty started off on a gallop, and the man who had been driving him, changing his mind, ran out the back door of the saloon and scaled the fence in time to catch up with the buggy and climb into it. The detectives climbed into another buggy, which was standing nearby, and after an exciting chase for over half a mile down Third Avenue caught up with the fugitive. The driver was locked up in the station house, where he described himself as John Schilling, a tinsmith, of 771 St. Ann's Avenue. There is no house at that address. The rig was returned to Dr. Oaks, who identified it as his own.

POLICEMAN HELD FOR ROBBERY

Complainant Not Allowed to Withdraw the Case Against W. B. Mills.

Policeman William B. Mills of the Mercer Street Station, who was arrested a week ago charged with stealing a gold watch valued at $250 from Lieut. James Lynch of the Ninth Regiment, N. G. N. Y., was held in $1,000 bail for the Grand Jury yesterday by Magistrate Meade, in the Jefferson Market Court. Lieut. Lynch tried to withdraw the complaint, and a number of witnesses appeared for the accused policeman.

The complainant, after being compelled to stand by his charge, took the stand and said he had been drinking with Mills and a party of friends at a saloon at Sixth Avenue and Fourteenth Street. Early in the morning the party went out on the sidewalk, where Mills grabbed the complainant's watch from his pocket and ran with it. Percy Ashworth, a music publisher, of 5 East Fourteenth Street, said he saw Policeman Mills's hand on Lynch's watch chain, which was hanging loose.

Lawyer Mark Alter, counsel for Mills, produced a number of witnesses, who swore that they were in the party, and that the policeman did not steal Lynch's watch. In making his original complaint, Lynch said that only he, Mills, and the policeman's brother, Frederick, were in the party when the watch was taken.

Magistrate Meade said a clear case had been made out against the policeman. Frederick Mills, the brother of the accused man, who was charged with assaulting Lynch, was discharged for lack of evidence.

VARIOUS DRAMATIC TOPICS

A New Play About the Dutch and Spaniards in Holland.

Recurrence of "The Gray Mare"—How the French Actors "Take Recalls"—The Foreign Stage.

A new and formidable drama in three acts and a prologue, tried with abundant zeal by Franklin Sargent's dramatic pupils at the Empire Theatre yesterday afternoon, treated of the uprising of the long-suffering Dutch against the Spanish rule in Holland, the dread power of the Inquisition, and the might and mirth of the storied Beggars of the Sea, while it also had to do with a secret panel in an old house in Leyden with which a grim legend was associated, with a stolen inheritance and the persecution of a fair maid.

One of the most thrilling sayings in it was "The dead guard well," while its comic relief was supplied by a lugubrious lover, who liked to linger in the churchyard, and a daring old person who had buried five wives under one tombstone and was wooing a sixth.

Doubtless the authors of "A Maid of Leyden," Evelyn Greenleaf Sutherland and Percy Wallace Mackaye, had worked laboriously to secure "historical atmosphere," but one needed to be well up in his Motley to appreciate that part of their work. As a drama, "A Maid of Leyden" has some obvious merit, but its story is started in too slow and cumbersome a fashion, and it needs much revision and clarifying before it can ever get into the play market. The dialogue is not bad, and the main situations are effective.

In the performance the dramatic students were generally quite at their worst. In the extravagant employment of the tricks of "make-up" each personage resembled a wax figure, and such bellowing, shouting, and droning as they indulged in would dishearten any one not familiar enough with the vagaries of these students to understand that each was trying to exhibit the whole sum of his year's acquirement in his single rôle. Only Miss Juliette Atkinson, in the heroine's rôle, displayed a just sense of artistic proportion.

"The Gray Mare," which is in the bill at the Murray Hill Theatre this week, is a three-act comedy by Cecil Raleigh and George R. Sims, which was first acted here by the Lyceum company in the Spring of 1892. Georgia Cayvan, Herbert Kelcey, Fritz Williams, Effie Shannon, Bessie Tyree, and others then acted the characters now taken by Dorothy Donnelly, William Bramwell, Walter Allen, and their associates. Taken originally from a German play, but much altered in the adaptation, "The Gray Mare" is an exceedingly clever and diverting piece, and, though founded on a frankly farcical idea, the plan of a young husband to cure his sweetheart of fib telling by telling a whopper himself, and letting her note the deplorable consequences, it has the modest proportion and naturalness of comedy.

The whopper does, indeed, have deplorable results, for when the doctor announces that he took the gray mare out of the stable and rode her one night he confuses a situation already much complicated, mixes himself up in the elopement of his brother with the nice daughter of an irascible father, and is put in a fix his powers of simulation and his command of philosophy are unequal to cope with.

The three acts, in fact, are full of unforced fun, and the present performance is altogether creditable to Mr. Donnelly's company.

The French actors, when they come to this country, never seem to accustom themselves to the prevailing mods of "taking recalls." In the French theatre, the side doors in the proscenium arch are used for the actors to come forth and acknowledge applause. But here the curtain is always mechanically raised after the climax of an act, if the applause seems to justify it. This does not so much matter with the French players if the climax does not involve an elaborate picture with many figures. Whether it does or not, however, the principals never hold the picture, but come forward and bow. This habit was unfortunately exhibited in the performance of "Cyrano de Bergerac" at the Garden Theatre Monday night, after every act, but especially after the climax of the battle scene. Here, with the stage crowded with the make-believe dead and dying and the surviving soldiers aiming muskets at each other, Mme. Bernhardt and M. Coquelin walked forward, hand-in-hand, and bowed.

The curtain was raised again, showing some of the dead restored to life, but others still lifeless, and the bowing of the principals was repeated. A third time some of the soldiers obligingly died again and some who had lowered their muskets took a fresh aim, while others of the minor actors were seen sauntering to their dressing rooms. Of course, the picture ought to be held or the stage cleared before the recall is "taken." This may seem a trifling matter, but trifles count for much when they tend to destroy the illusion of a performance which has only been secured at great pains.

After surviving some years, "La Dame de chez Maxim" ("The Girl from Maxim's") has been withdrawn at the, Théâtre des Nouveautés in Paris, and another farce, of similar audacity and ingenuity, substituted. The new piece is called "Bonne d'Enfants," and was written by Sylvane and Oascogne, and some of its most significant action occurs in the fifth-story room of a Paris apartment house, whither a lady and a gentleman seek shelter from pursuit by climbing over an adjoining roof. The gentleman needs clothes for covering and disguise, and dons the dress and cap of a nursemaid, which he finds. Then, mistaken for a child's nurse, his troubles begin where he had thought them ended.

The rebuilt Théâtre Français in Paris may not be finished now in time for its reopening in the nineteenth century. The date was first fixed for July, and the latest postponement was for the last week in December. They employ 250 workmen every day and 170 at night, but the work drags.

MME. SEMBRICH'S RECITAL.

A Great Audience Hears a Great Singer at Carnegie Hall.

Mme. Marcella Sembrich's second song recital took place at Carnegie Hall last night. Again the sweet little cherub that sits up aloft had turned loose in the course of the day the worst manners of the elements, and so to many to go to the concert was in itself an ovidsence of esteem for the singer. But to the concert the public did go in such numbers and in such brave array that the scene in the hall was like that in the opera house on a festal night. And it was a festal night, too, for not within the memory of living men has such perfect vocal art been heard on the concert platform, except from the same lips as opened their rosy barriers to breathe it forth last night. We have had song recitals of no small excellence in this town, and we are not likely soon to forget the achievements of Lilli Lehmann, Blanche Marchesi, and others. But none of these have possessed the superb vocal equipment of Mme. Sembrich. Her glorious voice and unsurpassable method put her far ahead of those who have preceded her here in this particular field, and with her fathomless depth of feeling, her skill in detailed dramatisation, and her knowledge of all stage effects, she stands forth the master singer of our time. Again she offered a programme, the mere presentation of which was in itself a triumph. Here it is:

PART I.

Aria, "Deh Vieni".....Mozart
"My Mother Bids Me Bind My Hair".....Haydn
"Delphine," "Auf Dem Wasser zu Singen".....Schubert

PART II.

"Ich hab' ein Kleines Lied erdacht"...Bungert
"Standchen".....R. Strauss
"Als die Alte Mutter".....Dvorak
"Des Glockenthuermers Toechterlein,"
"Niemand hat's gesehen".....C. Lowe

PART III.

"Che t' ho fatto".....Cansona Napolitana
"Kan fra Hallingdalen".....Norwegian
"The Coolin'".....Irish Folk Song
"Gai Colon la gai le Rosier".....Canada
"Das Muhirad," "Spinnerliedchen"...Deutsch
"Odzie to jedziesz".....Polnische Duma
"Krakoiwak".....Polnisches Tanslied
"Daleskaia i Slyskaia".....Kleinrussisch

All these songs, except "The Coolin," were sung with the original text, thus making the recital an exhibition of mastery of languages as well as of singing. It would perhaps be unprofitable to attempt an itemized review of this entertainment. It certainly would be easy to fill a column with such a consideration of the wealth of art revealed in it. Some particular mention may be made, but at the outset it seems best to summarize the qualities of an art so beautiful, so potent, so flawless. What are the secrets of such singing? They are, first of all, obedience to that rule which Wagner laid down as the fundamental factor in a perfect interpretation of his works, namely, a complete dramatic comprehension of the text. Mme. Sembrich studies each text as if she were to recite it, not to sing it. Then she is ready to mold her phrasing, her accentuation, her nuancing of the music to the complete and lifelike embodiment of the sentiment of the song. All the resources of her vocal art, her wonderful mastery of the perfect legato, her exquisite coloring, her delicate enunciation, and her perfect tone emission, are directed to the one end, that of conveying to her hearers the feelings to be found in the song.

It is this penetration of the inward life of each song which gives her such a wide variety of styles, while her facility of delivery enables her to put on her programmes some songs not to be attempted by the ordinary singer with any hope of success. Thus she was able to bring forward Schubert's "Delphine," which few of last night's audience could have heard before. A strange, wild, rhapsodic poeem set to perfectly sympathetic music, music calling for voice and declamation, and ranging as high as C sharp, is this little work, and Mme. Sembrich sang it with fervid eloquence. The enthusiasm of the audience was so great that she followed the Schubert numbers with "Du Vist die Ruh."

Lovely as was her delivery of the Dvorak song, she eclipsed it when she applied the resources of her coloratura style to the first of the Löwe songs, which was a triumph of smooth delivery of difficult music. She had to repeat part of this song, and after the second Löwe number she gave as an encore selection Brahms's familiar "Ständchen," which she sang most archly. The group of folk-songs at the end of the programme gave the audience great pleasure. All were delightful, and each was thoroughly characteristic. The singer was at her best in the tenderness of "The Coolin," the gayety of "Gai lon la," and the fascinating piquancy of the "Spinner liedchen." The audience recalled her most enthusiastically after the dashing Russian dance song, and she repeated the number. That did not appease the assembly, however, and she was recalled again and again till she took off her gloves and sat down at the piano. Then to her own accompaniment she sang "Way Down Upon the Suanee Ribber" as it has not been sung since Christine Nilsson used to sing it twenty years ago. But Nilsson never had Sembrich's heart, and the old song last night had something it too often lacks, the note of passionate sincerity. That was the dismissal of the audience, and two remarkable song recitals passed into the annals of music in this town.

MR. FRANKO'S SYMPHONY CONCERTS.

The Second of the Series Given Yesterday Afternoon.

The second of Mr. Sam Franko's series of concerts of old music was given yesterday afternoon at the Lyceum Theatre. The programme consisted of the overture from Bach's D major suite, the "Phaeton" symphony of Karl Ditters von Dittersdorf, Stradella's aria di chiesa, "Pieta, signor, di me dolente," a suite of four dances by Jean Phillipe Rameau, and Domenico Cimarosa's overture to "Il Matrimonio Segreto." Of these compositions, two were announced on the programme as for the first time in America. These were the Ditters and Cimarosa numbers. When one reflects that these men were contemporaries of Mozart, whose music is so familiar to us, the plan of Mr. Franko unfolds itself with alluring details.

The "Phaeton" symphony is one of a number of works in which old Karl Ditters endeavored to embody his ideas of the "Metamorphoses" of Ovid. The work is programme music of the old-fashioned type, the kind written before the notion of breaking away from the sonata form had come to musicians, and before the splendors of modern orchestration had been let loose. The music is so simple, so quaint in its naïve ingenuousness, so innocently comfortable in its primer-like account of the incidents of the tragedy of the sun-chariot, that the adoring description of an amazed contemporary writer gave yesterday's hearers a perfect insight into the undeveloped condition of musical taste, as well as of music, in the days when this symphony was written. It was an excellent thought to print this description as a suggestion to the listener of to-day. It gave a delightful point of retrospect, and made the symphony tenfold more interesting as a demonstration of the precise condition of musical expression and comprehension in the middle of the eighteenth century. The audience plainly enjoyed the naïvete of the composition, which was well worth a production in America more than a century behind time.

Certainly, too, not many not of yesterday's audience had heard much music by Stradella, himself the subject of an opera and a person of no mean significance in the progress of musical art. His "Pieta, Signor," is not unknown here, but it is rarely heard. It certainly will not be heard often to better advantage than it was yesterday afternoon, when it was sung with a warm tone and with exquisite feeling by McKenzie Gordon. Rameau's dances, three from his masterpiece, "Castor et Pollux," and one from his "Dardanus," were sources of much pleasure to the hearers. Such dainty, delicate, graceful bits of ballet music are not heard in these times of blare and bluster. They were played with a pretty touch by the orchestra, as was also the Ditters symphony. The musicians seem to enjoy these old works almost as much as the auditors. Mr. Franko deserves well of music lovers for his present attractive enterprise.

"The Happy Hypocrit" a Success.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—Max Beerbohm's first play, "The Happy Hypocrit," which was produced last evening at the Royalty Theatre, London, proved to be a charming and clever trifle, with a fantastic motive—a pure girl's love changing the countenance as well as the heart of a man who had lived an evil life. Frank Mills and Miss Winifred Fraser, who had the chief rôles, carried them in capital style, and the play met with a generous reception.

HANGED HIMSELF BY ACCIDENT.

Workman's Thrilling Experience on the New East River Bridge.

Peter Anderson of 76 Oliver Street, one of the riggers at work on the new bridge now in course of construction between Grand Street, Manhattan, and Williamsburg, can describe some of the sensations which a man experiences when he is being hanged. Yesterday, while at work on the bridge, he came within an ace of hanging himself by accident, and is now getting over the partial effects of strangulation in St. Catharine's Hospital in Williamsburg.

His feet became entangled in some ropes which hung underneath him. In moving forward to get them loose again he slipped from the rope to which he was clinging and fell forward, being left hanging face downward, supported by his feet, which were caught fast. Another loop of rope hung down opposite his face, and he supported himself by holding on to this while he disengaged his feet. Just as he got his feet free his head slipped into the lower loop of rope, which tightened around his neck as his weight bore upon it. A second later he was hanging by the neck, and would have strangled in a few minutes if he had not been discovered by other workmen, who cut him down.

An ambulance was summoned from St. Catharine's Hospital, and it was found that he was suffering from a fracture of the jaw as well as partial strangulation.

WHITE SPARROW ON BROADWAY.

Feathered "Freak" Appears Daily in Trinity Churchyard.

According to people who work in the neighborhood of Trinity Churchyard, there flits about among the bushes therein a white sparrow. It makes its appearance daily, about the noon hour, and chirps after the manner of other sparrows. In size and shape it is like the ordinary variety, but its wings, tail, and most of its body are white, the only coloring that it has being on the top and back of its head.

It was only two days ago that the bird was discovered, and now they say it has become so well known that its appearance is the signal for the congregation of a crowd around the outside of the tall iron fence surrounding the yard.

OBJECT TO COST OF SCHOOLS

Mayor and Controller Protest at the Increased Expenses.

Buildings Now Cost $300,000 to $400,000, Mr. Coler Says—Mayor Wants an Investigation.

The question of the cost of buildings for new schools was brought up at the meeting of the Board of Estimate yesterday. The Board of Education was blamed for its methods and the Charter Revision Commission was also criticised by Mayor Van Wyck. Bond issues for $201,250 for new school sites at Union and Trenton Avenues, Seventy-sixth Street, between Second and Third Avenues, and Lenox Avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street were authorized. A requisition for $302,540 for a high school on Sixty-fifth and Sixty-sixth Streets, between Amsterdam Avenue and Broadway, was also passed. Mayor Van Wyck asked how the contract to build the school was already let to P. J. Brennan before the bond issue was authorized.

"That's a way they have at the Board of Education," remarked Controller Coler.

A resolution for $469,383 for a new high school at One Hundred and Sixty-sixth Street and Boston Road, to be known as the Peter Cooper High School, was referred to the Corporation Counsel. President Guggenheimer said the amount asked for this school was greatly in excess of the amount required for a good school building. The Board of Education put in a requisition for $14,031,825 for schools and school sites for 1901.

Controller Coler said: "Since the act of consolidation the cost of providing a schoolroom for children has been doubled in Brooklyn. The buildings are getting more ornate and cost more money year after year, but the schools are not getting a bit better. They never cost $300,000 to $400,000, where they used to cost only about $100,000. That is not right."

Mayor Van Wyck said: "The Board of Education seems to want schoolhouses every three or four blocks, so that children will not have to walk. We get very little encouragement from any one after we cut the budget about a million and a half to have the Legislature defeat us. The matter should be thoroughly investigated, and we should build schools without having them cost more each time."

Commissioner Keller suggested that the property at Lenox Avenue and One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Street be taken for the new Harlem Hospital. Mayor Van Wyck said that he did not see any use in establishing new hospitals while the Charter Revision Commission report threatened to turn the emergency hospitals over to a board of doctors.

"Why," said Mayor Van Wyck, "it will merely mean that they will become medical education schools and clinical cutting-up places. What do you think of the plan of the Charter Commission, Commissioner Keller?"

"I do not approve of the plan," was the reply.

Chief Engineer McLean of the Finance Department made a report on a plan to save the big trees on the Boulevard, which will probably be destroyed by the underground railroad. Engineer McLean reported that it would cost $60,000 to defray the expense of saving the trees. Mayor Van Wyck said the matter would have to be passed on first by the Municipal Assembly.

Bonds for $100,000 to equip the new building of the Metropolitan Museum of Art were approved.

STAGE CHILDREN'S CHRISTMAS.

They Will Miss "Aunt" Louisa Eldridge at Their Annual Festival.

The Christmas festival of the little children of the stage will be without its guardian angel this year. "Aunt" Louisa Eldridge, who was the founder of the annual celebration and has become the President of the organization carrying it on, has resigned from her position, and the festival this year will miss one of its pleasantest features. "Aunt" Louisa began by giving a little entertainment every year for the little children employed on the stage or the children of fathers and mothers on the stage. But her enthusiasm was contagious, many people became interested in the work, and for some years now there has been a Christmas tree, with not only toys, but warm clothing for the little ones.

In addition to the Christmas presents there has been in recent years a regular performance on the stage of Tony Pastor's Theatre, taking place on some Sunday evening of the Christmas season.

The stars of these performances are youthful, and there is often great originality in their work. No child is too little to act at "Aunt" Louisa's Christmas festival. One tiny tot, too little for a speaking part, was once to do a somersault. She toddled on the stage, reached the centre, made her bow, and prepared to tumble. She put her head down on the floor, and there she posed. There was vigorous prompting from the wings, but either the baby had forgotten, or she simply wouldn't. The audience roared. The little actress was disconcerted. She stood up again with her finger in her mouth, and there was more vigorous prompting from the wings. Down she went again on her head, but not a bit further. Nothing could persuade her to do the somersault, but she made the hit of the evening.

"Aunt" Louisa has been in the work now for twelve years, and she feels that it is time for other workers to earn laurels. During her years of work, enough money has been banked to continue the festivals.

MRS. COUTANT PLEADS GUILTY.

Then Mr. Slater Relents and Sentence Is Suspended.

Mrs. Alice Coutant, who was recently arraigned charged by State Senator-elect Samuel Slater with attempted blackmail, pleaded guilty, in Special Sessions, yesterday and was discharged at Senator Slater's request. Mrs. Coutant was almost hysterical.

Mr. Slater testified that Mrs. Coutant had tried to sell to Senator Guy information obtained while she was in the Senator-elect's employ as a stenographer. "She said she had information which would convict me of bribery," said the witness. "She said I had been bribed. Senator Guy notified me and I took this step. I thought it necessary that she should learn that I did not fear anything she had to tell. As she has pleaded guilty, I think she has learned a lesson."

Justice Jerome was of the opinion that a fine of $100 should be imposed as a warning to others occupying confidential positions. Justices Holbrook and Jacob favored her attorney's motion for a suspension of sentence in view of Mr. Slater's statement, and Mrs. Coutant was permitted to go free.

EXPLORATIONS IN BABYLON.

Ur Expedition Committee Will Lay Bare the Temple of the Moon God.

A meeting of the Ur Expedition Committee, under whose auspices an expedition is to excavate a Babylonian city, the Biblical Ur of the Chaldees, the home of Abraham, was held in this city Dec. 8. President Harper of Chicago, President of the committee, presided. It was decided to send out the expedition as soon as the funds for the work are increased by $2,800—if possible before Dec. 20—in order to begin the excavations before the extreme heat of the Babylonian Summer sets in.

Dr. Edgar James Banks, the director of the expedition, an Assyrian specialist, will be accompanied by a trained engineer and a United States Government naturalist. New methods of excavating will be employed, notably, the removal of the dirt by wire cable, and soon the entire temple of the moon god, the most perfect specimen of Babylonian architecture known, will be laid bare. A map of Southern Babylonia, a country almost unexplored, but of the greatest interest to Bible students, will be made; specimens of the flora and fauna will be collected, and the priceless literary treasures of the Babylonian Empire of Abraham's time will be recovered.

On the committee are Bishop Potter of New York, Bishop Hurst, R. R. Hitt, Dr. Ward, Dr. Peters, Prof. Haupt, President Morton, and Cornelius N. Bliss. Subscriptions to the fund may be sent to the Treasurer, George Foster Peabody, 27 Pine Street, New York City. Every subscriber of $5 or more will receive the quarterly reports of the expedition. Dr. Edgar James Banks, Columbia University, will answer inquiries regarding the work.

TO FREEZE OUT THE ICE TRUST.

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in Newark Pledged to Co-operate.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 11.—The retail ice dealers of Newark to the number of sixty organized the Newark Independent Ice Dealers' Union last night. The purpose of the organization is to effect a combination with wholesale producers not connected with the American Ice Company to fight the New York City Ice Trust. The trust has already established itself in Newark by securing possession of the Knickerbocker Ice Company, one of the most extensive of the local wholesale concerns.

Mutual pledges were given last night both by wholesalers and retailers to stick together in the movement to freeze the trust out of business in Newark.

"We will stand by you even if we have to pay 5 cents a hundred more than trust prices," said the independent dealers.

"We promise to sell to you as low as the trust can sell," said the wholesalers.

The union voted to affiliate itself with the Essex Trades Council. James Mungle was elected permanent Chairman of the union.

JESSE JAMES'S BROTHER HELD.

Accused with Another Man of Stealing a Launch Engine.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Dec. 11.—Charles James, a man who has been living at South Bound Brook for some time past, and who asserts he is the youngest brother of Jesse James, the noted Western desperado, was arrested to-day charged with theft. James Donnelly, formerly a trolley-car motorman, and also living at South Bound Brook, was arrested with James. They were held for the Grand Jury.

The arrests were made by Detective Totten, who claims James and Donnelly are the men who recently went aboard a steam pleasure launch belonging to Charles Van Nostrand of East Milltown and took from it the boiler and engine. The engine was carted away in a wagon, but although the robbers took the boiler out of the boat and loaded it into the same wagon they failed to get away with it. When the wagon started up the steep incline from the river the boiler toppled out of the wagon, rolled down the hill and into the water, where it now lies.

DRIVER'S MARVELOUS ESCAPE.

Hurled Down Track in Debris of Wagon Hit by a Train, Yet Unhurt.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, Dec. 11.—Charles A. Carter and Frank Todd, employed by William Provost, a milk dealer at 12 Warren Street, this city, had a narrow escape from death this morning at the Eighth Avenue crossing of the Lackawanna Railroad.

The men, with Carter driving, had stopped their wagon near the crossing to allow a freight train to pass. As the caboose was almost by, the gates were raised, and Carter urged his horses across. Just as they reached the far track the wagon was struck by an east-bound train and hurled thirty feet. Carter saw the train coming and jumped, after giving a warning shout. Todd could not escape, however, and was carried down the track with the debris of the wagon. To the surprise of the men who picked him up, he said he was unhurt. The horses were not injured, but 300 bottles of milk were destroyed.

PEOPLE WHO TALK IN CHURCH.

Rev. Mr. Stoddard Ready to Take Radical Steps to Suppress Them.

The Rev. Edward L. Stoddard, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, Jersey City, publishes a weekly bulletin for circulation among his congregation. The issue for this week contains the following in relation to people who talk in church during service:

We are distressed to be obliged to speak of this again, but it is necessary. Never mind when, but not long ago, we had a complaint that two young people of opposite sex talked through an entire service, to the great annoyance of those in the neighborhood.

A young man has been complained of lately. His does not seem to be known, but those who make the complaint say that his voice sounds like the rumbling of a trolley car in the distance, and that it is exasperating beyond description. The other night two people occupied the time of the sermon in talking of the last football match between Yale and Harvard.

If the writer was in a church where persons so far forget themselves as to talk he would do one or all of three things, and in fact he has done all three.

He would lean over or turn around and gently tap the offending gentleman or lady on the shoulder with a fan or cane and ask them in a whisper to refrain.

If this had no effect he would go back to the door and ask the usher or sexton to speak to the persons.

Or he would himself in a loud tone which could be heard in the neighborhood ask the offending parties to be quiet.

If it be said that one does not like to make a spectacle of himself in the church, the answer is that each one is bound to do what is necessary to keep holy and beautiful the service of the Lord's sanctuary. The clergy make a standing offer that if any one who is disturbed in church will send word to the chancel or the pulpit by the sexton, the service will be at once stopped and those who have offended be asked to gracefully retire. Modesty is beautiful, but there is such a thing as having too much of it.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Mrs. Nelson's Real Name Pollock.

Lawyer T. S. Atwater, Jr., yesterday applied to the Hudson County Board of Health at Jersey City to have the record of the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Nelson of 175 Pine Street, Jersey City, who died on Feb. 17 last, amended so as to show that the dead woman was really Mrs. Elizabeth O'Brien Pollock. Mr. Atwater submitted proofs of his statement and the record was changed. The inquiry showed that Mrs. Pollock separated from her husband thirteen years ago. She went to Jersey City to live, and there called herself Mrs. Nelson. She was a sister of William T. O'Brien, Chief Justice of Dublin. He made her an allowance of $90 a month, which she increased by writing for magazines and newspapers. Shortly after her death Chief Justice O'Brien died and proof of Mrs. Pollock's death was necessary in settling up his estate.

John H. Coverley Dies Suddenly.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 11.—John H. Coverley, eight-seven years of age, died of apoplexy this morning in the factory of his son, William, at the corner of New Jersey Railroad Avenue and Chestnut Street. He had left his son's home nearby to go to the railroad station to take a train, and was taken ill on the way. Mr. Coverley had been in business here for eleven years, manufacturing harness. He was born at Somerville.

Fatally Injured by a Train.

Special to The New York Times.

MATAWAN, N. J., Dec. 11.—Charles Carr, a prominent resident of Keansburg, was fatally injured by being struck by a freight train at a crossing near Hazlet station last night. Carr was driving a farm wagon, to which was hitched a team of horses. The horses were killed outright. This is the third fatal accident that has occurred on the line of the New York and Long Branch Railroad within the past ten days.

Firemen Want a Bowling Alley.

The members of the Weehawken Township Committee were greatly surprised Monday night by a petition handed in by Clifton Hose Company. It was to the effect that the members would like to have a bowling alley constructed in the basement of the carriage house, which is not used for any purpose. As the members said they were willing to bear the expense, the matter was referred to the Fire Committee with power.

The Hudson County Bar Association held its annual meeting at Jersey City yesterday. These officers were elected: President—Charles W. Fuller; Vice President—William H. Speer; Secretary—Howard C. Griffiths; Treasurer—Randolph Perkins. Resolutions were adopted expressing gratification at the assignment of Supreme Court Justice Gilbert Collins to the Hudson County Court.

May Try Namesakes for Murder.

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 11.—Sheriff Sturr to-day drew the panel of seventy petit jurors from among whom the jurors who will try the cases against Kerr, McAllister, Death, and Campbell, the men accused of murdering Jennie Bosschieter, may be tried. Among them are James McAllister and Charles Kerr. Neither of these men is, it is said, a relative of the prisoners.

UNLUCKY DAY FOR MAM'SELLE.

Milliner Lost Her Friend When She Tried to Collect a Bill on Monday.

A modiste, a manicurist, and a "Parisian model" hat engrossed the attention of Magistrate Hogan during pretty much the entire afternoon session of the Yorkville Police Court yesterday, and the tangle had not nearly been straightened out when the court adjourned.

The complainant in the case was Mlle. Jeanae, a modiste and milliner of 19 East Fifty-ninth Street, with a branch office in the Rue de la Paix, Paris. The defendant was Miss Carel Parrish, a manicurist with offices in the Tuxedo Building. She was in court on a summons.

Mlle. Jeanae said that prior to Nov. 24 she and Miss Parrish were warm friends. Indeed, she liked the manicurist so well that she constructed for her a "Parisian model" hat, charging but $8 for it, whereas the regular price was $35. On Nov. 24 she had sent her girl around to Miss Parrish to collect the $8. Miss Parrish sent back an impolite note, saying, among other things, that she never paid bills on Monday, for that meant bad luck for the rest of the week. Mlle. Jeanae called on Miss Parrish that afternoon to ascertain the reason why she was so impolite. During this interview the manicurist, Mlle. Jeanae said, seized the model hat and struck her over the head with it, breaking a large buckle on it and also more or less injuring the modiste's head.

Ever since that memorable interview, Mlle. Jeanae said, she had been trying unsuccessfully to serve Miss Parrish with a summons until yesterday morning.

HOUSE LOOKS INTO HAZING

Alleged Mistreatment of Cadet Booz Under Discussion.

Special Committee of Five Named to Investigate—Secretary Root Also Appoints a Board.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Alleged hazing at West Point, growing out of reports that Oscar L. Booz had died of injuries received at the hands of cadets, occupied part of the time of the House to-day. After some argument as to whether an investigation by the War Department or Congress would prove most efficacious in deciding upon whom, if any one, the responsibility for the alleged act rests, the Speaker appointed a committee of five to investigate.

When the House met to-day, Mr. Hull, (Rep., Iowa,) Chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back from that committee a substitute for the Driggs resolution for an investigation of the alleged "hazing" of Cadet Booz at West Point. The substitute was as follows:

"Whereas, It is alleged in the newspapers that Oscar L. Booz of Bristol, Penn., formerly a cadet at the United States Military Academy at West Point, died at his home from injuries purporting to have been the result of hazing inflicted upon him by certain unknown cadets of the said Military Academy; and,

"Whereas, The Secretary of War is now making investigations of the facts; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That said Secretary be requested to report the result of such investigation to the House of Representatives, together with such recommendations as he may see fit to make."

The report of Secretary Root, together with that of Superintendent Mills, is attached to the resolution. The presentation of the resolution and the reading of the reports aroused great interest.

Mr. Driggs, (Dem., N. Y.,) the author of the original resolution, protested vigorously against the adoption of the substitute resolution, as it did not include provision for an investigation of the general subject of hazing at West Point with a view of putting a permanent stop to such practices. He declared that the practice of infamously hazing "plebs" at West Point was notorious. He cited the case of Whittaker, who was hazed in 1880, and whose case led to a Congressional investigation. Mr. Driggs declared that he would be in favor of abolishing the academy if these brutal practices could not be stopped.

Mr. Wanger, (Rep., Penn.,) who appointed Cadet Booz, spoke in favor of a Congressional investigation. He said he did not presume to know the exact facts, but reputable newspapers had made statements regarding the case which had profoundly moved the people of the country. The gross outrages known to have been committed at the academy in the past, he said, had aroused the conviction that the officers of the academy were so jealous of the fair name of the academy that they guarded it as indiscreetly as the officers of France did in the Dreyfus case.

Mr. Wanger said he was not opposed to receiving any information the Secretary of War had on the subject or to the proposed inquiry by the War Department, but he insisted that only a Congressional inquiry would satisfy the country. Such an investigation would bring out the facts and lead to action which would forever prevent cadets from becoming the victims of hazing in the future. He said at the proper time he would offer a substitute for the committee's resolution, providing for an investigation by a special committee of five members of the House, who should have the power to send for persons and papers, and, if necessary, proceed to West Point, and that the committee should report within sixty days.

Mr. Slayden, (Dem., Texas,) a member of the Military Committee, expressed the opinion that the reports concerning hazing at West Point had been grossly exaggerated. He said Mr. Driggs's reference to the Whittaker case had been unfortunate, as Whittaker's career after he left the academy had shown him to be unworthy of credence. He had been dismissed from the army upon the most serious charges.

Mr. Clayton, (Dem., N. Y.,) who was himself a graduate of West Point, defended the Military Academy. He said there was no necessity for bringing up the Dreyfus case. The record of the academy stood for itself.

"Why not investigate, then?" asked Mr. Wanger.

"The academy fears no investigation," replied Mr. Clayton; "the sons of a washerwoman and of a millionaire are on the same footing when they enter the academy."

From his personal experience Mr. Clayton said he knew that the reports of hazing were greatly exaggerated. The sentiment of the cadets was against brutality or doing anything unfair. Hazing as it was practiced years ago, he said, had been stamped out.

Mr. Hay (Dem., Va.,) favored a Congressional investigation, not, he said, because he believed there was any ground for the charges against the academy, but because he believed an investigation would vindicate the academy and the cadets.

In concluding the debate, Mr. Hull said he had little faith in Congressional investigations; that of the War Department, he thought, would be much more searching. It was erroneous to believe that the army was interested in shielding West Point, and he told what had been done in the last five years to stop hazing.

"If the charges of hazing should be proved," asked Mr. Driggs, "is there any law which could reach the cadets who participated?"

"The gentleman can answer that question as well as I," answered Mr. Hull. "But, if proved, if the War Department does not take steps to dismiss the guilty ones from the academy Congress will."

Mr. Wanger's resolution for a special committee of five to investigate the case was then adopted without division, and the Speaker appointed the following members to constitute the committee: Messrs. Marsh, (Rep., Ill.,) Chairman; Wanger, (Rep., Penn.,) Smith, (Rep., Iowa,) Driggs, (Dem., N. Y.,) and Clayton, (Dem., N. Y.).

Col. Mills in his report entered the broadest denial, which he says is based on the fullest investigation by himself, of the alleged hazing of Cadet Booz. The Secretary of War, in transmitting the report to the House, accompanied it with a statement that at the instance of Col. Mills he has appointed a board, consisting of Major Gen. Brooke, Col. Gillespie, and Col. Clous, to meet at West Point on the 15th inst., or as soon as possible thereafter, to investigate not only the Booz case, but also the methods employed at the academy to prevent hazing.

Col. Mills says in his statement that he has no personal knowledge of Booz, whose record at the academy he submits to demonstrate that there was no medical evidence of any mistreatment, but that his resignation was attributed to weak eyes and a poor record in studies. Having carefully questioned cadets who were classmates of Booz, Col. Mills finds that the cadet had no trouble prior to Aug. 6, 1898, when he had a fist fight, witnessed by six cadets, all of whom are now at the academy.

Booz had replied to some advice given by one of the cadets in a manner to incense him, hence the fight. Two classmates of Booz testify that the latter invited them to attend the fight; that he went to it and engaged in it willingly, and in the beginning was the aggressor. All the cadets testify that the encounter was short, of little severity, and Booz was in no way injured or marked. His opponent had never before been in a fight.

"In view of the above," says Col. Mills, "I believe that the charge, so often reiterated, that 'Cadet Booz was dragged out and made to fight and was brutally wounded by an older and stronger cadet,' is false and unfounded."

On the testimony of the cadets, Col. Mills also reports on the charge that after the fight a fluid was poured down Booz's throat. He says the charge is absurd. He does not hesitate to assert that it is untrue.

Immediately following the encounter, according to Col. Mills, Booz fell into the contempt of his fellow-cadets, in consequence of a report that he had been guilty of an untruth in contradicting a report by a Corporal of the guard, and also because he had shown little spirit in his fight.

Col. Mills also denies specifically the story that tabasco sauce was poured down Booz's throat and that he was called "Bibles" or ridiculed on account of his religious belief, and in conclusion he asks for the investigation, which the Secretary has ordered.

THE NEELY EXTRADITION CASE.

Mr. Beck, for the Government, Defines the Rights of the United States in Cuba.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Assistant Attorney General James M. Beck in the Supreme Court to-day replied to the argument of John D. Lindsay in the Neely extradition proceedings. Mr. Lindsay contended yesterday that the United States had no right to maintain a military government in Cuba, and that the presence of troops there was virtually a prosecution of war.

Mr. Beck replied on behalf of the Government. He characterized Mr. Lindsay's contention as meaning logically that if an American citizen should apply the torch of the incendiary to the homes of the Cuban people and assassinate its citizens and then flee to this country, the United States, although pledged by the treaty of Paris to protect life and property in Cuba during the period of its occupation, was powerless to deliver such fugitive to the municipal authorities of Cuba.

He claimed that this contention was without reason or authority to support it, and that the true position was that this Nation had the same right as other independent nations to surrender fugitive criminals when it felt called upon from considerations of comity or public policy to do so. Moreover, he claimed that it was an inherent attribute of sovereignty, being an international obligation which each independent State must in the comity of nations fulfill to another.

As to the right to govern Cuba, Mr. Beck took issue with Mr. Lindsay's whole contention. He claimed that the Government, prior to the declaration of war against Spain, had uniformly refused to recognize the Cuban republic. He denied that the joint resolutions operated to recognize the Cuban republic. This, he said, was shown by the fact that Congress struck out of the joint resolution a provision which specifically recognized the existence of a Cuban republic. In the resolution as finally passed, Mr. Beck pointed out, Congress had recognized that the Cuban people were free and independent, but he claimed that there was a wide distinction between the term "people" and the expression "State" or "nation."

A State is, however, a political and organic entity, and while, therefore, Congress did recognize that the Cuban people had by success in the field of war earned the right to be regarded as free and independent, it did not follow that any Cuban Government, as a political entity, was recognized. He argued, on the contrary, that as the result of our success on land and sea, the Kingdom of Spain had executed a treaty with this country, and that Cuba had been surrendered to this country, and that while this country held Cuba in trust for the Cuban people until it had fulfilled the duties of such trust and pacified the island, the United States was the only de facto and de jure Government in Cuba.

As disproving the suggestion that there could be no military occupation after the treaty of peace, Mr. Beck argued that even if such subsequent military occupation could not be justified by the war-making power, it was amply justified by the treaty-making power, under which this country had assumed the obligation to govern Cuba until it was pacified and a new and stable government constituted. Until such time the island was necessarily governed under the law of belligerent right, even though there existed no present hostilities and peace had been officially declared.

Mr. Beck relied with especial force upon the case of Cross versus Harrison, in which the commanding General of the United States in California, after the Mexican war, maintained a military government from the time of the treaty of peace until California was admitted into the Union. Mr. Beck said that, while the political status of Cuba was anomalous, it was not without precedent, and he cited the Island of Cyprus, in which Turkey permitted English occupation and rule as long as Russia retained certain Armenian territory.

While, therefore, the ultimate sovereignty was in Turkey, England at present exercised full sovereignty in Cyprus, and would until the contingency arose which would terminate her rights in Cyprus. He also cited the British military occupation of Egypt as an instance of the same government of "definitive occupation."

He therefore argued that, although Cuba was foreign to this Government, in the sense that it was not incorporated as permanent domestic territory into the United States, it was, nevertheless, territory pro tempore of the United States, subject to our jurisdiction and to our rights as the sovereign power, and that therefore the United States, acting through the Commander in Chief, had full rights to exercise all executive, legislative, and judicial powers in Cuba.

With reference to the Constitutional guarantees as to a jury trial in the Bill of Rights, Mr. Beck contended that they had no application to Cuba.

Mr. Beck further said that Mr. Lindsay's argument involved a remarkable contention. He could not deny the Constitutional right of the Government to make the treaty of Paris, but his argument in effect denies the Constitutional right of the Government to carry out the stipulations of the treaty. This doctrine, tested by its inevitable consequences, is at once seen to be unsound. If this Court were to adopt it, and the President were to withdraw the army from Cuba and remove the existing civil government, there would then be no government at all. In the absence of any government, anarchy might possibly result. This might lead to the destruction of life and property which the United States, under the treaty of Paris, has promised to protect.

If, therefore, Spain, or any other nation, the lives and property of whose citizens had thus been sacrificed, were to call this country to account for our failure to carry out our treaty stipulations, the United States, if Mr. Lindsay's contention were adopted by the Court, would be in the position of asserting that it had no power to carry out its own treaty obligations.

"Could," asked Mr. Beck, "a more humiliating position be imagined, or one more contrary to that 'decent respect to the opinions of mankind' which Mr. Jefferson made the keynote to the great Declaration?"

After a reply by Mr. Lindsay, the Court took the case under advisement.

DEBATE ON TAX REDUCTION.

Mr. Payne for the Majority and Mr. Swanson for the Minority Discuss the Bill.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The debate on the war revenue reduction bill opened in the House to-day, but was confined to two speeches—one by Mr. Payne of New York, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, on behalf of the majority, and one by Mr. Swanson (Dem., Va.,) on behalf of the minority. No arrangement about the length of general debate was made.

Mr. Payne said that in reducing the revenue great care should be taken lest the reduction cause a deficiency. In reporting the pending bill, the committee felt as though it had gone to the furthest limit in the amount of reduction with due regard to safety for the future. The $65,000,000 remaining after the reduction proposed by the committee took effect would not equal the extraordinary expenses sure to follow as a result of the Spanish war.

"While there is no reason from any domestic causes to apprehend any disaster to business during the next few years," said he, "yet there is a possibility of foreign complications which might have that result. Depression in business would mean a loss of revenue. Some members of the minority of the committee have proposed to abolish all the war revenue, and offer in place thereof an income tax. Of course, it is perfectly obvious to every thinking man that this would cause an immediate deficiency in our revenues. It would mean a loss of $105,000,000. The enactment of a new income tax law would not furnish a dollar of additional revenue.

"Another proposition has been made by the minority to abolish the entire additional tax upon beer. This would result in an additional reduction of $23,000,000. It would produce the grossest injustice. Certainly the tax upon beer should never be wiped out until every other vestige of the war taxes is removed."

Mr. Swanson, a member of the Committee on Ways and Means, followed, making the opening argument, and presenting the views of the minority. He said that the Democratic Party fully recognized the urgent necessity for a reduction in the revenues of this Government; during four years taxation had increased over $250,000,000, and that if this heavy burden was continued, business and commerce would seriously suffer. He expressed regret that the Republicans had failed to avail themselves of the present excellent opportunity to devise a more just, equitable, and permanent system of taxation. He said that this was a most opportune time to do so, since taxation could now be imposed from considerations of justice and on business principles, and not to supply Governmental necessities. He then argued that there should be a reformation of the tariff, and an abolition of the customs duties, which have created trusts and monopolies.

He added there should be a reduction made now in the revenues of at least $70,000,000 instead of $40,000,000. With the organization of a home government in Cuba, with the pacification of the Philippine Islands, and with a settlement of the Chinese complications, all of which the Administration are assured in less than two years, there ought to be an immense reduction in Governmental expenses.

ARMY REORGANIZATION BILL.

Measure Will Probably Be Reported Early Next Week—Senate Committee Favors the Canteen.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—With all possible expedition the Senate will dispose of the Army Reorganization bill, thus keeping up, if there is no break in the programme, the record of the session for prompt disposition of the measures before it that are regarded as most important.

Secretary Root's admonitions to the Senate Committee on Military Affairs to forward the Army bill as fast as consistent with necessary consideration were addressed to a committee aware of the necessity for authority in the War Department to be able to enlist and dispatch to the Philippines troops to take the place of others to be brought back in the transports, which, in the event of prolonged delay, must sail to the Philippines without troops in order to bring back men who will be entitled to their discharge July 1.

The Secretary of War has learned that there is a strong opposition in the Senate to the corps of veterinarians agreed to in the House, although the Senate has approved of such a corps in its own bill. There is a marked division of opinion in the War Department about this corps, but some of the best-informed officers sustain the idea that veterinarians should have rank, and say that if the German Army attaches so much importance to the corps as to place it under the command of a Major General, the United States is not overdoing the matter in providing a veterinary officer with the rank of Colonel.

If the committee votes according to the prevailing opinion concerning the maintenance in the army of the post exchange or canteen, not only will the action of the House abolishing the canteen be reversed, but direct permission will be given to continue the canteen, as a wise, wholesome, and necessary adjunct of the service, which experience has shown to be conducive to temperance and to good order and discipline.

Desertions have been fewer in number since the post exchange was established, and the explanation has been that men who desired to obtain beer or wine and were able to get them in camp, where there was no odium attaching to its purchase and use under regulations, were enabled to escape the temptation first to take French leave to reach a groggery, but were not exposed to the temptation to drink to excess, possibly in very bad company, to become subject if they do not desert to court-martial and imprisonment, besides suffering loss of pay and details that interfere with their advancement in the service.

The House passed the section prohibiting the canteen when the galleries were filled with delegates to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union convention. The convention that brought those enthusiastic prohibitionists together ended Saturday. Representatives of the organization are working upon the Senate, but the Senate is inclined to prefer the advice of the War Department and to restore the canteen.

During consideration of the bill to-day Secretary Root, Gen. Miles, and Gen. Wilson, Chief of Engineers, were before the committee. Mr. Root suggested no material amendment to the bill in his talk, but devoted his energies almost exclusively to the presentation of the general subject of the reorganization of the army on a permanent basis. He was assured by members of the committee that the bill in all probability would be reported to the Senate by the beginning of next week.

Gen. Miles took a very positive stand against the abolition of the regimental organization in the artillery arm of the service, saying that such a course would inevitably have the effect of destroying much of the esprit du corps of that branch of the service.

GOV. ALLEN'S ADVICE.

His Message to the Porto Rico House of Delegates Has Greatly Impressed the Islanders.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Dec. 5.—Porto Ricans have been greatly impressed with the sound advice given to them in the message of Gov. Allen to the House of Delegates, which was read yesterday. In the course of the message the Governor said:

"For the first time in the annals of this island you, the representatives of the people, gather as a legislative body, under American sovereignty.

"To-day, in the name of the people of Porto Rico, you undertake legislation, by means of which it is hoped the island will rise to a position of influence and prosperity worthy your highest hopes.

"At the threshold of this great opportunity, I urge you to approach the task with patriotic devotion to your country, with unselfish regard for the best results, with conscientious heed to the rights of all, so that your statute book may be strong and respected, and stand for the comfort, happiness, and well-being of every inhabitant.

"In the general election just passed, you closed the door upon old methods and customs. You have indicated to the world your ability to conduct yourselves with order and merit. Henceforth you must move forward, with the light of modern experience to guide your way. But the direction is clear.

"Remember always your work is of the utmost moment; no carelessly considered law should, under any circumstances, find its way upon your statute book.

"You may never know the anxiety with which your experiment is being watched. Let its results be such that your country and law-abiding people everywhere will approve.

"You are to-day the masters of your own future. Dec. 15 the Military Department of Porto Rico will disappear. All United States soldiers, except the small force needed to care for the permanent fortifications, will have left the island, and for the first time in over 400 years the people of Porto Rico will be relieved from military rule.

"In the work you are about to undertake you will need to exercise all the virtues of patriotism, loyalty, and patience, for the eyes of the world are upon you. Every step will be criticised, and you must be prepared to defend your position upon every public question. If you follow the guidance of the best experience, if you are wise and conservative, all will come out well—and the future will pay the just tribute to your faithfulness which a hasty critic may fail to give. You are engaged in work of the utmost import for your country, and I believe you will succeed."

Presidential Nominations Confirmed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The Senate to-day confirmed the following nominations:

William D. Bynum of Indiana, to be Commissioner to Revise and Codify the Criminal and Penal Laws of the United States.

Daniel H. McMillin of New York, to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of New Mexico.

To be Major Generals—Brig. Gen. Lloyd Wheaton and Brig. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, United States Volunteers.

CONGRESSIONAL NOTES.

It is the understanding of House leaders that the holiday recess of Congress will begin on Friday, Dec. 21, and the session will be resumed on Thursday, Jan. 3. If this is agreeable to Senators, the recess will be so arranged.

The Senate has passed bills authorizing Ethelbert Watts, United States Consul at Kingsbridge, Ireland, to accept a decoration from the Khedive of Egypt, also authorizing George W. Hill of the Department of Agriculture to accept a decoration from the French republic.

The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations yesterday authorized favorable reports upon recently negotiated treaties providing for the extradition of criminals between this country and Chile and also between this country and Bolivia. Similar action was taken with reference to the agreement to extend for another year the treaty providing for the demarcation of the boundary line between the United States and Mexico.

The Grout Oleomargarine bill passed by the House was laid before the Senate, and Mr. Frye, the President pro tem., announced that he felt obliged, in view of previous action of the Senate on a similar measure, to refer the bill to the Committee on Agriculture. Mr. Vest, (Dem., Mo.,) a member of the Finance Committee, contended vigorously that the bill being, to his mind, a revenue measure, ought to be referred to the Committee on Finance. He declared that if the bill was an honest measure it was a revenue bill, and if it were a dishonest measure it was an effort to use the taxing power of the Government as a police regulation. A motion to refer the bill to the Committee on Agriculture was agreed to.

Note. Teller Alvord Indicted.

Cornelius L. Alvord, Jr., former note teller of the First National Bank of this city, accused of having embezzled $690,000 from that institution, was indicted yesterday afternoon by the Federal Grand Jury. The indictment was found on fifty-one counts, charging Alvord with falsifying the accounts of the bank and unlawfully appropriating to his own use nearly $700,000 of the bank's moneys. Alvord will probably be tried at the December term of the criminal part of the United States Circuit Court, which begins to-day.

SUBSIDY BILL MAY FAIL

So-Called Friends of the Measure May Not Support It.

Sentiment in the West Beginning to be Felt in the Senate—Strong Democratic Criticism.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Of all the measures now before Congress, none is so generally interesting as the Ship Subsidy bill. The determination that it should be put through at once, the summons issued by Mr. Hanna for Senators to be present and ready for action upon it, the eagerness of the outside friends of the proposed bill, and the latest comments upon it by the Republican press in the West, have served to fix attention upon it in a way that militates against it.

It was remarked to-day by a Republican Senator who has been put down in all polls of the Senate as disposed to vote for the subsidy, that he could not safely declare that he would vote for the bill until he could see what the bill was to be.

"When the bill was introduced," he said, "it was very different from the measure we are asked to support now. Coming from ship owners, it provided for subsidies on the basis of so much per ton per mile sailed for sixteen trips a year. Then there was a subsidy for speed. Under this double subsidy the St. Louis, it was shown—and Mr. Frye has admitted the correctness of the estimate—would earn $281,488 per year. But when it was discovered that the St. Louis, to earn subsidy for cargo carrying, would get pay for only 1,400 tons, an amendment was made giving subsidy up to 50 per cent. of the capacity for carrying commercial cargo. This was in place of the requirement that the ship should not be entitled to subsidy unless it cleared with cargo amounting to 50 per cent. of its gross tonnage."

Even on the Republican side, particularly among Senators from the West, the impression is growing stronger that the benefit of the Subsidy bill will be enjoyed by a small number of ship owners. The repeated amendment of the bill by its proposed beneficiaries has not helped it among those whose constituents are asking how it is to develop the merchant marine. Democratic opposition is beginning to be felt in the Senate in the form of criticisms which analyze the arguments of the Republicans. The friends of subsidies are falling back upon the argument that American ships must be assisted because it costs more to officer and man and feed them than it costs in Great Britain. The Democrats will answer to this that Great Britain pays more than Germany or France, and yet enjoys the bulk of the carrying trade of the world.

ATTACKS THE SHIPPING BILL.

Senator Clay Analyzes the Pending Measure and Points Out Its Defects as He Sees Them.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The first speech in opposition to the Ship Subsidy bill in the Senate was delivered to-day by Mr. Clay, (Dem., Ga.) He is one of the minority members of the Committee on Commerce, which conducted the hearings on the measure and reported it to the Senate, and is recognized as one of the most vigorous opponents of the bill in the Senate. During nearly two hours, which his speech consumed, he was accorded close attention by the Senators on both sides of the chamber.

In beginning, Mr. Clay contended that the promotion of commerce and the increasing of the foreign trade of the United States, two of the most important objects of the pending measure, would not follow the enactment of the bill into law. The one definite thing that was known about the operation of the proposed legislation was that it would take from the Treasury of the United States $9,000,000 a year for a period of twenty years, and donate that vast sum to the ship owners carrying the foreign trade of this country. In other words, "one man's business is to be heavily taxed in order to advance and make more profitable the private business of another citizen."

Mr. Clay entered upon an analysis of the pending measure. He pointed out that an additional amount was paid owners of vessels of greater speed, regardless of freight capacity. He said that "the subsidy to be given vessels up to twelve knots, which are really our great freight carriers, is only 1½ cents per gross ton, while the subsidy given to a fast steamer, which carries chiefly passengers and fine manufactured goods, is 8 8-10 cents per ton for a twenty-one-knot ship." Thus it would appear, he contended, that the twelve-knot vessel, which really carried the products of the country, would receive only a little more than one-third of the subsidy, paid to the fast passenger steamers. He elaborated what he deemed to be the "injustice and inequality" of the measure in this respect, presenting a comparison of cargoes carried by the St. Paul, a swift steamer of the American Line, and of the Manhattan, one of the great freighters of the Atlantic Transportation Company.

The comparison showed that the Manhattan, a fourteen-knot ship, carried immense quantities of agricultural and manufactured products, while the St. Paul carried practically no manufactures or agricultural products of any kind; yet, contended Mr. Clay, the Manhattan will receive little more than one-third of the subsidy given the St. Paul.

"How those who favor this measure," he declared, "which donates annually to the St. Paul more than $300,000, can maintain that the farmers and producers of this country are the principal beneficiaries of this bill passes my comprehension. I am not surprised that at the hearings before the committee not a single farmer or producer appeared to advocate the passage of the bill; and I am not surprised that the ship owners alone monopolized the time of the committee in pointing out great benefits that would accrue to the country from the passage of the bill. An analysis of the bill will demonstrate that they alone are the beneficiaries of this legislation."

Mr. Clay contended that the greater part of the exports of the United States were carried in steamers of less than eleven knots' speed, and that it was not, therefore, within the bounds of reason or justice that the fast vessels, which carried only a small percentage of the exports, should receive the great bulk of the subsidy.

He maintained that the bill as formulated by the committee would not tend to increase the merchant marine of the United States. "If," said he, "Senators will examine the testimony taken before the committee, the conclusion will be reached that the ship owners have a thorough organization to carry through this legislation. They are not seeking opportunities to build ships, but they are trying to secure legislation that will enable them to go in the public Treasury and draw $9,000,000 annually to divide among themselves. If it be the sole purpose of the friends of this measure to encourage the building of ships and to enlarge our merchant marine, why is it necessary to pay the bulk of this subsidy to the owners of ships already in existence without requiring them to build and put in use other ships of a similar character? If those who favor this legislation are acting in good faith, why did they not provide that the subsidy shall be paid to those who will build ships hereafter?"

Mr. Clay contended that the provision of the bill which enables American owners of foreign vessels to place those vessels under American register on condition that they construct in American shipyards vessels of like tonnage and speed, would not increase the merchant marine. He said that, inasmuch as these owners of foreign vessels brought under the American flag would receive only 50 per cent. of the subsidy provided in the bill for American vessels, they could not afford to come into competition with those ships which are now under American register. He vigorously attacked the amendments which had been made to the bill since the present session of Congress began, and presented a long technical argument in support of his assertion that they had been made in the interests of a favored class of shipbuilders. He held that as only ships constructed within the time specified by the bill could enjoy the subsidy, it would be impossible for capitalists to build new ships after the lapse of the specified period to compete with the subsidized vessels.

"An American marine built up in this way," declared Mr. Clay, "will not remain long at a maximum point, but will decrease and go to decay as soon as the bounty ceases. If money must be taken from the Treasury to give life and growth to our shipping interests, it will be essential to continue the bounty system; otherwise retrogression, failure, and ruin will follow."

After discussing the facilities of the United States for shipbuilding, Mr. Clay argued that there was no more reason for giving a subsidy to shipbuilders and owners than to the farmer who produces wheat, or cotton, or corn. If the ship owner is entitled to a subsidy, he contended, the farmer is equally entitled to one.

At the conclusion of Mr. Clay's speech, Mr. Hanna, (Rep., Ohio,) who, in common with Senators on both sides of the chamber, had given close attention to the address, said he had expected to submit some remarks on the bill to-day, but owing to the lateness of the hour, would postpone the delivery of his address until Thursday.

BOOT AND SHOE MEN MEET.

Machinery Lease Question Before the Association of Manufacturers.

An adjourned meeting of the Board of Directors of the National Association of Boot and Shoe Manufacturers was held at the Cosmopolitan Hotel, 125 Chambers Street, yesterday, the session being a continuation of the meeting of last month held at Philadelphia.

At the meeting held in Philadelphia the officers of the United Shoe Machine Company promised an answer to the Directors' request for a statement on the machinery lease question, the answer to be made within thirty days. Instead of the answer, a letter, dated Dec. 6, was received requesting a week or ten days' additional time. In consequence, Secretary Townsend stated last night the Board of Directors of the Boot and Shoe Manufacturers have appointed a committee, as suggested by the New England Shoe and Leather Association, to confer with a like committee of their association for the purpose of further considering the interests of the shoe manufacturers. The initial meeting of the joint committee will be held in Boston next Friday morning.

FROM STEAMER TO THE TOMBS.

Traveler from Costa Rica Arrested for Absconding with a Large Sum.

José Antonio Martinez, who says he is a merchant-planter of Costa Rica, was arrested as he stepped from the Atlas Line steamer Athos yesterday by Central Office Detectives Moody and Leeson. Advices were received Tuesday last from United States Consul Guggen, at Panama, that Martinez was an absconder.

Martinez was accompanied by a woman, who he said was his wife. She went to the American Hotel, at Irving Place and Fifteenth Street, and registered as "Josefa Taborcio."

Martinez was remanded to the Tombs as a fugitive from justice. He had drafts for $7,202. The largest was for £1,000, English money. There was also $527 in Mexican money and a number of gold pieces. The prisoner denied the charge, and said the money was his brother's.

NATIVES AT GUAM REBUILDING.

Conditions on the Island Improve—Supplies Sent There.

MANILA, Dec. 11.—The United States hospital ship Solace has arrived at Cavite from San Francisco. Her officers say the condition of affairs at the Island of Guam has considerably improved. Dwellings are being restored and the people are resuming their occupations, but the crops are practically all destroyed, though there is no immediate want.

The Solace left supplies there, and the Arethusa has taken a considerable quantity to Guam from Cavite. The reports as to the number of deaths are about unchanged.

The wives of Commander Seton Schroeder (the new Governor of Guam) and other officers who went to the island on the Solace remained at Guam.

PHILIPPINES TARIFF BILL.

Importers May Claim Return of Duties on Goods from United States.

MANILA, Dec. 11.—The Taft Commission to-day discussed the preliminary portions of the Tariff bill, in Committee of the Whole. Merchants made a few suggestions.

The importers are watching for the decision of the Supreme Court on the Porto Rican tariff. They say that if it is decided to be unconstitutional they will claim a return of all duties paid on goods from the United States since the date of the Paris treaty, and will also claim the return of port charges on vessels from the United States. Up to the present, Spanish duties have been levied, pending the act which supersedes them, but these provide duties on goods from the United States.

FUTURE TRADE WITH CANADA.

Commenting on the enterprises on the Canadian territory connected with the water power at Sault Sainte Marie, of which we recently gave an account, the journals of Detroit are discussing very seriously the splendid opportunities open to the trade and industry of the United States, if we have the foresight to enter into liberal arrangements with the Canadian Government.

What attracts the attention of these keen observers on our northern frontier is not the immediate interests involved in our relations with Canada. These are already very important. It will surprise many of our readers to know that the statistics of the Association of National Manufacturers show that the trade of the single State of Pennsylvania with Canada exceeds the entire trade of the whole United States with all South America. Our Government has for years been making strenuous efforts to secure reciprocal arrangements with the countries of South America, and we are far from condemning these efforts. They have had a perfect justification, and they have produced some good results. But the basis of actual trade with Canada on which we may establish like arrangements, or better, is far more solid and extensive. It is not, however, the actual trade that is most significant, except as showing how powerful is the tendency to trade that has overcome existing barriers to this extent. It is the really vast possibilities of the future that arouse the attention of our Detroit contemporaries. And these are as varied as they are great.

The one feature that distinguishes our relations with Canada from those with any other country is that they have grown up naturally in obedience to the forces of mutual necessity and advantage, without the slightest factitious aid, and, indeed, in spite of arbitrary obstacles imposed from one side and from the other. It has been the inevitable trade only that has been developed, and this is of immense promise in regard to future development if, instead of opposing trade, we invite it. The forces that have been able to produce such results under such adverse conditions must be very strong. They are in fact the strongest known in commercial intercourse. The people on the other side of our northern border are of the same race as ourselves. They are working out the same sort of civilization by the same general means. Their ideals are substantially the same as our own. Their modes of individual and social life are similar. The comforts essential to them, the things they seek to provide for themselves and their families, their habits of clothing, food, and dwellings do not differ greatly from our own. Their standards of business intercourse, their conception of commercial credit, the laws by which they are guided, the financial and commercial institutions that grow up among them, are practically ours. There is no more friction or difficulty in doing business with them than there is in doing business between the States.

Our Canadian neighbors, moreover, are engaged in precisely the kind of task that we have ourselves been toiling at for the whole period of our National existence—they are trying to develop the limitless and varied resources of a relatively new land of enormous area. We are further along with our task than they are with theirs. But they have reached a stage where they can offer very great inducements to the enterprise, skill, intelligence, and capital of the United States, and we have reached a stage where we are in direct and substantial need of what they can give us. For the present they have great variety and richness of raw materials which we have not in the quantity needed. There is absolutely no excuse, much less justification, for the maintenance of artificial obstructions to the trade of the two countries. It is the opinion of those likely to be well informed that the Canadian Government is in a position and a disposition to renew the negotiations broken off in the early part of the year with reasonable prospect of a favorable conclusion. It is an opportunity that our Government should certainly avail itself of promptly and in a friendly spirit. There is nothing, and there is likely to be nothing, in all our relations with other countries, so far as can now be seen, more important than that the two English-speaking peoples of this continent shall be allowed to work out their magnificent commercial future in rational freedom, as their mutual interests shall dictate.

RURAL FREE DELIVERY.

The surprising thing about the free delivery of the mails to the rural population of the United States is the small cost of the service. The gross cost of the routes on which the service is already established is less than $1 per capita. The offsets to this expenditure through the saving effected in abolishing a good many fourth-class Post Offices and through the resulting increase of revenue reduce the net cost to about 66 cents per capita. For less than $14,000,000 the Government can deliver the mails every day at the doors of 21,000,000 people, thus bringing substantially the entire population of the country within the range of the postman's daily visits.

In the cities and towns free mail delivery is now made to 31,000,000 people. In the hamlets and on the farms there are 21,000,000 more who are within the limits of a reasonably extended rural free-delivery system. They are scattered over 1,000,000 square miles of territory, an area more than twice as great as that covered by the rural free-delivery systems of England, France, and Germany combined. It is the ambition and aim of Postmaster General SMITH to extend the benefits of free mail delivery to these 21,000,000 farmers and villagers as rapidly as Congress, in its enlightened generosity, will support him in that policy.

Up to the middle of November there had been established 2,614 routes, in 44 States, serving a population of 1,801,524. By the 1st of July next the Postmaster General hopes to have 4,300 routes in operation, carrying the mail daily to 3,500,000 people. Outside of the free-delivery system, the increase in postal revenues last year was only 2.49 per cent. In Carroll County, Md., which now has a complete rural free-delivery service, the increase was 10 per cent. On this basis Postmaster General SMITH estimates an immediate increase of 7.51 per cent. in receipts as the direct result of the extension of the service over the 1,000,000 square miles of the country not now reached by the postman. Deducting also the saving effected by the discontinuance of fourth-class Post Offices and star routes, the net annual cost of free rural delivery over all of the country that can reasonably be reached by it is reduced to $13,782,224.

This is a small expenditure for a Government undertaking of such direct and visible benefit to the people. Any policy, any invention, any change in habit or custom that brings the people of a country nearer together and makes them better acquainted by facilitating the exchange of thought and greeting makes the Nation better and stronger. The demonstrated results of the beginning already made justify the Postmaster General in saying of the rural free-delivery system:

> It stimulates social and business correspondence and so swells the postal receipts. Its introduction is invariably followed by a large increase in the circulation of the press and periodical literature. The farm is thus brought into daily contact with the movements of the business world. A more accurate knowledge of ruling markets and varying prices is diffused, and the producer, with his quicker communications and larger information, is placed on a surer footing. The value of farms, as has been shown in many cases, is enhanced. Good roads become indispensable, as their improvement is the essential condition of the service. The material and measurable benefits are signal and unmistakable.

It is a fortunate circumstance that the cost of rural free delivery can be met merely by correcting an old and flagrant abuse. If that class of publications, mostly of a purely advertising nature, that now by an evasion of the purpose of the law pay only the second-class rate of 1 cent per pound were made to pay 8 cents a pound under the third class, where they rightly belong, the Government would be the gainer by a sum estimated at more than $12,000,000 a year. The Postmaster General renews his urgent recommendation that this change be made. But independent of that, he asks an appropriation of three and a half millions for the extension of the rural free-delivery service. Congress can hardly refuse to give him that amount, and to increase the appropriation from year to year as fast as the department can make use of it in extending the service.

THE INVESTMENT OF A GREAT FORTUNE.

The schedule of the possessions of the late CORNELIUS VANDERBILT, filed yesterday with the Surrogate, show that Mr. VANDERBILT was strictly an investor, not at all a speculator. His personal fortune is appraised at $52,999,867. It is almost entirely invested in the bonds and shares of railroads of assured earning power. Bond investments represent about one-quarter of the personalty, shares of stock the remainder. A majority of the items on the schedule show a market value higher than the par value of the securities. The ratio of the present market value to the actual cost of these bonds and stocks to Mr. VANDERBILT is, of course, unknown.

This personal fortune of nearly $53,000,000 yielded to Mr. VANDERBILT in interest and dividends less than one million and three-quarters annually, almost exactly 3.28 per cent. Probably nobody in the country had better opportunities for investment than CORNELIUS VANDERBILT. If he ever distrusted his own judgment, he could at all times command the aid and counsel of the most expert judges of financial investments in the world. It may be accepted as true, therefore, that a return of about 3½ per cent. is the highest to be hoped for in these days by a large investor who makes the security of the principal the rule and indispensable condition of his ventures. Anything above 4 per cent. means taking a risk, and that Mr. VANDERBILT did not intentionally do.

It is evident, too, that in the later years of his life Mr. VANDERBILT's fortune was not increasing very much. The rule of safe investment forbade that. The income from his $20,000,000 of real estate could not have been very large, as his own splendid residences counted for the greater part of that sum. The income from his entire possessions may be safely put at less than $2,000,000, a sum not greatly in excess of the annual expenditure necessary and not unbecoming for a gentleman of his financial and social position. Here, then, was an American worth $73,000,000, certainly one of the very rich, who was not rapidly growing richer, if, indeed, he was growing richer at all.

But Mr. VANDERBILT was making others richer. The familiar homily of the preachers of Socialism and Populism would run something like this: The owner of these millions was a non-producer. He spent his time in clipping his coupons and indorsing his dividend checks. On the contrary, Mr. VANDERBILT was a producer and a worker on a sublime scale. His millions were invested in some of the busiest and most indispensable industries of the United States. His money made the life opportunity of countless men, and went to pay the salaries and wages that support innumerable American families. The transportation companies that were created or fostered by the Vanderbilt fortune are a substantive and integral part of the wealth-producing force of the Nation. CORNELIUS VANDERBILT's investments yielded 3.28 per cent. to him. They contributed a much larger sum to the annual enrichment of the American Nation.

THE SOUTH CAROLINA EXPOSITION.

It is not so very long since the City of Charleston aspired to a commercial supremacy among the ports of the Atlantic seaboard of the United States. It is only a little more than half a century since EMERSON represented it as the commercial rival of Boston and Philadelphia. Its supremacy, in our Colonial times, in all the arts of social civility, was admitted, ungrudgingly and with wonder, by JOSIAH QUINCY, who made the explicit admission, not repeated by any Bostonian since his time, that Boston was simply not to be compared with the Southern capital in "elegance." And this reputation Charleston has continued to sustain and to deserve ever since in spite of all political and commercial fluctuations; even perhaps, one may say, in consequence of her vicissitudes. A "hustling" city is no more necessarily the pleasantest for sojourn or for residence than a highly successful man is necessarily the most "clubable" or companionable. We might illustrate this remark from the statistics of certain Western towns, but it is to be feared that such a comparison might seem, on both sides, invidious, and we forbear.

At any rate, the active business men of the cities which have been left behind in the commercial race cannot be expected to enjoy their comparative stagnancy. Charleston would doubtless like to be twice as big and busy as she is. In fact, a Charlestonian writer has lately put forth a remonstrance against the common tendency to regard the chief port of South Carolina as "consisting exclusively of peculiarities and past." It is a good many years now since the latest of her calamities fell upon her, the earthquake, which had its redeeming feature in the promptness and generosity of all her sister cities, North as well as South, and in the memorable acknowledgment which the succor drew from the Mayor of Charleston: "It is a great thing to belong to the United States of America." Such a declaration, from "the nursery of secession," was worth even all it cost.

"The South Carolina Inter-State and West Indian Exposition" is the official name of the fair which was "inaugurated" at Charleston yesterday, and which is expected to be opened a year from now. The title seems to be sufficiently descriptive of its objects. First, it is to "expose" the progress which South Carolina and its neighbors have made during the past few years in modern industries. South Carolina, as a province, was at first based upon the production of indigo and rice. The slave trade and the cotton gin transformed its industry to the production of cotton. But its interests remained almost exclusively agricultural. Now they are coming to be much diversified and to include an increasing proportion of manufactures. And this is true also of the "hinterland" of Charleston, inside and outside of the State of South Carolina. It is, doubtless, to this multiplication and diversification of Southern industries that the South Carolina Exposition is meant primarily to direct attention.

But there is another obvious object, which is expressed in the second title of the fair, which can hardly be called secondary. Geographically, Charleston is evidently the Atlantic port which should profit and prosper most by the increase which is manifestly to take place, which has already begun to take place, in the trade of the United States with Cuba and Porto Rico. To call the attention of the Antilles, which are undergoing Americanization, to the advantages of the nearest continental port is so evidently a matter of local interest on the part of Charleston that it may almost present itself as a civic duty. And it is almost as evidently the interest of that back country of which Charleston is the outlet and market, and which will thrive in the prosperity of its port.

So far as the published reports indicate, both Charlestonians in particular and South Carolinians in general, have shown a keen sense of their opportunities. An admirable suburban site on the banks of the Ashley has been secured, largely through the public spirit of its private owners. The city and the State have made generous contribution, and it is confidently expected that the appropriation for a representation of the General Government, which was recommended by a committee of the Senate the last session of Congress, will be passed at the present session. The architect in chief of the fair has very judiciously, with a view both to "local color" and to the peculiar purpose of the exposition, chosen the Spanish Renaissance, which is still the vernacular architecture of Mexico and Cuba and Porto Rico, as the "style" of the exposition buildings, and the intrinsic effect of these is to be enhanced by landscape gardening, by sculptural embellishment, and by mural decoration, under the direction of acknowledged experts. Such a display, in the Winter climate of Charleston, can hardly fail to prove highly attractive to the mere picturesque tourist, as well as an additional inducement to those who visit the exposition on business. There is no reason why the Charleston Fair should not be even more popular and successful than any of its predecessors which have been held in the South since the war.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—There is more than an excuse, in the case of the man KILLORAN, for repeating the suggestion made recently in this column that the mere fact of having contracted the smallpox should be treated as convicting evidence that the sufferer from the malady has committed a grave misdemeanor; if not felony, to be punished with a severity commensurate with the seriousness of the offense. KILLORAN, a street car conductor on a much-used line, and performing duties that required ordinary intelligence, not only neglected to protect himself by vaccination—which would not have cost him a single penny or interfered in any appreciable degree with his work—but he continued to collect fares from his crowded passengers for days after his illness had developed. His claim that he did not know what was the matter with him is unworthy of consideration. If he did not know, he must have suspected, for he belongs to a class that reads the papers more or less and has opportunities for frequent discussion of current events. There is every reason for fearing that he has spread contagion widely, and he did it with a willfulness which the circumstances do not mitigate to the extent of relieving him from a heavy moral responsibility that ought to be also a legal one. Something of his burden, however, might well be transferred to the company that employs him. It is the obvious duty of the street railway corporations to see to it that the men with whom a very large fraction of the city's population is forced to come into daily and close association are neither voluntary nor involuntary distributors of infection. The company officers have only to make a request, and, without the slightest expense to themselves, the Health Board would send vaccinators to any convenient place and within a few hours completely remove the possibility of a repetition of KILLORAN's outrageous act. Why this is not done it is difficult to imagine. The value and efficiency of vaccination are not dubitable or debatable, and yet it is a question if half of New York's millions are immune from smallpox to-day.

—Fierce antagonism will be awakened in the minds of people who can see temperance only in total abstinence by an address delivered last Sunday evening by the Rev. ALGERNON S. CRAPSEY, an Episcopalian clergyman of Rochester, this State. Mr. CRAPSEY argued that vice was merely unorganized virtue, and not to be destroyed, therefore, but to be converted into something else and better. He particularly objected to the creation of what he called artificial sins, and instanced, as doing exactly that, the early Sabbath laws of New England, the result of which was a reaction against any Sabbath observance at all, and the present contention of many well-intentioned people that even the most careful use of wine or spirits is morally wrong. On the latter point Mr. CRAPSEY said: "Such use is not to-day a crime against the State, nor is it a sin against any known commandment of GOD. By endeavoring to make it a sin those who have the cause of temperance at heart are doing much to injure that cause. Men take a very great risk when they make a definition of sin which condemns the best and noblest men that ever lived, among them the founder of Christianity. It is this intemperate advocacy of the cause of temperance which has done much injury by bringing the sale of wines and other spirituous liquors into disrepute and to cause the very evils we all so justly deplore. In this as in all other cases, the true remedy for the evil is by conversion and not destruction. What is wrong for one person is not necessarily wrong for all persons. Manufacturing artificial sins is simply to array against yourself a vast number of men who would otherwise be on your side. Let your neighbors alone." Incidentally, Mr. CRAPSEY made a savage attack on churches that move out of streets where poverty and sin abound and go to aristocratic streets where everything is pleasant and respectable. That, too, may excite a little fierce antagonism against him.

THE LETTER I DID NOT SEND.

George Birdseye in Boston Globe.

He was the friend of my boyhood,
My youth and my manhood's prime,
We had vowed to be ever faithful
To the end of our earthly time.
But somehow it happened we quarreled;
One word to another led;
And our eyes were flashing in anger
And bitter was all we said.

That night I wrote such a letter
As one might write to a foe,
And told him that never thereafter
Would I wish his presence to know;
We must pass each other as strangers,
Our lives henceforward apart;
And let him know that forever
I had torn him out of my heart.

Then I sought my bed, still raging,
But I courted slumber in vain;
The face of my more than brother
Rose before me ever again.
He was always so true beside me
And sharing all changes of life;
Our words had been always of loving
And never till now of strife.

And then our quarrel—what was it?
How did it ever befall?
Perhaps he was right—yes, I know it,
It was I in the wrong, after all.
Then I rose from my bed, took the letter
And cast it into the fire;
And there saw it smolder in ashes;
And thus did my anger expire.

A fair morning shone on our meeting;
A look we could each understand
Had drawn us once more together
In a warm, firm grasp of the hand.
Not a word was said of our quarrel,
Again it was friend and friend,
Thank God that he never saw it—
The letter I did not send!

A Canal or a Fort?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Presumably the United States is about to enter upon the important and costly work of constructing a Nicaragua Canal.

The conditions surrounding the enterprise are such—political, commercial, and international—that the United States must decide, and decide now, which of two principles is to govern:

Is the canal to be built primarily as a measure of war? Or is it to be built primarily as a work of peace, for the uses of peace?

The United States is in position to do as it wishes. Its fiat is law—or may be made law whereinsoever it be worth while—upon this continent. If it shall be the solemn judgment of the American people that they want a National rather than an international canal—a war canal first and a commercial canal incidentally—they will have it. They ought to have it, provided it is what they want and what they ought to want. There is no power that could stop them. No ancient treaty, signed under conditions far different from those which now exist, could prevent. If this shall be the final verdict of America, and treaties stand in the way, they must be removed. A treaty is not eternal. One generation cannot forever bind its successors. The progress of the world cannot be stayed by old parchments. If the American people want to build a canal as an exclusively National enterprise they are able to count the cost and to do it, even in the face of the opposition of the whole world.

But do the people want this? Have they studied the problem patiently, thoroughly? Do they know the true philosophy of it? Have they reached a deliberate and final determination about it? If they have, that is the last word, and it is right. But we should not mistake for that last word the excitable utterances of a few newspapers.

Peace, and the commercial and moral development which peace brings to peoples, is the business of nations. For thirty years there has not been war between two first-class powers. Not for almost a century has the United States been engaged in a foreign war with an opponent of the first rank. It may be one or two centuries more before such a war comes again.

The contingency of war is so remote that only the gravest of considerations in view of such war could justify the United States in choosing the military instead of the peace principle to dominate this enterprise.

What is the great military advantage which the United States is to gain by nationalization? Is it proportionate to the sacrifices which must be made in other directions? In answer to these queries no mere phrasemaking will suffice; shibboleths, no matter how high-sounding, will not do; patriotism is commendable, but it must be practical, not rhetorical.

The United States cannot have war with an equal upon this continent, because the equal does not exist and is not likely ever to exist. In war with an inferior we do not need the artificial aid of the canal, and war, with an equal must be war with a European power or perhaps an Asiatic power—that is to say, with a power whose base is across the Atlantic or across the Pacific.

If the canal possesses any military advantage to the United States it is found in this one condition—that the channel is kept open to our ships while it may be closed to the enemy. There is no other advantage; fortifications are alone for the protection of the channel; outfitting stations may be more advantageously established elsewhere; the sole possible advantage is our ships passing and the enemy's kept out. As our ships are to pass freely under the neutralization as well as the military principle, the strategic advantage must be sought within still narrower limits—in keeping the enemy out when his going in would do us great harm.

But is there any actual probability that our enemy would ever wish to send a fleet through the canal? Under what circumstances? Why should a European fleet be sent through the canal to attack the Pacific Coast? Or an Asiatic fleet to attack the Atlantic Coast?

Already the United States is a great naval power. It is to be greater. Against a weak adversary like Spain we shall never need the aid of an isthmian short-cut; if we need it at all it will be against one of the other great naval powers. But why even then?

A naval power fit to cope with the United States will have fleets in every ocean, as will the United States. In the very nature of things it will be the business of the strategists to maintain approximate equilibrium between these forces. The naval war of the future will be a war whose main lines were long before foreseen and provided for. Such mobilization as there is will be deliberate, advertised, checkmated.

When the hour for mobilization comes Pacific fleets, without doubt, will fight Pacific fleets; Atlantic fleets will fight Atlantic fleets. But mark this—if any power finds it advantageous to use the canal in other disposition of its forces that power will be the United States; and probably it is the only one that will.

Why? If a Mediterranean or Channel squadron seeks the coast off San Francisco to attack American cities or shipping it is approximately as near via Suez; if an Asiatic squadron wishes to reach our Atlantic seaboard it is as near the other way around the world.

But the United States, with a coast near either mouth of the canal, with its base convenient to both termini, may now and then find it advantageous to throw fleets through the canal to reinforce, to attack, to defend.

In other words—and this is a salient fact—with the canal open to the warships of all nations the United States is the only power that would have any considerable use for it in time of war. Proof of this is found in the geography of the world. It is found in the distance of the chief naval bases of other powers from the canal; in our proximity to it; in the fact that in both oceans connected by the canal we have coasts and cities to defend.

If neutralization involved closing of the canal to all ships of war, including those of the United States, it could never be accepted. That would be as if the isthmus had not been pierced, and we should neither gain nor lose. But with neutralization opening the canal to all warships we gain all the strategic advantage there is to be gained, be that much or be it little, and probably it is less than many people imagine it to be.

Without any doubt the sensational voyage of the Oregon in 1898 stirred more sentiment in favor of the isthmian canal than all the writing and agitation of a half century had been able to do. More than that, it was the graphic object lesson which served to convince millions of impressionable people that we must have a National, a military, canal. "The Oregon of the future shall not be compelled to go around Cape Horn, but the enemy's ships must go round."

But reflect a moment: The future Oregon will not have to round the Horn if the canal be built and neutralized, but may pass as often as may be necessary.

Why did we send the Oregon from the Pacific to the Atlantic in 1898? Because there were no Spanish ships upon the Pacific for the Oregon to fight; had there been Spanish ships there the Oregon would have remained to engage them. So in that case the existence of a neutralized canal would have saved the United States the delay of rounding the Horn, and would have been of no possible use to the enemy, because the enemy had no ships to send through.

Suppose Dewey had been crushed at Manila. In that case the Oregon, unable to cope with the victorious Spanish fleet, would have sought the waters of Cuba, but the result, imagining the canal in existence and neutralized, would be the same—the Oregon would have cut through the isthmus, and the Spanish fleet, if ordered to Cuban waters, would have gone by the way of Suez. In other words, the United States would have gained a distinct advantage from the existence of a neutralized canal and the enemy none at all.

Imagine Dewey crushed at Manila, the Oregon at Honolulu, another American ship at San Francisco. Would the Spanish fleet be ordered to seek the American ships and destroy them also? No. Escape through the canal would be easy on account of the shorter steaming distance. Pursuit would be useless; and if it were desired to send the Spanish fleet to Cuba or our Atlantic seaboard the Suez route would be chosen, being practically as short and with Spanish coaling stations en route.

Imagine a naval combat in Pacific waters not far from the western terminus of the canal. If our fleets win the victory the enemy's survivors will seek escape, not via Nicaragua, for that would be to rush into danger of attack on the Atlantic side, but to the westward. If our fleet is defeated, our survivors seek escape through the canal and succeed if they reach it first; if they do not reach it first the existence or non-existence of the canal, neutralization or nationalization, it is the same.

It has been argued that opening of the canal will help the United States in the defense of the Philippines. That is true; but it is just as much true with a neutralized canal as with a nationalized canal. If our Pacific fleet needs reinforcing for the defense of the Philippines we could use the canal in dispatch of ships from the Atlantic. But what other power would wish to send fleets to the Philippines via Nicaragua? None.

It is true that in case of combat between an American and a foreign fleet near one of the mouths of the canal, and the defeat or destruction of our ships, the victors might use the canal in reaching the other ocean and save some time in doing so. In such an event the United States might suffer loss of strategic advantage through neutralization. But note the nature of the combination of circumstances needed to bring about this result: The battle must take place within such radius of the canal mouth as to give a distinct advantage in seeking the other ocean by it instead of by Suez; the American fleet must be defeated; and there must be urgent reason for haste on the part of the victors in reaching the other ocean. Such a combination is not impossible; but it is likely to occur about once in five centuries.

In an emergency like this, or any similar one giving advantage to our enemy through use of the canal, it should be remembered that the advantage is not absolute but relative. The conditions must be such as to save him time in transferring his fleet from one ocean to the other as compared with the Suez or other ocean route, and the time saved to him, be it a week, a fortnight, or a month, must be vital to him and damaging to us. In the rare event of an enemy wishing to throw a fleet through the canal the time saved over the other way round and the effectiveness of that time saved in inflicting loss upon us is the true measure and the only measure of the dangers of neutralization. How small a factor is this balance of time saved in the remote contingencies in which it is likely to figure at all any one may imagine; and it should be remembered that only the most urgent need could probably induce our enemy to choose the Nicaragua instead of the Suez route, on account of coaling stations if for no stronger reason.

But there is another reason why our enemy should not choose the Nicaragua route, and it is so strong a reason that in the opinion of strategists he would never use that route at all. A nation at war with the United States would hesitate a long time before ordering its fleet to pass through a canal 170 miles long, every foot of which was patrolled by Americans. This would not necessarily imply suspicion of the good faith of the American Government; there might be every confidence in the honor of the American authorities and in their willingness to afford all possible protection to the enemy's ships as long as they were in neutral waters. But such temptations to miscreants, mistaken patriots, adventurers, dare-devils, would perhaps prove too strong to be resisted. No one believes the Spanish Government destroyed the Maine; every one believes that Spanish officers did. Common prudence would require our enemy to keep his ships out of our canal. His prudence would be no impeachment of us as a Government or as a people. Were we at war with Spain, we should not care to send on a tour of Spain an American whose life was precious to our cause. Our fear would not be of the Spanish Government or the Spanish people as a whole; we should feel that they were sure to do everything in their power to afford him protection. But we should not send him, just the same, unless some overwhelming emergency demanded it.

A popular phrase just now is that the canal must be built and owned by the United States; that it must be fortified, and that it must become a "part of our coast line." Those who advocate this do not stop to consider that coast line, if valuable and worth protecting, is a source of weakness to the country possessing it. A coast line studded with rich cities is an extension of the line of vulnerability. It is a broadening of the zone in which the enemy may attack harmfully and effectively, and is therefore so much more to be defended.

The Nicaragua Canal as a coast line would at once become the most vulnerable part of our whole frontier; vulnerable because artificial, fragile, easily destroyed; vulnerable like a great city, with this difference—that the rules of modern war protect cities from bombardment under certain conditions, while no such considerations would exist in the case of the canal.

The proposition to militarize and nationalize the canal is a proposition to make our weakest point the centre of our whole strategic system and to invite the enemy to attack it.

If the canal is worth building as a military measure alone, then of course it is worth adjusting our system to it. It becomes the key, the backbone, of our strategy; all our calculations are made with regard to it and to the added efficiency of our fleets due to its existence and to the fact that it is open to them and closed to our foe. If this theory is not sound, and the canal does not become the centre of our system, then it is not worth while constructing it as a military measure.

If we accept the military canal, we must accept its corollary. And then what?

If the canal is of actual importance to us, it is important to our foe to destroy it. If it is the centre of our strategic system, there his hardest blows will be struck.

The canal is peculiarly open to attack. It is far from the mainland of the United States. It may be assailed by fleets at the termini; by land forces, by spies, traitors, dynamiters. It is a fragile thing, composed of earth and masonry work, locks and dams. A miscreant with a pocketful of dynamite might render it useless at the very moment when we most wished it to fulfill its expected military functions.

Actually the canal might not be of the great strategic importance to the United States which had been expected. In that event the incentive to our foe to destroy it might be lessened; but he would still find provocation in its money value, in the fact that it was owned by the United States, in the dire wound upon American prestige and pride which its damage or destruction would inflict.

The true test is this: Would any strategist of reputation say the naval value of an exclusive canal over and above the naval value of an international canal was great enough to warrant its construction as a military measure alone—hundreds of millions upon the remote possibility that once in a few centuries we could retard by a week or a month the transfer of an enemy's fleet from one ocean to the other, and by a still rarer combination of circumstances thereby escape loss great enough to compensate for all this outlay?

Every one knows that but for its commercial importance this great engineering enterprise would not even be dreamed of. It is a commercial enterprise or it is nothing; war has no place in or about it. If any power in the world should welcome an opportunity to exclude war from it, it is the power most interested in it financially and commercially.

If through some accident of nature a great and exceedingly valuable mining or manufacturing concern had been established upon one of our islands near our coast; if this plant were exposed to the attacks of hostile naval forces; if the great naval and maritime powers were to say to us that this plant was immensely important to them as well as to us, because its output entered directly or indirectly into the world's industries; if on this account these powers were to propose to unite with us in guaranteeing forever immunity of that plant from attack or harm upon condition that they were to be permitted always to go on buying of its product at the rates fixed by us or its owners; and if we were to reject this proposal upon the ground that it was our property and we wished to fortify and defend it and reserve the right not to sell of its output to our foe, by this means inviting the world some day or other to attack and perhaps destroy the whole concern, we should have almost an exact parallel to the canal problem. What differences there are between the actual problem and the imaginary one are all in favor of neutralization of the canal. In either case we should be attempting to make a military establishment of that which primarily and in essence has nothing to do with militarism and should be removed therefrom as far as possible.

If we go ahead and build a military canal, and it shall be the judgment of the world that we have thereby gained a decided military advantage, it inevitably follows that the world will open the Panama route as checkmate. There is no escape from this logic: If the canal is enormously valuable as a military asset, it will be paralleled; if it is not valuable as such asset, why invite a parallel? Why enter upon a course which in the end will surely fail to bring us strategic advantage, and which will almost surely result in commercial failure, because of our effort to make it military instead of commercial?

War between great nations comes but rarely, and more and more infrequently as civilization moves forward. Commerce goes on forever. The United States proposes to connect two oceans and to invite all the world to use the channel for its merchant ships; but the United States at the same time proposes to dig this channel primarily as a war device, and thus to invite the world to divert its commerce from the old channel to the new in order to aid in upbuilding and maintaining a selfish project which at any moment is liable to be turned against the world.

When the isthmian canal is finished, a vast commerce will pour through it. In time the trade, the manufacturing, the relative prices, the practical economics of the whole world will become adjusted to this new line of communication, with its new freight rates, its new alignment of the availability of raw materials and distribution of products. All the world will thus have a direct interest in the stability of the channel. The more confidence the world has in its stability and freedom from danger of interruptions, the more the world will lend itself to its use and to the readjustments of economics which its use entails. The more the world gives itself to the use of the channel, the more right it has to demand that there be no interruptions through accident, crime, or politics. Stoppage of the flow through it would disarrange and harass the affairs of all civilization.

This is why the neutralization principle is right, and why it would be right if the military advantage which the United States might derive from an exclusive canal were twenty times greater than it is.

To build this great highway of commerce; to invite the world to use it and to adjust its economics to its conditions; to refuse the world's proffer of an international guarantee of immunity from war's harms; to insist upon making a military establishment of that which is essentially commercial; to take the greatest engineering enterprise man has ever known, the greatest artificial aid to world-communication he has ever planned, and throw it deliberately to the dogs of war; to purposely make the crowning achievement of peace a pawn of battle; to hang over it the clouds of doubt and instability; to offer it not as an eternally secure gift to civilization but as a prize to be fought for when man's passions are at their worst—this is not statesmanship.

If there had never been a Clayton-Bulwer treaty, if the United States were absolutely free handed, still we should not propose a thing like this.

The United States Senate is looked to in our governmental system as the bulwark against clamor, passion, and immature sentiment.

Were this problem left to the solution of experts, thinkers, and statesmen, uninfluenced by the noisiness of superficial though doubtless well-meaning persons, the world to do precisely that which the world has proposed to the United States to do.

Civilization never had a stronger tendency than now toward placing limitations upon war, toward immunity of noncombatants and of commerce, toward arbitration, toward making war almost an impossibility, toward minimizing the destruction and the horrors of war if wars there must be.

It is not for the United States, the new leader among the nations, the most wholesome moral force in the world at the dawn of the new century, to take a reactionary step. AN AMERICAN.

THE IRISH CONVENTION

Healyites and O'Brienites Quarrel Fiercely at First Session.

"TIM" HEALY IS EXCLUDED

Resolution Expelling Him from Parliamentary Party Passed—Boer War Denounced.

DUBLIN, Dec. 11.—Delegates representing County Councils, Borough Corporations, District Councils, branches of the United Irish League, and kindred bodies met today in national convention in the Dublin Rotunda in order to "recreate the Irish Party."

John E. Redmond, who presided, said the gathering was the "Parliament of the Irish people." Seventy-five Irish members of the House of Commons were present, and several priests were on the platform.

John Dillon, amid cheers, proposed a resolution to the effect that the South African war was entered upon in pursuance of a conspiracy to deprive two free nations of their liberty in the interests of capitalists and mine owners. He read letters from Boer Generals, giving instances of the alleged brutality of British soldiers in South Africa, and also the death notice of a Boer boy of eight in the camp at Port Elizabeth, whose father had refused to surrender, and whose home was blown up with dynamite. According to the notice, the child and his mother were deported hundred of miles and fed upon pea soup. The lad's death was described by Mr. Dillon as "cowardly murder."

Intensely excited by Mr. Dillon's speech, the assembly broke forth into fierce cries and protests against the conduct of the war. The resolution was adopted unanimously, and the convention ordered it telegraphed to the President of the Afrikander bund.

William O'Brien introduced a resolution excluding Timothy M. Healy from the Parliamentary party. While their differences are of a personal character, he urged that for the sake of unity Mr. Healy's exclusion was necessary.

Timothy C. Harrington, who was frequently interrupted, said that if the action of the delegates plunged the country back into the vortex of despair future generations would curse the convention and those who participated in it.

"Hog-wash!" yelled an O'Brienite in the gallery.

"I know where the hog is," said Mr. Harrington, which caused protests and cries of "He is calling his fellow-patriots 'Hogs'!"

There were loud shouts on all sides of "Put oot all the Tims!" met by counter demonstrations by the Healyites.

Mr. Harrington, after the Chairman had admonished the convention to give him a fair hearing, made a temperate appeal for harmony.

After either speeches an amendment, taking the bitterness out of the resolution, was proposed by Father McNeece, but this was rejected overwhelmingly, and Mr. O'Brien's resolution was adopted, only twenty-five hands showing against it.

The convention then adjourned until tomorrow.

BRITISH ARMY ESTIMATES.

Supplementary Vote of £16,000,000 Agreed To by House of Commons.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—After question time yesterday the House of Commons went into Committee of Supply, and the Right Hon. William St. John Brodrick, the Secretary of State for War, introduced the supplementary estimates of £16,000,000 for the army. He admitted that the Government's expectations had been oversanguine, and said it was now anticipated that the expenditure to March 31 would be little short of the outlay the Government had been incurring during the whole financial year. He added that the Government's policy was to pursue the war with the strongest possible force, and a continuous stream of supplies, so that peace might be more quickly achieved.

Mr. Brodrick added that he believed the Government was now asking for the final sum required for "this abnormal war."

Sir William Vernon-Harcourt (Liberal) expressed the opinion that the House had never heard a more depressing confession. The whole secret of the Government's miscalculations, he added, was this—the war was in nowise a warfare of Governments, but a conflict of races. He thought that now they had overthrown the Governments of the republics by overwhelming force of arms, they should deal with the brave burghers remaining, not by perpetually increasing the expenditures, but by a policy of reconciliation.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the Liberal leader, said that the Secretary of State for War had made a frank statement as to the real condition of affairs, and he expressed a hope that the Government would bring home the volunteers.

Mr Brodrick replied that it would be impossible for the Government to give any pledge on that point, as Lord Kitchener must be kept supplied with many mounted men

Timothy M. Healy (Irish Nationalist) remarked:

"A war begun in braggadocio and hypocrisy has brought humiliation to England and the culprit is in the Colonial Office."

Henry Labouchère (Liberal) expressed the opinion that guerrilla warfare in South Africa might last for two years.

The supplementary estimates of £16,000,000 were then adopted by a vote of 284 against 9.

The House having gone into Committee of Ways and Means, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, explained that the existing borrowing powers of the Chancellor only amounted to £5,000,000. He moved, therefore, a resolution authorizing him to borrow by War Loan, Exchequer Bonds, or Treasury Bills £11,000,000. He said he did not expect to use his borrowing powers until February or March, and he asked the House to postpone any discussion of the subject until to-morrow.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman expressed his approval of the resolution, which was agreed to.

The House then adjourned. It had voted the money to carry on a war Lord Roberts has daily announced as "finished," at full scale cost for another three months, in the listless manner characteristic of its proceedings when dealing with finance, and with a careful avoidance of what might turn out to be unjustifiable hopefulness.

Mr. Brodrick's speech was rather gloomy and pessimistic. His début as Secretary of State for War was unengaging, if not disappointing, but the House, apathetic after the exciting debates of Monday, and, like the nation, tired of war, was in no mood for severe criticism. Otherwise the fact that not even the volunteers could be spared to come home and other matters in Mr. Brodrick's statement would have given a chance for lively discussion.

The minority of eight against the vote included Messrs. Keir-Hardie, Lloyd-George, and Timothy M. Healy.

It is now certain that the session will terminate on Saturday.

ROBERTS'S POWERS LIMITED.

He Will Be, as Commander in Chief, in Same Position as Wolseley.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—Information drawn from W. St. John Brodrick, Secretary of State for War, in the House of Commons yesterday, that the powers of Lord Roberts as Commander in Chief will be the same as those of Lord Wolseley, calls out from the Daily Mail a strong protest. The paper contends that, with Lord Roberts as a lay figure, liable to be overruled by the Minister of War, real army reforms are quite improbable.

The Daily Chronicle says:

"We can but regret that Lord Roberts has not improved the shining moments of his popularity to put the position of Commander in Chief on a sounder basis, although we have no fear that Lord Roberts will be flouted, as Lord Wolseley is reported to have been."

It was said in the lobby of the House of Commons last evening that Gen. Ian Hamilton, who is returning with Lord Roberts, will receive a high appointment in the War Office.

KAISER'S POLICY CONDEMNED.

Sharply Criticised in Reichstag by Socialist and Radical Leaders.

BERLIN, Dec. 11.—In the Reichstag today, in a two hours' speech, Herr Bebel, the Socialist leader, bitterly criticised the general policy of the Government, and the Chamber, which was evidently ready to touch other questions than those of the budget, followed him intently.

"We are only at the beginning of a financial and economical depression," he said. "The official figures show that the finances of the empire are in a horrible condition."

"Emperor William," he continued, "ought, least of all, to have turned his back upon Mr. Krüger, especially after the telegram of 1896, which the Socialists disapproved, but which the Centre and the whole Right approved." What, Herr Bebel went on, the Imperial Chancellor had said yesterday in the Reichstag was precisely what he (Herr Bebel) had said in 1896.

Herr Richter, the Radical leader, who spoke even more powerfully, after criticising Emperor William for "allowing himself on very important occasions to be carried away by momentary impulses," said that this instability had crept into Germany's foreign and internal policies. He demanded succinct explanations from Count von Bülow, Count von Posadowsky-Wehner, Gen. von Gossler, and Admiral von Tirpitz as to why a number of steps had been decided upon, such as the use of voluntary contributions through Emperor William for building gunboats for Chinese waters, without permission from the Reichstag.

ROBERTS SAILS FOR HOME.

Starts on the Canada for England—His Address at Cape Town.

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 11.—Field Marshal Lord Roberts, with his wife and daughters, sailed for England to-day on the Canada.

At the reception in honor of Lord Roberts yesterday, when the Field Marshal rose to respond, after the presentation to him of the sword and casket, all present rose to their feet, cheering and waving handkerchiefs. The demonstration continued for some minutes. At its conclusion Lord Roberts made an eloquent address. After expressing deep thanks for the honor accorded to him, he said the war in South Africa had a peculiar interest for him, inasmuch as it enabled him to bring to what he hoped was a successful conclusion the work intrusted to him twenty years ago—that of dispelling by force of arms if necessary the aspirations of the Boers to render themselves independent of British control. Referring to his abortive visit to the Cape in 1881, Lord Roberts said:

"The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. The guiding hand of the Omnipotent will bring good out of what to our finite understanding was the most unfortunate war of 1881, for that war could not have consolidated the whole British Empire as firmly together as this has done, because it was fought by regulars alone, whereas the present war was fought by the militia, yeomanry, and volunteers, the admirable and workmanlike colonial contingents all fighting as brothers in arms under the dear old flag of the Queen."

Lord Roberts said he held the unique position of the first Field Marshal having the honor to command such an army. He was convinced, he declared, that this spontaneous outburst of patriotism was not ephemeral. England had only to give the signal and her sons would again flock to her banner from the ends of the world. Never had a mother more reason to be proud of her sons than had England to-day. God had brought them out of what in the dark days of last December had appeared to them the Valley of the Shadow of Death, and they could now remember the days of tribulation with deep gratitude for the mercy vouchsafed them.

Lord Roberts then paid a deeply moving tribute of gratitude to all who had worked with him. He added that his interest in South Africa would not cease on leaving its shores, but that he should watch its settlement with the utmost eagerness. Dwelling upon the necessity for co-operation between the Dutch and British, he said it would be his proudest boast if he could claim to have done nothing but what stress of war had compelled to hinder the friendly fusion of the two races. They must try to forgive and forget all that tended to bitterness of feeling, leaving the idea that nothing remained to be atoned for on either side.

"God has given into our hands," said the Field Marshal, "a great heritage, for which a heavy price has been paid in the blood of the best and bravest, and we must not be neglectful of the trust, as we have been in the past, but must be able to give a good account of our stewardship, and must remember there are other duties than national glorification."

Lord Roberts concluded his speech by quoting the first stanza of Kipling's "Recessional":

God of our fathers, known of old;
Lord of our far-flung battle line,
Beneath whose awful hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine;
Lord God of Hosts be with us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget.

MILNER CONDEMNS AFRIKANDERS.

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 11.—Sir Alfred Milner, British High Commissioner and Governor of Cape Colony, to-day received the deputation appointed by the recent Afrikander Congress at Worcester to present to him, for transmission to the British Government, the three resolutions adopted by the Congress.

In reply to the deputation's spokesman, Sir Alfred said:

"I shall forward these resolutions to the Imperial Government with my strong disapproval. They were framed by clever men now engineering the present agitation and encouraging those who are carrying on a hopeless resistance."

Typhoid Among British Troops.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—A question in the House of Commons yesterday elicited the statement that there had been 15,625 cases of typhoid fever among the British troops in South Africa, and that of this number, 3,642 proved fatal.

Another Plot to Kill Roberts?

PORT ELIZABETH, Cape Colony, Dec. 10.—A number of persons suspected of plotting to murder Lord Roberts during his recent visit here abandoned their scheme on learning that they were shadowed.

THE UGANDA CONTRACT.

Lord Cranborne Denies Favoritism Was Shown to American Firm.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—In the House of Commons yesterday, Sir Alfred Hickman, (Conservative,) Member for West Wolverhampton, brought up the subject of the contract for the Uganda Railroad bridges, insinuating that favoritism had been shown to the successful American firm.

Lord Cranborne, Parliamentary Secretary of the Foreign Office, repudiated the suggestion. He said tenders were invited in the United Kingdom on exactly the same conditions as they were invited from the United States, but the American tender was accepted because it was considerably the lowest. While the Government was anxious to employ British firms, it could only give contracts when consistent with public interests.

SIR ARTHUR SULLIVAN'S WILL.

Most of the Estate of £50,000 Goes to a Nephew—Small Bequests.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The late Sir Arthur Sullivan left an estate of about £50,000, nearly all of which goes to his nephew, H. Sullivan. He made small bequests to his two other nephews and to Mrs. Stephens, a niece, who resides at Los Angeles, Cal., and bequeathed £1,000 each to his housekeeper and valet.

Mr. Sullivan also left a number of mementos from his silver and china to personal friends, men and women, among them being Mrs. Beach Grant, mother of Lady Essex; Mrs. Ronalds, Mrs. D'Oyly Carte, and Mrs. Crutchley, and also left a number of his original scores to musical institutions and friends, Mrs. Ronalds getting the score of "The Lost Chord."

TO IMPROVE UNDERGROUND ROAD

Mr. Yerkes's London Agent Confers with Chairman of District Line.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—D. H. Lauderbach, having closed up all the principal contracts for the Yerkes underground railroad, had a conference this evening with J. S. Forbes, Chairman of the District Underground Railroad, and R. W. Perks, member of Parliament, counsel for Charles T. Yerkes, regarding electrifying the railroad.

It is understood that Mr. Lauderbach was offered the managership of the District Railroad under the proposed electrification, but the matter was not concluded. Howard Abel, President of the Chicago Northwestern Elevated Railroad, will probably represent Mr. Yerkes in London.

Mr. Lauderbach sails for New York tomorrow on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse.

£25,000 for Aberdeen Infirmary.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Lord Mount-Stephen (formerly President of the Canadian Pacific Railroad) has given £25,000 to the Provost of Aberdeen, for the purpose of clearing the Aberdeen Infirmary of debt.

Suffrage and Pensions in Australia.

MELBOURNE, Dec. 11.—The Legislative Assembly of Victoria to-day passed the Woman's Suffrage and Old Age Pension bills.

HOLLAND AND PORTUGAL.

Dutch Foreign Minister Narrates History of Trouble in Reply to Interpellation.

THE HAGUE, Dec. 11.—Replying in the Second Chamber to-day to the interpellation of Count von Bylandt, notice of which was given yesterday, on the subject of the tension between the Netherlands and Portugal, the Foreign Minister, Dr. W. H. de Beaufort, sketched the history of the misunderstanding, which, he declared, had been exaggerated.

He said the Dutch Minister at Lisbon, Baron von Heekeren, announced on Nov. 17 that Portugal desired to withdraw the exequatur of Mynheer Pott, as Counsel of the Netherlands at Lorenzo Marques, unless the Government of the Netherlands would obviate the necessity by dismissing or recalling Pott. As the Netherlands Government had no official information that Pott had permitted, as alleged, the importation of contraband of war, it could not accede to the demand for his recall without a fuller inquiry, and it therefore instructed the Minister at Lisbon to cable to Mynheer Pott asking him to clear up the matter.

Pott then applied for leave to come to Europe, which was granted, and the Netherlands proposed to Portugal that an investigation be made during the Consul's visit, and that three months be allowed for the rendering of a report on the subject. The Government of the Netherlands supposed that Portugal approved of this proposal, and was surprised to learn shortly afterward that Portugal insisted on withdrawing the exequatur of Mynheer Pott.

The Foreign Minister explained that he was not aware if fresh complaints against Pott were the cause of this, but a notification was sent to the Netherlands Minister that the withdrawal of the exequatur at that time would ill-accord with the very friendly relations between the Netherlands and Portugal. Immediately after the exequatur was withdrawn, however, the Dutch Minister was summoned to give information, and Pott was expected at The Hague within a month.

After Count van Bylandt had expressed the hope that the difficulty would be speedily settled the subject was dropped.

HOLLAND REFUSES AID.

Mr. Krueger Informed that Dutch Government Can Do Nothing Till Great Powers Take Initiative.

THE HAGUE, Dec. 11.—The Dutch Government to-day finally and definitely refused to take the initiative in appealing for arbitration between the Boers and Great Britain.

The decision of the Government was communicated in an interview between Mr. Krüger and Dr. Leyds and the Dutch Foreign Minister and the Minister of Finance. Mr. Krüger explained that the object of his journey was to disseminate the idea of arbitration, and the Dutch Minister replied that the rôle of the Netherlands must be passive. The initiative belonged to the great powers, they added. When they had reached a decision the Dutch Government might see what it could do.

A serenade of Mr. Krüger by scholars fixed for to-night has been prohibited by the police out of fear of disturbances.

The Transvaal Legation says it is authorized to contradict the report that Emperor Nicholas has telegraphed to Mr. Krüger an intimation that he will not receive him.

FIFTY-FIVE—MOSTLY WINTERS.

Mrs. Herman Told Her Age When Arraigned for a Birthday Celebration.

"Now, Mrs. Herman," said Magistrate Corneli, addressing a faded little woman prisoner who had been arraigned at the bar of the Essex Market Court yesterday morning, "Let's see what age you will own up to. It is so seldom nowadays that women will give their right age."

Mrs. Amelia Herman had been lying on the sidewalk intoxicated on Monday, and when arraigned in court she said that she had been celebrating her birthday. So that, when the Magistrate asked her age she replied readily enough:

"I have seen fifty-five—"

"Summers or Winters?" broke in the Magistrate.

"Mostly Winters, Sir," replied the prisoner.

"I believe you," said the Court, "and I'll discharge you."

"Thank you," said the prisoner. "May every step you take in life be among roses."

FUNDS FOR JEWISH HOSPITAL.

Meeting Held on East Side to Discuss Ways and Means for Completing Building.

Representatives of over one hundred Jewish benevolent societies, religious associations, and synagogues met last night in the small hall of the Beth Israel Hospital, at 206 East Broadway, at the invitation of the Directors of the hospital, in order to discuss ways and means to raise the funds needed to complete the new hospital building. While there were some men from the richer up-town districts, most of those present were from the poor east side tenements.

Raphael Hurwitz, one of the Directors, presided, and among those who were present and addressed the meeting were the Rev. Dr. Jachas, Major K. Mandel of the Temple Emanu-El, Grand Master Moskowitz of the Independent Order Ahavath Israel, Grand Master Solmsky of the Independent Order of Brith Abraham, Grand Master S. Dorf of the Order Brith Abraham, and others.

Mr. Mandel, who addressed the meeting in English, announced that the hospital had that day received a check for $5,000 from Jacob H. Schiff. Mr. Mandel called attention to the fact that there were over 400 Jewish places of worship on the east side where money was spent for the saving of souls, but that there was only one hospital, with twenty-eight beds, in that same neighborhood, where attempts were daily being made to save the lives of those who had families to support and children to bring up. In order to complete the new building in which many more could be accommodated $115,000 would have to be raised.

The Rev. Dr. Jachas, speaking in German, drew a vivid picture of some east side misery he had seen. Many a poor Hebrew, said he, would rather die than go to a hospital where he would be compelled to violate many of the precepts of his orthodox belief.

Many of the representatives of the various societies then pledged their assistance, and it was agreed to organize each benevolent or religious association into an auxiliary committee for the purpose of raising the necessary funds. The Chairman then closed the meeting with another eloquent appeal in Yiddish, in which he said that there had so far been collected $37,000, of which $2,000 was raised at a small meeting of cloak manufacturers last week. He also announced the following contributions: $250 from J. Salomon & Son, 237 Mercer Street; $100 from Walcoff, Goodman & Co., 632 Broadway, $50 from the Order Brith Abraham, and $25 from Amdur Brothers, 430 Broome Street. During the last year 501 patients were admitted, while 20,000 dispensary cases were treated.

HE DELAYED CAR TRAFFIC.

But the Obstinate Van Driver Learned a Lesson in Magistrate Hogan's Court.

At a little after 6 o'clock on Monday evening, when all the extra cars of the Third Avenue surface line were in requisition and every car crowded to the platform with passengers, a big furniture van wheeled into Third Avenue at Twenty-first Street and started up town on the north-bound tracks. Louis Strang, the driver of the van, allowed his horses to proceed at a walk. The motorman on the car behind became impatient and pounded his gong vigorously, but Strang turned a deaf ear to these things. Soon there was a long string of cars going at the pace set by Strang's horses, while from every car protruded the faces of angry passengers. At Thirtieth Street the driver, to show his disregard for public sentiment as confined to motormen, conductors, and passengers, stopped his horses on the tracks, calmly climbed down from his seat, and, entering a store, lighted his pipe. Then he came out and remounted his seat amid the objurgations and imprecations of motormen and conductors and the fervent expostulations of hundreds of maddened passengers.

"Geet ep," said he gently to his horses, and the animals went ahead at a slow walk. For seventeen blocks this sort of thing was kept up, while for forty blocks behind the furniture wagon was an almost continuous line of cars, each bearing a seething mass of violent humanity. The language used in referring to Strang fairly charged the atmosphere, but it all went to utter waste. A wrecking wagon was sent down the line to find out what sort of an accident had caused the delay.

COLUMBIA'S TEAM DEBTS

Athletic Finances at the Local University at Low Ebb.

FOOTBALL'S SMALL PROFIT

Faculty May Cause a Cessation of Activity in Most Branches of Sport—California Game.

The financial condition of athletics at Columbia was made public yesterday through the report of the Graduate Advisory Committee.

It appears from the report that every important branch of athletics is financially embarrassed, and no apparent solution of the difficulty is at hand. One of the regulations of the Faculty of Columbia is that no team against which there are outstanding debts shall be allowed to continue, and so unless speedy relief is found athletics at this institution will come to a standstill. Included in the report of the Graduate Advisory Committee is a detailed report from the manager of the football team, which shows $43,233.45 the receipts of the season. The athletic indebtedness of the university is $10,864. Of this amount $6,800 is what remains unpaid on the rent of Manhattan Field. $2,000 the insurance on the stands and other buildings at the field, and $2,064 the debts of various branches of sport other than football.

The most vital question, however, which confronts the university is the payment of the rent still due for Manhattan Field. The property was hired for one year by the Graduate Advisory Committee from the American National Exhibition Company, and the lease expired on Dec. 1. The rent of the field was $15,000, of which $10,000 was guaranteed by members of the Advisory Board who gave their personal notes for the amount. They were in turn secured by guarantees by certain of the undergraduates and alumni, who gave pledges for various sums in case the profits from the field were not enough to cover the rent of the field. These guarantees were equally apportioned. Among graduates and students, the insurance of the field, together with other expenses incident to its management, increased the original cost to about $18,000.

The Graduate Advisory Board was given charge of the field, and they arranged with the managers of the different teams which were to use it that 25 per cent. of the gross receipts of all games held there should be handed over as a contribution toward the rent of the field. Eight thousand one hundred and seventy-eight dollars was derived by this means.

A plan for alleviating the situation has already been hit upon by the Graduate Advisory Board somewhat as follows: The managers of the different teams have been organized into a committee. It shall be their duty to request those who guaranteed the rent of the field to pay the full amount for which they pledged themselves. In addition this committee will solicit subscriptions from the undergraduates, and resort to other means of collecting at least one-half of the required amount—$10,800. The alumni have pledged themselves to contribute the remaining half as soon as the undergraduate fund is completed.

President Low has given his permission to a proposed musical benefit, to be held in the gymnasium during the week which precedes Christmas, in which only Columbia men, undergraduates, and alumni will participate. The committee which has been appointed to carry out this plan is as follows: O. W. Erdal, '01, science, manager of the crew; S. Mineus, '01, law, manager of the ball team; E. S. Milke, '01, science, Captain of the baseball team; A. C. Stratford, '02, college, assistant manager of the lacrosse team, and W. B. Shomicker, '02, college, manager of the football team.

The following is Manager Shomicker's detailed report:

There is considerable dissatisfaction being expressed among the undergraduates of the report, particularly about items included under the heading of miscellaneous, such as, $190 for theatre tickets, $101.85 for cabs, &c.; $291.22 to take the team to see other games, and $135.30 for dinners.

The university was confident last Spring that with five big games the football season would prove a source of profit from which the other teams that are not self-supporting could draw support.

During the past two years, Columbia has spent in football alone nearly $100,000, and unless the old and unsatisfactory method of raising money by subscription is resorted to again, it seems likely that athletics at Columbia will cease, temporarily at least.

The stand which the Faculty Committee on Athletics will take is causing serious alarm among the student body.

The report of the athletic finances, which has been prepared by S. Aylmer Small, the general athletic Treasurer, will be presented to the committee for its consideration at its next meeting. The project of a football game with the University of California on the latter's grounds is being revived in the hope that the profits from such a game might relieve the situation. Definite action on this matter will be taken within a few days.

PENN'S ATHLETIC FINANCES.

Football Team Profits Amount to Over $21,000—Receipts and Expenditures.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 11.—The report of the Treasurer of the Athletic Association of the University of Pennsylvania, which was presented to-day at the annual meeting of the association, shows a deficit for the fiscal year ending Aug. 31, 1900, of $11,932.10. Inasmuch as the items of expenditure include the payment of a deficit of $12,000.41 bequeathed from the fiscal year of 1899, an actual favorable balance of $48.31 remains for all departments of athletics at the university during the year just reported. Football alone shows a balance of receipts over expenditures during 1899-1900. The receipts of the team from all sources aggregated $52,278.13, and the total expenditures amounted to $30,907.73. This left a balance of $21,370.40 to be devoted to the less peculiarly productive branches of athletics. The following tables give in brief the sources of the association's income and the disposition of the receipts:

FINE AMATEUR BILLIARDS.

Cutler Makes the High Average in A. A. U. Tournament During Game with Billiter.

Albert G. Cutler, the young Boston billiard player, gave indication of his true speed last night, when he met and easily defeated the Minneapolis champion, Frank Billiter, in the sixth game of the final round of the National Class B tournament now in progress at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club, under the auspices of the Amateur Athletic Union. Mr. Cutler ran out the required 300 points in thirty-one innings, making thereby an average of 9.68, the highest of this year's tourney. The wonderful precision and accuracy of his shots led George Slosson, the professional expert, who was an interested witness of the game, to remark enthusiastically:

"Ten years from now there will not be a player in the world, amateur or professional, who can beat that young man. He has every quality of a billiard champion except experience. A little more than ten years ago I saw Frank Ives play at Petoskey, Mich., and I made the same prophecy for him. Young Cutler is another Ives."

Mr. Cutler is only twenty-two years old. The veteran professional's prophecy accordingly does not delay the Bostonian's honors until late in life.

Referee Isaac A. Mannes called the players to the table at 8:30 o'clock. Mr. Cutler won the bank, and choosing the white ball began at once to show his mastery of the balk-line game. On his third shot in the opening inning he got the balls together, and by the most delicate nursing kept them alternately in and out of balk until thirty-seven carroms had been clicked off. Then he missed an easy cushion shot of about 18 inches. He played the shot so very slowly that his cue ball could be plainly seen to roll out of its course, something which could be due only to a defect in the table. Four innings later, however, he got the balls once more "under the hat," and ran up another long string, this time of 32 buttons, before he resigned the cue ball to his opponent. From this period on for several innings Mr. Billiter, in his customary open-table play, spread the balls so far apart that the young Bostonian could not get them together for nursing runs until his fourteenth time at the table. Then he scored a break of 15, followed in the seventeenth inning by one of 23, and two innings later by a run of 34. This brought his score up to 175, while that of his opponent at the same period of the game was 91.

From the fourteenth to the twenty-fourth inning, Mr. Cutler was at his best. In these eleven innings he scored 190 points, an average of more than 17 to the inning. The chief characteristic of his play was the adherence to real balk-line tactics, to the careful nurse and alternation of the balls in and out of balk. One feature of his game which many of the spectators were unable to appreciate because of the visual angle from arena seats was the marvelous accuracy of his long draw shots, with their effective return of the object balls to position. There were three of these in the twenty-second inning, all of them being almost the width of the table. A wonderful massé shot, which none of the spectators could fail to note, however, was made in his sixteenth inning. His cue ball was frozen between the two object balls, but he scored. Although the balls were driven to the ends of the table, he had them together again in five shots. After a run of 39 in the twenty-fourth inning, Mr. Cutler's play fell off, and he finished poorly. This was largely due to bad leaves.

Mr. Billiter eclipsed all previous performances of the tournament as a hard-shot player, but his open-table style was no match for the close game of his opponent. The scores:

Cutler—3 7 7 7 0 3 2 0 1 2 0 1 0 0 0 15 1 11 23 4 34 4 24 22 13 39 0 6 5 4 2 0 6. Total, 300; average, 9 21-31; high runs, 39, 37, 34, 32, 23, and 22.

Billiter—0 7 3 1 13 3 0 0 7 3 4 11 0 1 9 1 0 13 15 25 12 12 9 1 0 0 1 2 0 0. Total, 154; average, 5 4-30; high run, 25.

W. W. Kellogg of Chicago defeated William Paige of Boston by a score of 300 to 217 in the afternoon game. There was no play of particular merit in the game, but both men made brilliant rallies at times. Mr. Kellogg won out by an unfinished run of 6 points in the fifty-fourth inning, after an alternation of good, ragged, and indifferent play. The scores:

Kellogg—2 0 9 4 0 0 20 4 5 0 19 1 10 20 0 0 6 3 8 0 8 8 12 2 21 23 19 0 0 0 3 8 2 22 11 5 0 4 0 2 15 1 2 3 1 0 1 3 0 0 3 0. Total, 300; average, 5 36-54; high runs, 23, 22, 20, and 20.

Paige—0 0 8 0 7 1 4 1 2 6 1 0 19 6 1 0 4 0 0 6 1 1 12 1 8 1 21 2 1 0 0 0 0 0 1 4 2 4 3 13 3 0 5 1 1 4 0 8 0 16 0 17 0 0 0 2. Total, 217; average, 4 1-54; high runs, 24 and 21.

Charles G. Schmitt will play William Paige this afternoon, and John A. Hendrick will meet Frank Billiter to-night.

SHOOTING AT INTER-STATE PARK.

High Scores Made at the Shoot of Brooklyn Gun Club.

So many perfect scores were made at the shoot of the Brooklyn Gun Club at the Interstate Park traps yesterday afternoon that in a majority of the sweepstakes events the winners received little in addition to their entrance money. In the five-bird match all but three of the twelve competitors made perfect scores, and the percentage of winners was almost as large in the seven and the ten bird shoots.

Among the well-known gunners who contributed to these results were R. A. Welch of the Carteret Gun Club, who made perfect strings at five, seven, and ten birds from 30 yards; C. Feigenspan of the East Side Gun Club of Newark, N. J., who made perfect scores in all four matches; Miss Annie Oakley, who shot three perfect strings from 27 yards, and G. W. Hagedorn of the Crescent Athletic Club. The scores follow:

Five Live Birds, $3 Entrance, Handicap Rises—R. A. Welch, (30 yards,) 5; C. Feigenspan, (29 yards,) 5; Capt. Yale's New Football Captain.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 11.—Charles Gould, 1902, end rush on the Yale football team, was to-night elected Captain for the season of 1901 by the fifteen players who participated in the championship games this year.

Perry Hale, full back of the eleven, was also a candidate, but Gould's election was practically unanimous.

Gould has played at end on the Yale 'Varsity for the past two seasons, and came to college from the Albany Academy, at Albany, N. Y., his home. He is twenty years of age, 5 feet 9½ inches in height, and weighs 165 pounds.

Cleverdon's Resignation Not Accepted.

Yesterday afternoon a special meeting of the football squad at New York University was held in the gymnasium for the purpose of considering the resignation of F. W. Cleverdon, the newly elected Captain. Considerable discussion arose in regard to the matter and it was left unsettled. The following were declared eligible to wear the initials "N. Y. U.": Rorke, 1901; Brennan, 1901; Young, 1901; Bergman, 1901; Hadley, 1901; Cornell, 1901; Fernald, 1901; De La Mater, 1901; Blunt, 1902; Cleverdon, 1902; Moore, 1903; Griffen, 1903; Connelly, 1903; Carsten, 1904; Tuthill, 1904, and Backora, 1904.

BASEBALL MANAGERS MEET

Nothing Definite or Official Accomplished Yesterday.

PLAYERS' LEAGUE IGNORED

"Ban" Johnson and His New League Fail to Do Anything More than Prophesy.

"Ban" Johnson, the new American Baseball League and the Protective Association of Professional Baseball Players hung over the annual meeting of the National League baseball club managers in the Fifth Avenue Hotel yesterday like so many threatening cyclones. A meeting of the Board of Directors of the League was held in the forenoon, but the business considered was regarded as a small matter, in connection with the threats of Johnson and his American League, and the struggle in prospect with the players.

Among the lesser things considered, however, was the case of the charges against Wilbert Robinson of the St. Louis club for an assault on Umpire Gaffney. Argument that the St. Louis club be fined $500, Robinson $200, and the Captain of the club $100 for the offense was presented, but the meeting overruled this advice and finally announced that the case against Robinson was dismissed.

One case of public importance was talked of in the lobby in the allegations against the Philadelphia Club that a so-called "buzzer" or telegraphic scheme had been used to aid the Philadelphia Club in winning games on the home grounds. The evidence presented was in accordance with the facts concerning the tearing up of telegraph wires on the Philadelphia grounds by a rival ball club last August, this upheaval showing a system of wires over the diamond, which might or might not have aided the local club.

The charges were that the wires connected too near the first baseman, where the home club coach was able to get news from a watcher as to what plays the batter might use. According to allegations, this watcher, having learned the systems of signals of visiting clubs, could repeat the signs, given by the catcher to the pitcher, by watching from a window of the clubhouse, and so have a certain control of the local games.

That a system of wires was unearthed was admitted by Col. John I. Rogers of the Philadelphia Club, but he refused to admit that the wires were for the use and benefit of the Philadelphia club. He said of the discovery of the wires, that they had been placed by a local exhibition company, who had used the place for exhibition purposes, and by means of the wires, had turned the baseball grounds into a "perfect" fairyland."

Col. Rogers's argument was accepted, inasmuch as no action was taken concerning what some partisans of baseball described as a "fraud." Ebbetts of the Brooklyn Club proposed that the Philadelphia Club be fined for its misconduct, but the case never got further than corridor gossip, and no action was taken. The meeting was finished early in the afternoon, when a call for a League meeting was issued. This, however, was postponed until late in the evening.

In the meantime "Ban" Johnson, the new American League, and the Players' Association continued to disturb the managers of the National League clubs. These had ceased to regard Johnson's league as a myth, and had begun to worry about the future of the National League clubs, for these will last but a short time further under the charter provisions of the National League.

It is supposed that Ban Johnson is looking ahead to the disruption of the National League for a chance for his new organization to get into the game in the old league cities, but Johnson as yet has made no hint of such a purpose.

The next matter of importance of the day was the application of the Players' Committee, consisting of Charles Zimmer, President Hugh Jennings, Secretary, and Harry Taylor, attorney for the committee and formerly first baseman of the Buffalo team, and Clark Griffiths of the Chicago team.

This committee was appointed by the players as a representative body, but the League refused to meet or recognize the committee. After some delay it was suggested that the League send a committee to confer with the new body to-day, and, though the members of the League committee had not agreed to the meeting last night, it is probable that a conference will be held.

If this meeting is held the players desire that it shall be open to the press, but to this the League has not yet agreed, and will not give a decision until to-morrow. A rumor that the players had gone to Philadelphia to consult with Johnson caused the National League managers to have something closely resembling a fit early in the forenoon, and proved to be a myth. But if a meeting between the players and League managers is held to-day, the players will lay special stress on their objection to the rules which permit the transfer and holding of players by clubs against the wishes of the men in question.

The only baseball trade mentioned in the course of the day was a refusal to give "Jack" Doyle of the New York Club for James Williams of Pittsburg.

A meeting of the League representatives was held in the evening, but the managers refused to state what had occurred. The real business of the gathering will take place to-day. Some of the baseball promoters, players, and proprietors present were: Joe Kelley, W. Rassler, W. Dohlen, Thomas Daly, Hugh Jennings, Alex. Smith, and Thomas Simpson, all of Brooklyn.

Charles F. Zimmer of Pittsburg, George Dams of New York, Frank Donohue of Philadelphia, Thomas Loftus, and Clark Griffin of Chicago, Frank Selee and John Barry of Boston, George Tebeau of Denver, William Murray of Providence, Charles Dooley of Montreal, George Stalling of Detroit, A. B. Beal of Sioux City, Frank McFarland of Rochester, James Hanovan of Toronto, Canada; Howard Earl of Utica, Arthur Irwin of Boston, and Harry Taylor, attorney for the Players' Association.

Automobile Track for Newport.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Dec. 11.—It appears to be settled that before the Summer season arrives an automobile track will have been built here for the use of many racing and other machines which will be headquartered in Newport during the Summer. Col. John Jacob Astor has gone in for racing and will have three machines here next Summer. When the season opens there will be several attempts made to break the automobile records between Newport and New York.

Opening of Brooklyn's Hockey Season.

The champion hockey team of the Crescent Athletic Club will begin practice for the season to-morrow night, when the Clermont Avenue Rink will open for the season. From present indications the same men will play on the team this season. The only probable change will be among the backs, Dr. Hurty having announced his retirement. Should the doctor stick to his decision, the club has a good man for his place in Lifton, who has left the Brooklyn Skating Club seven and cast his lot with the Crescent Athletic Club players.

MARKET MOVEMENT.

Decided strength showed in the stock market yesterday, quotations advancing generally throughout the list. The buying was on a more extensive scale than in recent days, more than 800,000 shares being traded in, fairly well distributed. Morgan and Vanderbilt purchases continued in evidence, while leading Western interests who recently have been selling stocks turned buyers and were quoted as looking for sustained market improvement. These are the same interests who immediately following election were heavy buyers of stocks, only to sell out later in anticipation of a reaction. Their present change of front is therefore regarded as of significance.

While the general list was strong, the railroad stocks were easily the leaders, with Erie, Reading, Southern Pacific, and the Grangers showing especial strength. Accountable for the strength of the Eries is the reported Pennsylvania Coal Company deal, while the Morgan and Vanderbilt plan to make Reading a through road to the West is regarded as being responsible for the strength of these issues. In relation to Southern Pacific there are many stories, none of which can at present be confirmed. One, from London—whose operators were heavy buyers of the stock yesterday, sending over a quotation 1½ points higher than the close on Monday here—is that there is to be an adjustment and division of the capital stock of the company, the present stock to be exchanged for some certain allotment of common and preferred, the preferred to be put on a 4 per cent. dividend basis shortly. This, however, is officially denied here. That something important in the affairs of the company is pending is considered certain.

The steel shares held well during the day, and there were evidences that insiders were accumulating stock.

STEEL STOCKS, Steel and Wire excepted, were strong and well bought. At present the Street is concerned in the probable developments at the Federal Steel meeting on Tuesday next. What it is understood will take place is the declaration of the regular quarterly dividend on the preferred stock. No action will be taken on the common stock dividend until after the first of the year, as none can legally be taken. At that time, however, it is assured that a lump dividend of 5 per cent. will be declared for the present year, and later—the company's charter amended—that regular quarterly dividends will be begun for the ensuing year. The earnings of the company are said to show fully 20 per cent. earned on the common stock.

Steel and Wire was yesterday bought by John W. Gates and his friends, but was heavy notwithstanding. The public seems disposed not to venture in it.

Tennessee Coal's strength was on the continued assurance that there was no justification for the recently published reports that the dividend on the security would be reduced. It is asserted that a line of stock which has been hanging over the market for some time has been liquidated.

ERIE SHARES were strong throughout the day and were bought by the same interests who have been purchasers for some time. One broker who yesterday took some 25,000 shares of the securities is credited with having accumulated fully 150,000 shares on the present movement.

LOCAL RAILWAY stocks held well, but were comparatively inactive. There was no news on any of them except Brooklyn Rapid Transit, the final pamphlet report of whose earnings for the fiscal year ended June 30 last was made public, the figures appearing elsewhere. The regular quarterly dividend was declared on Manhattan during the day.

The buying of the Atchisons was on the favorable reports received at the company's offices here in respect to the strike. All advices were that it was likely to be short lived.

The advance in Chicago Terminal was accompanied by the old story that the property had changed hands. Western interests were among the purchasers.

Boston was again a heavy buyer of Burlington, taking probably 4,000 of the 5,000 shares traded in. The buying seems to be based on the report that the bond refunding plan of the company is soon to be carried through.

The buying of the Wheeling and Lake Erie issues was by Cleveland interests and local banking houses identified with the property. The earnings of the system reported show an increase of $13,250 for the first week of December, or at the rate of nearly $2,000 a day. Action on the first preferred stock dividend is soon to be taken.

While call money rates were no easier, they were nevertheless no lighter. The banks showed more willingness to loan on industrial security than for some days past, and were taking loans with 40 per cent. industrial, as compared with 35 per cent. on the day previous. There was little calling of loans during the day.

The Executive Committee of the Western Union Telegraph Company met yesterday and recommended the declaration of the regular quarterly dividend of 1¼ per cent. To-day the Directors will meet and ratify the action of the committee. According to Secretary Brewer the revised statement of earnings for the last quarter shows a gain of $105,000 over the estimated statement of earnings.

The strength of Baltimore and Ohio was on buying induced by the published earnings of the company for the month of November, an increase of $104,230 in net being reported.

It is officially stated that the meeting of the American Smelting and Refining Company to discuss the proposed consolidation with the Guggenheim interests will be held Dec. 18. No action, however, will be taken on the common stock dividend at that meeting.

Vanderbilt brokers were yesterday buyers of the Nickel Plate issues, Lake Erie and Western, Three C's, and Canada Southern.

The Governing Committee of the Stock Exchange will to-day act on the petition presented by the members of the Exchange praying that the Exchange be closed on Monday, Dec. 24, the day preceding Christmas.

The printing of odd lots on the tape was yesterday resumed by order of the Stock Exchange committee. It will be recalled that owing to the great rush of business following the election publication of the odd-lots quotations was ordered temporarily to cease.

In connection with the affairs of Pacific Mail, an officer of the Panama Steamship Company declared yesterday that there was nothing new in respect to the question of a renewal of the contract between the companies relating to the Panama trade.

It was announced in Wall Street yesterday that Brown Brothers & Co. and Vermilye & Co., representing large holders of Boston United Gas first series 5 per cent. bonds, have recently caused an examination to be made of the properties covered by the bonds, and express themselves as satisfied with the results of the examination. They further state that they are watching the interests of the bondholders and will act in due course for their protection, if in their judgment such action is required.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC'S RISE.

One of the features of the market yesterday was Southern Pacific, which rose nearly two points on buying for London and home account. London, in fact, sent over a quotation 1½ points above the close of Monday's figure here, and it was said that the buying there was on advance information of some favorable developments in the affairs of the company, just as when on the appointment of Mr. Hays as President of the system, London was the first to receive the news.

One of the leading houses in the Street had a report from its foreign correspondents that some adjustment or division of the capital stock of the company has been arranged for, the present stock—all common—to be exchanged for part common and part preferred. The plan, this report said, provided for 4 per cent. dividend on the preferred stock.

When Chairman Tweed was told of the report he declared that there was nothing in it.

READING'S BIG GAINS.

Reading securities were the strongest active railroad stocks on the list yesterday, the common and preferred shares alike showing notable advances on dealings easily the heaviest of any stocks in the market. In the first preferred, 104,000 shares were traded in at a net advance of 2⅜; in the second preferred the dealings totaled 22,300 at a net advance of 2½, while in the common 31,700 shares changed hands at a net gain of 1⅝. The buying was in the Street regarded as of the best, much of it being credited to J. P. Morgan and W. K. Vanderbilt.

BOND PURCHASE RUMOR.

A report on Wall Street yesterday afternoon was to the effect that a Government purchase of $10,000,000 of bonds was pending. No confirmation of the report could be had, and at the Sub-Treasury it was said that nothing had been heard of the matter there.

LONDON'S OPERATIONS.

London was a fairly large purchaser of stocks in this market yesterday, probably taking 50,000 shares, principally of Southern Pacific, the Atchisons, the Erie, and St. Paul. Yesterday was the first day for the new London account. The carrying rates for Americans were from 4½ to 5 per cent.

WALL STREET TOPICS.

Declaration of the regular quarterly dividend recommended by Western Union's Executive Committee.

November exports from Galveston were valued at $19,090,451, nearly $2,000,000 above the previous high month of record.

Increase by the State Bank in its dividend for the six months ending December, 1900, from 5 to 8 per cent.

Total iron ore shipments from Minnesota this year estimated at 9,500,000 tons, an increase of 1,000,000 tons over 1899.

Oversubscription for the Westchester Lighting Company bonds offered by a local banking house.

Shipments of 296,000 ounces of silver to Europe by to-day's steamers.

Annual meeting of the New Central Coal Company and re-election of the retiring Board of Directors.

Increase of $2,563,361 in exports of general merchandise from the Port of New York for the week, as compared with the previous week, but decrease of $825,621 as compared with the corresponding week last year.

Absorbed by the Standard Oil Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 11.—A dispatch from Los Angeles says the Standard Oil Company has acquired all of the interests of the Pacific Coast Oil Company. The purchase price is said to be in the neighborhood of $1,000,000. The Pacific Coast Oil Company has been doing business in California for a quarter of a century. Its interests include valuable oil properties in various sections. It owns a steamer, which is used in transporting oil from the southern coast to its refinery at Alameda, which has a monthly capacity of 25,000 barrels. The company's entire holdings are embraced in the transfer.

HARWAY AVE. BRIDGE USELESS.

Only Connecting Link Between Bath Beach and Coney Island.

Commissioner of Bridges Shea said yesterday that the Harway Avenue Bridge, which is the only connecting link between Bath Beach and Coney Island, is useless, and may have to be condemned. Commissioner Shea says a large sum of money will have to be spent in tinkering on the bridge, as it is out of balance, or it will have to be torn down and another built. The cost of the bridge was about $60,000.

The bridge connects the park highways of Brooklyn, so that bicyclers and drivers can go down the Shore Road, through Fort Hamilton, Bath Beach, to Coney Island and return by way of the Boulevard. This trip cannot be taken unless the Harway Avenue Bridge is crossed.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Dullness continued to prevail in the outside market yesterday, and the day's transactions were even smaller than those of Monday. Prices were also irregular, though in many parts of the list quotations were well maintained in sympathy with the strength of the Stock Exchange market. Practically nothing of any importance in the way of news likely to affect outside stocks came to hand during the day, and, left much to itself, the curb presented little of interest. A few issues were particularly prominent by reason of the strength they displayed. Buying has considerably diminished during the past ten days, but thus far there seems no general disposition to dispose of purchases made when the market showed so much activity two or three weeks ago.

UNITED RAILWAYS OF ST. LOUIS preferred showed much strength, and was active beyond what is usual in this stock. It sold up to 66½, and closed at 66¼ bid, a net gain of 1½ points. Since the recovery in the stock, which began at 60, has been in progress, there have been practically no reactions, and the stock has shown continued and notable strength. This is true not alone of the preferred stock, but of the bonds and also of St. Louis Transit, which has advanced with the other issues. Sales of the latter issue were made to the extent of about 500 shares at 19½, and it closed with a new gain of three-quarters of a point, at 19¼ bid. Yesterday's largest trading was in the 4 per cent. bonds, which were traded in for nearly $200,000. All these transactions were made between 84 and 85.

WOOLEN GOODS, as well as a number of other issues which recently had been the most active, were traded in to a very small extent, while the bulk of the day's business was supplied by securities which in the recent past were relatively inactive. Woolen Goods preferred, which advanced sharply on Monday to 78, was again offered down to 77, and at the close showed a considerable loss.

RUBBER GOODS common was one of the strongest of the industrials yesterday, and was more active than most of the others. It sold up to 30½ on transactions in about 800 shares and showed a net gain of three-eighths of a point.

DISTILLING OF AMERICA was rather weak, and though neither issue was very active, both ended the day with net losses. The common stock sold as low as 6, and the best bid at the close was 5¾. The preferred stock sold down to 24¾ and closed there with a net loss of three-eighths of a point.

GENERAL CARRIAGE supplied its usual amount of trading, and continued the downward course which it has followed for several days past. It closed at 4¼ bid, a net loss of a quarter of a point.

BRITISH COLUMBIA COPPER, as well as the other copper stocks, was not traded in to any large extent. It sold from 19½ up to 19¾, and showed a net gain at the close of the day of one-eighth of a point.

UNION COPPER sold to the extent of about 800 shares at 4½ and 4¾, and closed unchanged at 4½ bid.

TENNESSEE COPPER was dull, but in better demand than on Monday, and showed a net gain of 1 point.

CRAMPS' SHIPYARD was again strong, but dealings in the stock were smaller than on the previous day. It sold up to 78, and closed with a net gain of 1 point, at 77 bid.

Closing quotations yesterday, compared with those of the previous day, were as follows:

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

In the following list "mtg" stands for mortgage and "R S" for revenue stamps. The war revenue law provides that stamps shall be placed on all conveyances at the rate of 50 cents for each $500 of consideration. This "consideration" has been held to mean only the equity above the mortgage, except in the rare cases where the purchaser assumes payment of the mortgage. The amount of the mortgage plus 1,000 times the value of the revenue stamps on the conveyances should therefore show the true consideration:

CITY REFORM MOVEMENT

Labor Representative May Join Committee of Fifteen.

Persons Mentioned as Likely to Fill Vacancies—Single Tax Party's Attitude.

What the Committee of Fifteen, appointed by Charles Stewart Smith, may do in regard to filling the vacancies created by the withdrawal of Messrs. Tappen, Iselin, Carter, De Forest, and White, and affirming the character of the committee as political or non-political, was not established yesterday. It was understood that there would be a meeting of the Sub-Committee of Two to-morrow, and that the call for the next meeting of the whole committee would be issued by Jacob H. Schiff. W. H. Baldwin went to Philadelphia yesterday after saying that he had no information for the public in regard to the committee.

Charles Stewart Smith started a rumor that Bourke Cockran would be elected to fill one of the vacancies in the committee by chatting with him at Pine and Nassau Streets. Mr. Smith would not talk of the conversation. Mr. Cockran, when asked if he had been offered a place on the committee, said: "I do not know that I would accept if the place were offered me. It is too early to discuss municipal politics at this time."

John E. Parsons, John P. Faure, and James B. Reynolds were spoken of as likely to go on the committee, and Mr. Faure and John Hansen Rhoades had a conference. Mr. Faure afterward indicated what his opinion was of the stand the committee should take as to politics by saying that it should do what the Committee of Seventy did in 1894, to go into the fight for decent government and to keep anti-Tammany sentiment aroused.

It was regarded as probable that a representative of organized labor would be added to the committee. Bishop Potter classed as a most hopeful note of the situation the disposition of the labor organizations to generally co-operate with the reform movement.

The heads of the Single Tax Party are not indifferent to either the initial steps that have been taken in the Mayoralty campaign or the factor that the movement against vice may be in local politics. Henry George, Jr., is regarded as the leader of the Taxers. He, Samuel Seabury, C. F. Adams, J. B. Van Vleck, J. V. Kohler, Bryan Holt, and C. O'C. Hennessy met yesterday and arranged for a meeting, at which the organization will be completed and a declaration of principles made. The George Democrats, according to Mr. Seabury, aim to organize a young democracy, which could sway Tammany or swing into line for any organization that favored its principles. They may interest themselves in the vice crusade.

HOW TO SUPPRESS VICE.

Bolton Hall Says the Methods of the Present Crusade Are Wrong.

At the regular weekly meeting of the Metaphysical Alliance, held at 59 West Forty-fifth Street, last night, Bolton Hall talked on "Mental Science and the Vice Crusade." He said: "Since the days of Moses we have been indulging in vice crusading. He did it in a thorough-going way, and the plain refusal of Jesus to take part in one does not even now deter the ministers of that same Jesus to throw themselves heart and soul into a crusade to-day. The history of the past shows that the more we attack vice the more it increases. Two hundred years ago in England sheep stealing was a capital offense. It was one of the commonest offenses at that time, and, strange to say, it is now the rarest.

"The way to resist temptation is to have the temptation. We have in this city a Society for the Suppression of Vice, and its sole result is that we have more suppressed vice than before. The whole method is wrong. Do you think for a moment that if a man asked me to steer him past the doors of a gin mill every morning on his way to business that I would do it and deprive him of his morning nip? I'd say to him, 'Do you want to drink?' If he should say 'Yes,' then I'd say, 'Go and get drunk and rub your nose in the gutter and wallow in the mire until you find out that the wages of sin is death.' The milkman cannot tile his floor with silver like 'Silver Dollar' Smith. There is no profit in milk that would justify him in making any such expenditure.

"No man was ever made good by force, and you can't take him by the scruff of the head and lift him up to heaven. He goes there only by first educating him as to the way and making his path straight. What is most needed is the uplifting of the ideal. Look at the girls in the dry goods shops working for a pittance of $6 a week. Out of this they have to pay carfare, and in order to keep up appearances they wear gloves. In the dull season they have two weeks off without pay. How are these girls to live on that wage?

"Then there is corruption in municipal matters, high taxes, dirty streets, bad water, and the vileness of our police. We, too, are too much in the habit of looking down on others as though we were deputy Gods."

The speaker in closing argued that the best way to repress vice is by a clear exposition of the precepts of the Church and the laws of God and of love to one another.

RAID ON A GAMBLING ROOM.

Chips, Tables, and Money Seized in Parker's Place, 219 Greenwich St.

Detective Mooney of the Church Street Station raided yesterday an alleged gambling house conducted by Charles Parker at 219 Greenwich Street. A complete faro and poker layout was seized, but there were no players in the room.

Among the goods seized were 1,196 poker chips, four decks of cards, three tables, with fittings, one for faro, and the others for poker, and $16 in money, which was found on one of the tables.

CIVIC FEDERATION PLANS.

Bishop Potter May Speak at the Twentieth-Century Dinner.

Headquarters were established yesterday by the Civic Federation, organized to aid in driving vice from the tenements and to bring about other reforms, in Room 70, Bible House. Chairman W. D. P. Bliss will appoint a Secretary to-day. Bishop Potter, it was reported, may speak at the twentieth-century dinner of the federation, and also favors labor members co-operating with the Committee of Fifteen.

Henry White, Chairman of the committee, said yesterday: "We were told by Bishop Potter that he will speak at the dinner if his engagements admit of it. He spoke very strongly, not only in favor of our people co operating with the citizens' committee, but also of having one or more labor men represented on it. He recognized that the working people can aid very materially in any honest effort in bringing about other reforms."

Among those who have consented to act on the Civic Federation Committee of One Hundred are the Rev. W. S. Rainsford and Senator John Ford. Edwin Markham has promised to write a new poem and read it at the twentieth-century dinner, which will take place in the Grand Central Palace Dec. 31.

After Bad Characters from New York.

The December term of the Hudson County courts at Jersey City began yesterday. The charge of Justice Gilbert Collins was brief. He called the attention of the Grand Jury to the report that the reform movement in New York was driving many questionable characters to Jersey City. He directed the jurors to inquire into the matter, and told them that if they found the report to be true it would be their duty to see that none of these persons found lodgment any where in Hudson County.

Red Cross Holiday Sale.

A holiday sale in aid of the Red Cross Emergency Fund was opened yesterday at 26 Carmine Street, near Bleecker Street. This sale was originally planned as a rummage sale, but, owing to the quality and variety of articles contributed, the affair has become a Christmas bazaar. William Willard Howard, general manager of the Red Cross Emergency Fund, said yesterday: "Our store is practically a small department store, in which anything may be found, from a tin whistle to ball gowns, opera cloaks, and piles of excellent clothing. Persons desiring to send articles of any kind to the sale should write to the Red Cross Emergency Fund, 156 Fifth Avenue."

Fair to Aid the Santa Clara Homes.

A fair will be held in the afternoon and evening of Saturday at 178 West Seventy-fifth Street by the Rayson League in aid of the Santa Clara Homes for Working Girls in the Adirondacks. This league is composed of the pupils of the Rayson School, and has been in existence for three years.

CONTRACT BY LETTERS.

Question Raised in a Case Concerning a Literary Publication.

An action has been commenced in the Supreme Court to determine if letters exchanged between parties constitute a contract. Paul R. Reynolds, a broker in manuscripts, is the plaintiff, and L. C. Page & Co., publishers, of Boston, are the defendants. The suit is to recover damages against the publishers for an alleged breach of a contract to purchase the American book rights to W. Clark Russell's story "The Ship's Aventure."

Mr. Reynolds alleges that a number of letters were exchanged between himself and the publishers as to the right to publish the book. In April last he wrote that the McClure syndicate had already taken the serial rights. Page & Co. replied that they would give him $675 for the right to publish the story in book form. He accepted these terms and notified the publishers by letter.

He says that on June 26 he received a blank contract from Page & Co. This blank included provisions for the serial and dramatic rights as well. Mr. Reynolds kept the contract for a month, and then sent a new form of contract to the publishers, reserving to himself the serial and dramatic rights to the story. Page & Co. refused to sign this contract, as they understand that "book rights" included all rights to the publication of the story. Thereupon Mr. Reynolds, through his counsel, Kellogg & Beckwith, began the action.

SAY AGENT PAWNED JEWELS.

Charles E. Mather on Trial Charged with Grand Larceny.

Ropes of pearl, necklaces, and pendants of diamonds and precious stones of the value of many thousands of dollars, figured prominently in the trial of Charles E. Mather for grand larceny, in General Sessions, yesterday. Mather was charged by Alfred H. Smith & Co., jewelers, of 182 Broadway, with obtaining from them on memorandum, representing that he had a prospective purchaser, a rope of pearls containing 238 stones, valued at $21,000, which he pawned for $4,338.

Mather was formerly a jeweler in John Street, and, according to the testimony of several witnesses, was in the habit of obtaining jewelry on memorandum, pawning the articles, and after obtaining more redeeming the jewels first pledged with the proceeds of the additional pledges. In September he is said to have induced Fleischer & Co. of 68 Nassau Street to trust to him a pendant of diamonds with a large pearl in the centre, valued at $7,000, for the purpose of disposing of the jewel on commission. Mr. Fleischer became uneasy after the lapse of some time when the pendant was not returned. To his inquiries, Mather stated that the pin was in the possession of Howard Gould's secretary, Mr. Califf, and that Mr. Gould contemplated purchasing it. Pressed by Fleischer, who threatened to make trouble if the article was not returned, Mather, who, it is alleged, had pawned the pendant with a Sixth Avenue pawnbroker for $4,000, secured from F. W. Lewis & Co. on Oct. 4 a pearl necklace valued at $3,600, which he pawned for $1,500, and on the next day the rope of pearls from Smith & Co., pawning it for $4,338. With the money thus secured he redeemed the pendant and returned it to Fleischer. Then Mather went to Washington, D. C., according to his own statement, then to Chicago, and last to Seattle, Washington, where he was captured by Detective Nugent.

Mather said on the stand that he intended returning the jewels, and would have done so had not a friend owing him money failed to pay it.

LIEUT. BRAINARD ILL.

Was Unable to Leave for the Philippines on the Wompatuck.

Instead of starting for Manila on the Government tug Wompatuck, which sailed from the Brooklyn Navy Yard on Monday, Lieut. F. R. Brainard, who had been assigned to the tug, remained in the Naval Hospital. Yesterday he left for his home in Illinois, having been granted a three-months' leave of absence. Lieut. Brainard had been in the hospital since Friday, on which day a board of survey examined him for incipient consumption. At the hospital yesterday it was said that his condition was not serious.

The Wompatuck is now on her way to Norfolk, to join the gunboats Annapolis and Vicksburg, the converted yacht Frolic, and the ocean tug Piscataqua, which are going to the Philippines for patrol duty.

It's like the story of the horseshoe nail. The "slight cold" lays the foundation for the serious one. Cure it with JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT.—Adv.

DE WET AGAIN GETS AWAY

Evades Knox's Force and Moves in Direction of Reddersburg.

But a British Column Is There Ready to Co-operate with the Pursuing Troops.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—Lord Kitchener cables to the War Office from Pretoria, under date of Dec. 12, that Gen. Knox reports from Helvetia that he is engaged in a running fight with Gen. De Wet, and that the enemy is moving toward Reddersburg, where there is a column ready to co-operate with the other British forces.

Gen. Kitchener's message indicates that De Wet has again evaded Knox. After the latter foiled the Boer General at Coomassie Drift, the Boers seem to have doubled back, crossed the Caledon River elsewhere, and turned thence northwest, in the direction of Reddersburg, the memorable scene of the British disaster in April, when the same commander captured the Irish Rifles.

Gen. Kitchener, in another dispatch, reports that the Boers attacked the post near Barberton. The British casualties were three killed, five wounded, and thirteen taken prisoners. The captured men have since been released.

The Boers raided the Riverton Road Station on Dec. 11. They are being followed up.

ROBERTS'S STRINGENT ORDER.

He Directed Caution in Burning Farms, but that All Cattle and Food Must Be Removed or Destroyed.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—Forty-one proclamations of Lord Roberts have been published. They have been mostly summarized previously in the newspapers. The last one, dated Nov. 18, says:

"As there appears to be some misunderstanding as regards the burning of farms, the Commander in Chief wishes the following to be the lines upon which General officers commanding are to act:

"No farm is to be burned except for an act of treachery or when our troops are fired on from the premises or as punishment for the breaking of the telegraph or railway or when used as base of operations for raids, and then only with the direct consent of the General officer commanding. The mere fact that a Burgher is absent on commando is on no account to be used as a reason for burning his house.

"All cattle, wagons, and foodstuffs are to be removed from all farms. If that is impossible, they are to be destroyed, whether the owner is present or not."

THE KAISER AND KRUEGER.

Non-Reception of the Latter Not Owing to Any Request from the British Government or Throne.

BERLIN, Dec. 12.—In the Reichstag today the Imperial Chancellor, Count von Bülow, referring to the complaints which have arisen on account of Emperor William's failure to receive Mr. Krüger, again went lengthily into the reasons for the non-reception of the Boer statesman, covering new ground in a statement which he made as to the relations between Germany and Great Britain. He said the announcement that Mr. Krüger was coming was made twenty-four, or at the most, forty-eight hours before he left Paris. Up to that moment it had been assumed that Mr. Krüger would go from Paris to Holland." The Chancellor added:

"We apprised him courteously and considerately, through the Paris Embassy and Dr. Leyds, that the Emperor regretted he was not in a position to receive him. Notwithstanding this, Mr. Krüger started. He was told again at Cologne, in the most considerate terms, that the Emperor was unable to see him."

The Chancellor repudiated the suggestion that the Government's action was due to any wish or proposal from the British Court or Government to the Emperor or to himself, the Chancellor. For the Emperor only German national considerations were authoritative. If family relations or dynastic considerations influenced the foreign policy he (von Bülow) would not remain Minister another day.

Continuing, the Chancellor said the Anglo-German agreement of 1898 did not contain a provision relating to war between Great Britain and the South African Republics, and the Yang-tse and Samoan agreements had no secret clauses. When the Emperor in 1896 sent the telegram to Mr. Krüger there was no question of war between Great Britain and the Boer States. It was a matter of a filibustering expedition. The Emperor gave a correct expression of his righteous feeling regarding international law. The Emperor did not intend to determine German policy forever by that telegram. The Chancellor added:

"I commit no slip-of-the-tongue indiscretion in saying that the reception of that telegram outside of Germany left no doubt that in the event of a conflict with England in Africa Germany would have to rely solely on her own strength."

Prior to Count von Bülow's speech Dr. Hasse, the Pan-German leader, sharply criticised the failure of the Government to receive Mr. Krüger. While admitting that Germany could not adopt any other position than that of the strictest neutrality, he thought the Government should avoid the appearance of breaking neutrality in favor of Great Britain. He referred to the services done to Great Britain by a German ship in South African waters, and complained further that the manner of the refusal to see Mr. Krüger had wounded German sentiment. He added that the British thought they could give Germany different treatment from that extended to other nations, claiming that British officers had treated Germans scandalously in South Africa, saying of them "They are only Germans," whereas they treated Frenchmen and even Greeks well. He sarcastically contrasted the non-reception of Mr. Krüger with the reception extended to Cecil Rhodes

Baron von Richthofen, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, referring to the expulsion of Germans from the Transvaal and the Orange Free State territories, said:

"It has appeared to me that these expulsions in many cases have been unjustifiable, both as to cause and manner, and contrary to the principles of international law; and an expression of this view has been made in London.

"On the other hand, the Germans who have been fighting side by side with the Boers have not met with a happy lot. They have been dismissed without pay and told 'We did not invite you.'"

The Agrarian and Conservative organs strongly dissent from Count von Bülow's speech on Monday. The Tages Zeitung, referring to the allusions to "popular passion in England" and "the popular passion which causes wars," exclaims: "We have come to a pretty pass!" It then cites sarcastically Prince Bismarck's words, "We Germans fear God, but nothing else in the world."

WISHES PAY FOR RUINED DRESS

Mount Vernon Hose Burst and a Bill Is Presented to the Council.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Dec. 12.—The Aldermen of Mount Vernon have an odd claim to adjust in the shape of a bill for a new silk dress from Mrs. Emma L. Stoney, a society woman of Chester Hill, which, she charges, was ruined by the bursting of a hose with which James Fallon, a city employe, was flushing a sewer. The petition from Mrs. Stoney was written on dainty, scented, robin's-egg-tinted paper. Mrs. Stoney is the wife of Arthur C. Stoney, a New York business man, who lives at 232 Summit Avenue, Chester Hill. She describes her experience and fixes the extent of her damages in the following letter:

232 Summit Avenue, Dec. 10, 1900.

To the Honorable Mayor and Board of Common Council:

Gentlemen: As I was passing the corner of Prospect and Cottage Avenues on Friday afternoon, Dec. 7, a hose in use by the city department, flushing a drain, burst and gave me a thorough wetting. Every garment I had on was soaked with water. I went to the Mayor's office and showed him my condition.

I have, too, a witness who saw the affair, who will testify to the above facts. I find my suit, which was new and had been worn but a few times, is ruined, and I look to your body to reimburse me for the cost of the suit, as follows:

Cloth, $14.85; silk, $9.50; findings, $1; making, $11; total, $36.35.

This is the exact cost, and I claim the amount in full for the damage done.

EMMA L. STONEY.

Mrs. Stoney's claim was referred by Mayor Fiske to the Auditing Committee.

1,000,000 TONS OF RAILS.

Contracts Made for Delivery Next Year —Good Outlook for Iron and Steel Markets.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Dec. 12.—The Commercial Gazette to-morrow will say:

"Rail producers have taken on contracts for delivery next year amounting in round numbers to 1,000,000 tons. It is a heavier award of new business than the railmakers had secured at the opening of the year 1900.

"A few days ago the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company apportioned its rail order, covering practically the quota this interest will require during the next calendar year. The order is for 80,000 tons at the pool price. Four big steel companies each get 20,000 tons. Participating are the Carnegie Steel Company, the Lackawanna Iron and Steel Company, the National Steel Company, and the Federal Steel Company.

"In all lines of development of the iron and steel markets the past week, with a single exception, reveals nothing but a promising future. The plate producers, who have come to terms on prices by joining in an ironclad agreement, have their mills engaged ahead for months. On tinplate for deliveries through the first quarter of next year the price has been advanced $2 a ton. This makes the base price $4.10 per 100-pound box, with the $4 price obtaining for the rest of this month."

FEAR FISHING BOAT IS LOST.

Gloucester People Believe the Sigfrid Has Foundered.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Dec. 12.—This city of fishermen is again mourning for the loss of several of her sailors, this time for the Captain and twelve men of the fishing schooner Sigfrid, which has now been absent from this port for nearly ten weeks and which is believed to have foundered in one of the terrific gales which for the past six weeks have been sweeping the North Atlantic. Five of the members of the crew are married and eighteen children will mourn the loss of fathers.

The Sigfrid sailed from this port Sept. 14 and since that time she has not been reported. The vessel was on a hand-line fishing voyage to the Western Banks and was provisioned for nine weeks. Her Captain was Alexander Frazier of Port Hastings, C. B.

GREENWICH, Conn., Dec. 12.—At the annual meeting of Acacia Lodge of Free Masons last night Frederick Mead of New York presented to the lodge two pillars of mahogany, inlaid with Masonic emblems in oak, which are a century and a quarter old They are hand-carved, and were in use in Union Lodge here in 1775. That lodge is now in existence in Stamford. The pillars are eighteen inches high, and were found recently in the rafters in the attic in the Israel Putnam cottage by a carpenter looking for leaks. Mrs. Mead consented to let Acacia Lodge have them, and they will be put in a case.

Ice in the Upper Hudson.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, Dec. 12.—Navigation on the Upper Hudson closed to-night, so far as the Newburg and Albany Passenger Line is concerned. The steamer J. H. Tremper on arrival here to-day went into Winter quarters, and the M. Martin will go tomorrow. There is plenty of ice in the Upper Hudson, and the Martin found it impracticable to go further than Hudson. She will arrive here to-night. The line laid its boats up last year on Dec. 28. The weather is moderating here to-night.

The will, which is very concise, and was made during the Senator's last illness, leaves all his estate to Mrs. Davis, and names the St. Paul Trust Company as executor. The estate is valued at $25,000 in personal and $40,000 in real property.

CHARGE THEFTS OF GAS

Indianapolis Company's Reason for Deferring Dividend Action.

President Hastings Issues a Circular Accusing Patrons of "Boring Out," Causing Thousands of Dollars Loss.

The Directors of the Indianapolis Gas Company have decided to defer action for the present on dividends for the stock, and in a circular which was issued yesterday by Frank S. Hastings of this city, President of the company, it is explained that this action is due to the fact that the company—the meter system not being in force—has practically been robbed by many of its customers who have "unlawfully increased their supply of gas by the practice known locally as 'boring out' their mixers." The circular is as follows:

To the Stockholders of the Indianapolis Gas Company:

It is with great regret that your Directors are forced to make known to you the reasons which have compelled them to defer action, for the present, on the question of dividends.

Under an old municipal ordinance your company has been selling natural gas in Indianapolis by contract without meter measurement. Originally this plan was accepted generally by natural gas companies in the belief that there was an unlimited supply of this valuable product. The resultant wastage of gas, as is now well known, has brought about a greatly diminished pressure in the field, which has made it impossible to render satisfactory service. Every effort has been made to secure municipal legislation requiring the adoption of economical devices and the compulsory use of meters for measuring the gas; but, owing to the opposition of the people of Indianapolis, our efforts in that direction have so far failed. In the meantime, other cities and towns, realizing the importance of conserving this most valuable fuel, have adopted the system of selling gas by meter, with satisfactory results not only to the local companies, but to the consumers themselves.

Committees of the Indianapolis Board of Trade and the Commercial Club, charged with investigating this question, some time ago visited Allegheny, Pittsburg, Columbus, and other cities where the sale of gas by contract had been substituted by meters, and, after a very thorough and full consideration of this subject, have reported in favor of the adoption of meters in Indianapolis. It is well-known that the adoption of meters would materially increase the receipts of the company, but would accomplish two more important objects, viz., the prolongation of the supply in the field and the insurance of a more satisfactory and economical service to the consumer.

Notwithstanding the fact that we have expended large sums of money in new wells, pump stations, and additional pipe lines in the field, for the purpose of bringing a greater volume of gas to the city, it has been found impossible to furnish a satisfactory service so long as the present wasteful use of gas is continued; at the same time our revenues have very largely decreased in consequence of the wide extent of this practice.

In spite of existing prohibitory statutes, a large percentage of our customers have unlawfully increased their supply by the practice known locally as "boring out" their mixers. Every effort has been made by your managers to stop this unlawful wastage, but although the best legal talent has been employed, supported by indisputable proofs, it has been found utterly impossible to secure a conviction, because of the fact that this illegal practice has been so generally indulged in.

These violations of the law are not confined to the poor or vicious, but include city and county buildings, city officials, lawyers, churches, ministers of the Gospel, physicians, architects, and some of the most prominent residents and business houses in the City of Indianapolis.

Thus our efforts to secure to the law-abiding citizen a good service have been frustrated by the illegal action of other consumers, and it is obvious that further effort in such a direction is hopeless, both from an engineering and financial point of view.

Notwithstanding the alarming conditions which we have recited above, and which your Directors have so far been powerless to prevent, it is our confident belief that the people of Indianapolis will surely awake to a realization of the necessity, in their own interest, of securing such legislation as will extend the duration of the supply of this most valuable fuel to the utmost possible limit.

Meanwhile, your Directors are determined to use every honorable effort in this direction, and to apply the revenues of the company to the protection of its property.

It is declared, in this connection, by one in authority, that out of the 18,000 consumers fully three-quarters of them used more gas than they paid for. The chief method practiced was to cut small holes in the feed pipe, not paying for the extra supply so obtained and consumed. Last year the company's earnings showed a decrease of $110,000.

E. C. Benedict, one of the Directors, declared yesterday that unless the evil were remedied the company would suffer serious financial losses.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 12.—Some time ago committees representing the Indianapolis Board of Trade and Commercial Club investigated the natural gas situation thoroughly and reported in favor of meter measurement as the only means of prolonging the life of natural gas as a fuel.

Every Winter in this city there is great suffering for lack of fuel because of the fact that practically all the houses in the city are piped for the use of gas and because the price of other fuels in many cases is prohibitory. While the people of this city recognize that the gas pressure has greatly diminished and that its value as a luxury is rapidly increasing they have constantly fought the adoption of a meter system.

By a good many it is thought this opposition has its only foundation in the natural opposition to the granting of the demands of a corporation. In the last municipal campaign the question of gas meters was the principal issue, and the successful party was the one which was pledged to fight the introduction of meters.

It is a sort of anomalous condition, because here and there patrons of the gas company do use meters with the result that they save enough over the contract rates to buy extra fuel in the coldest Winter. Periodically, the meter question has been brought before the people and has always been defeated.

When President Hastings's letter to the stockholders reached this city and was published, the opponents of the meter system claimed it was a ruse of the gas company to secure meters. In the minds of a great many people there lurks a suspicion that the gas company has plenty of fuel at its disposal, but holds it back during severe weather in order to force people to pay higher rates.

Investigation of the committee representing the Board of Trade and the Commercial Club, however, showed that the company was furnishing all the gas at its disposal. It is also true that patrons of the company in this city in cold weather violate the law by boring their mixers in an effort to secure more fuel.

It is on this fact that President Hastings bases his assertion that the company is being systematically robbed by its local patrons.

Experts say that unless the meter system is soon introduced here natural gas will be available for fuel only during the warm months. Mayor Taggart and the other city officials to-night declared that their attitude on the question of meters had not been changed.

BANGOR BLOCKADED BY ICE.

Special to The New York Times.

BANGOR, Me., Dec. 12.—Three successive days of below-zero weather have resulted in a complete blockade of the port of Bangor by ice, the Penobscot River being frozen to the thickness of seven to ten inches for a distance of six miles from the city. To-day the most powerful tugs on the river have been engaged in breaking a channel to the vessels caught here by the freeze, and all but two of the craft have been taken down river.

The schooners Post Boy and John T. Williams, from New York, are left here, surrounded with ice strong enough to bear ox teams, and it is probable that they will have to stay here all the Winter.

The shipping season has been a fairly prosperous one, 130,000,000 feet of lumber having been shipped. The outlook for a good ice crop is excellent, but there is considerable rough ice to be cleared out of some of the fields.

Ballantine's India Pale Ale will keep in any climate. Welcome to any stomach.—Adv.

FRIGHTENED BY BRITISH FLAG.

Critical Situation in the House of Representatives and Its Treatment by Speaker Henderson.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The House of Representatives was decorated with the flags of all nations to-day. Shortly before the centennial exercises were to begin, Representative Walter Reeves of Illinois, Republican, wandered in. He glanced toward the Executive gallery, and was horrified to see the British flag dropping over a corner of it. The frightful possibilities of this thing flashed across Mr. Reeves's mind in an instant. Some enemy of the Administration had hung a British flag over the gallery reserved for the President, and in the morning the Democratic press would ring with sarcasms.

Mr. Reeves determined to save the President. He hurried to Speaker Henderson and reported that a visible token of the Anglo-American alliance was floating over the Executive gallery. Speaker Henderson came in, looked at the gallery, and saw that what Reeves said was true. He at once gave orders that a naval signal flag be hung over the British flag, completely hiding it from view. This was done.

Shortly after other members of Congress began to drop in. They saw what Reeves and Henderson had not seen, that the House was full of flags representing all the nations of Europe, and that the only nation which was omitted was Great Britain. These Congressmen immediately jumped to the conclusion that some enemy of the Administration had attempted to get it into trouble with Great Britain by offering this pointed insult. There was a hasty consultation, and it became known that Lord Pauncefote was coming down to the Capitol and that he would surely see the omission of the British flag.

Word was at once sent to Speaker Henderson, and he was implored to get a British flag in position as soon as possible. The Speaker did the best he could, but the hour had arrived when the ceremonies were to begin, and it was too late. Great Britain was the only nation unrepresented, and her flag remained out of sight behind the signal flag.

BID FOR 600,000 SHARES.

Philadelphia Broker Offered to Buy Whole Issue of Union Traction at 35½.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 12.—The Stock Exchange was lapsing into the quiet that usually precedes its closing this afternoon when Broker C. M. Towne gave the members a shock by taking his stand at the Union Traction post and calling out: "I'll bid 35½ for any part of 600,000 shares!" As that amount is the entire capital stock of the company, and as Mr. Towne represents on the Exchange the firm of George A. Hulin & Sons, who are popularly supposed to be brokers for Messrs. Widener, Elkins, and other traction magnates, members of the Exchange at once jumped to the conclusion that some big deal was under way. They had little stock to offer, however, at the figure bid, and Mr. Towne only succeeded in picking up 500 shares at 35½.

Mr. Towne declined to shed any light on the subject, but said that this was not the first time he had made bids for the entire stock of a company. There have been rumors for some time of a deal between the Union Traction, the United Gas Improvement, and the Philadelphia Electric Companies, and these were revived to-day by the offer made, but nothing could be found to show any basis for the story. The price at which Union Traction stock is selling now is far below the figures of last year, when it passed 42, and it is not believed that any considerable amount could be secured at 35½, or at a slight advance above that figure.

Mr. Towne asserted that his bid was a bona fide one, and even said that he could offer 36 for a block of not less than 550,000 shares. Men who know the affairs of Union Traction are convinced that there is something back of the bid.

CONCRETE ELEVATOR BREAKS.

Huge Structure at Duluth Fails to Stand First Test.

Special to The New York Times.

DULUTH, Minn., Dec. 12.—A year ago the Peavey Grain Company commenced the erection here of a giant elevator of a new style. It was to be concrete from floor to roof, without a stick of timber in the entrie structure, and was to be, as well, the largest grain storage structure in the world. It was to have a capacity for holding 3,800,000 bushels of wheat. This house was to be simply a storage, and a terminal and shipping elevator to work in conjunction with it was built of wood, and of a capacity of 1,250,000 bushels.

The Peavey Company sent men to Roumania and the lower Danube where small concrete elevators have been in use for many years, and the plans were studied carefully. Returning, the construction was begun. A foundation was put in, more substantial than anything ever built here, where heavy foundations are required for many great structures, and work on the superstructure began last August. The structure is a series of circular concrete bins, 104 feet high, intended to stand in six rows of five bins each. But half of the building was erected this Fall, the rest to come next year.

Imbedded in the walls of the circular bins are steel tie rods 1½ inches wide and spaced 8 inches apart for the entire height of the building. These circular bins are set about three feet from each other and the concave-sided spaces between were formed into bins by short walls connecting the nearest points of the circular bins, making the entire space inside the outer walls a storage. The construction of the superstructure continued for about eighty-five calendar days, and actually went on at the rate of 30 inches in elevation every ten working hours.

A few days ago the house was examined by a committee of the Duluth Board of Trade, and on its report was declared regular. A number of Eastern bankers also examined it, and decided to loan money on certificates on wheat issued therefrom without insurance. The house was then tested, one of the concave-sided bins being taken for the purpose. No sooner was this bin filled than it broke, a great hole sixty-five feet high and fifty feet wide appearing in the side of the structure.

It is the belief of the owners that the break is the result of improper construction in some point, and that the accident is not an argument against the style of construction. There is something like $400,000 invested in the building as it stands, and as soon as possible the break will be repaired and the house again subjected to sever test. But the construction of a style of elevator that was to supersede wood and steel has received a severe setback. Grain men and bankers of the United States and Canada have been watching this house with the closest interest since the plans of Mr. Peavey were announced.

Mr. Benedict Objects to Trespassers.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Dec. 12.—Trespassers on Commodore Benedict's property "The Maples," now a private inn, but formerly the place where Grover Cleveland and family were often entertained, have become very numerous, and Mr. Benedict has decided to put a stop to it. He is now tearing down a low stone wall, and will build a wooden one, eight hundred feet long, so high that jumping over it will be a feat. The new Chinese wall, as the villagers call it, will be completed in a few days.

Wealthy Western Turfman Dead.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 12.—J. Henry Miller, who died yesterday, was buried at Cincinnati to-day. Miller's late associates were surprised to learn to-night that he was worth in the neighborhood of $60,000. He had $11,000 in one bank. He also owned interests in numerous race horses unknown to his friends. He was unmarried, and left a will deeding all his property to his sister, Mrs. Dr. Meelman of Delaware, Ind. He belonged to the local lodge of Elks, and a committee from the lodge escorted the body to Cincinnati.

HARLEM SAVINGS BANK PAID OUT $150,000

Run on Institution Continues Despite Assurances of Soundness.

CROWDS BESIEGE THE DOORS

Rush for Withdrawal of Deposits So Great Doors Had to be Closed—Superintendent Kilburn Says Bank Is Safe.

The run on the Harlem Savings Bank, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Street and Third Avenue, continued yesterday and increased to almost a panic. Before the bank closed for the day at 3 o'clock more than $150,000 had been withdrawn.

The spread of the rumors affecting the bank caused a rush of depositors early in the morning. At 10 o'clock, when the doors were opened, there were at least 300 persons on the steps leading to the bank and on the sidewalk in front. A general rush was made for the paying teller's window, and it took the combined efforts of several policemen and the bank attendants to prevent the weaker ones from being crushed. Usually there is only one paying teller employed, but yesterday three were called into service, the receiving teller's window being abandoned.

Among the crowd were many women poorly clad carrying infants in their arms. Many seemed to have the idea that payment was to be suspended any moment, and all kinds of tricks and devices were tried to get near the window. Many when assured that their money was ready for them if they wanted it and that the bank was safe left satisfied.

One woman who was greatly excited, carrying a crying baby in her arms, stood in line for half an hour. When she reached the window she discovered that she had either lost or forgotten her bank book. She pleaded hard for her money, but was finally quieted, and left the bank reassured.

ASSURANCES OF SOUNDNESS.

In the crowd outside the bank were several speculators who offered to buy up accounts for ninety cents on the dollar. They did not find many customers. Mr. Richard Webber, one of the trustees of the bank and a wealthy pork packer, mingled with the uneasy depositors and assured them that their money was perfectly safe. He offered to pay depositors in full at his office in East One Hundred and Twentieth Street.

The crowd gradually increased, and by noon there were fully eight hundred people clamoring for admittance. They jammed the ground floor, the stairways, and the sidewalk. The police saw it would be necessary to close the doors of the bank, and allow only as many depositors to enter at a time as could be easily attended to. When the doors were closed there was a general howl from the crowd. Several women screamed, and the cry went up that the bank had suspended business. Those standing in the street were assured, however, that the closing of the doors was simply to facilitate matters, and that the bank would remain open until three o'clock as usual. About this time a number of Italians carrying bank books appeared, and tried to force their way in. John Canteloupe, a padrone, told them there was no cause for alarm, and they left.

OFFICIAL STATEMENTS.

Shortly before 2 o'clock State Superintendent of Banks Frank D. Kilburn visited the bank, and he was closeted with President Tooker, and later issued a statement in which he said:

The Harlem Savings Bank was examined May 16 last and was found at that time to have resources amounting to $10,490,514.43, with liabilities amounting to $9,692,684.73, and a surplus of $797,829.70. The income of the bank over and above current expenses credited to depositors for the year previous was $82,754.66. Among the resources of the bank there were bonds and mortgages amounting to $4,392,861.40, and State, municipal, and railroad bonds amounting to $4,496,400. The balance of the resources was made up of cash and the bank building. The bank, as stated by the President, owns no real estate, except its bank building, and I consider it one of the safest and soundest savings banks in the State.

There is certainly nothing in the condition of the bank why a depositor should withdraw his funds, and a depositor withdrawing at this time will lose his interest from July 1 last.

Accompanying Superintendent Kilburn's statement was the following from President Tooker:

I cannot account for the run upon the institution. There certainly is nothing in the condition of the bank which warrants it, because the bank was never in better condition than it is today. Our cash yesterday morning was about $820,000. The surplus of the bank at this time is about $800,000, according to the present market values of the securities held by the bank.

The bank does not own a dollar's worth of real estate, except its banking house, and has not owned any for five years, and the bank has not been obliged to foreclose a mortgage within several years, and it never began more than twenty-five foreclosures in its existence, and we have never lost a dollar upon a real estate loan with the exception of about $500 of interest on one loan. This shows the conservative and safe administration which the bank has always enjoyed.

There was a crowd waiting when the bank opened at 3 o'clock. One of the reasons for the run on the bank, it was said yesterday, was the result of talk among the members of the Chester A. Arthur Circle of the Women's Branch of the Ancient Order of Foresters of Harlem. The circle had an account of $1,700 in the institution, and at a recent meeting, it is alleged, a member declared that a man friend had told her the deposit was in danger. Thereupon it was withdrawn. Individual members who had accounts there also withdrew them, and in this way the rumor spread.

D. M. Williams, senior member of the dry goods firm at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street and Third Avenue, which failed recently, was a Trustee of the bank until Tuesday last, when his resignation was accepted.

The bank has employed detectives to trace the rumors against the bank, and prosecutions will follow if evidence can be secured.

The bank has 35,000 depositors.

CHICAGO PEW IN WASHINGTON.

Congressman Mann Finds One Labeled in Metropolitan Church.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Congressman Mann to-day discovered a Chicago pew in a Washington church, and thus answered a protest from a constituent. The pew is in the Metropolitan Methodist Church, which President McKinley attends, and bears on a polished silver base the name "Chicago." It is in the front row.

The protest received by Congressman Mann was that Norman B. Judd of Chicago, who represented the First Illinois District in Congress when that district comprised the whole of Cook County, had contributed $1,000 to the building fund of the Metropolitan Church to secure a pew forever to the citizens of Chicago who come to Washington, but that no such reservation seemed to be made in the church.

To prove the assertion that Mr. Judd paid $1,000 for the pew a certificate was produced showing the receipt of the money, and the document bore the signatures of President Grant and Chief Justice Chase as Trustees.

Congressman Mann started to-day to investigate the pew question. He found not only a Chicago, but also an Illinois, pew in the church, each plainly labeled.

LOAN COMPANY'S TROUBLES.

Application for a Receiver for the Anglo-American Will Be Made To-day.

An application will be made before Justice Maddox in Brooklyn to-day for the appointment of Col. William J. Youngs of Nassau County, Secretary to the Governor, as receiver of the Anglo-American Loan and Savings Company.

This corporation, of which ex-Postmaster Thomas L. James is President, has received much attention of late. Mr. James and his associates protest that the company is solvent, and that there is no necessity for a receiver. Mr. James is President of the Lincoln National Bank, in Forty-second Street.

THREE TAKEN FROM A FIRE.

Albert Lyon Used Carpenter's Ladder Before the Truck Arrived.

Albert Lyon, a fireman attached to Engine Company No. 101, Brooklyn, rescued yesterday afternoon a mother and her two children at a fire which occurred in the three-story flat house at 271 Forty-ninth Street, Brooklyn. The fire started from some unknown cause among a lot of rubbish in the cellar, and the building was soon filled with smoke. The smoke was so dense in the hallways and on the stairs that Mrs. Alice Ryan and her children, Mary, thirteen years old, and William, four years old, occupying apartments on the third floor, were unable to escape to the street.

The men of Engine Company No. 101 were the first to arrive. The Ryans were calling for help from the windows of their apartments. The hook and ladder truck of the district had not yet arrived, and Fireman Lyon procured a long ladder from a carpenter's shop near by. This ladder was run up, but it fell short of reaching to the window in which were Mrs. Ryan and her children. Lyon, however, mounted the ladder and, standing on the topmost rung, held on to the window ledge above with one hand, with the other hand he assisted the mother and her children, one by one, down to the ladder, another fireman helping them to reach the ground.

The fire, which was remarkable for the great amount of smoke it raised, was put out by the firemen before it could cause much damage. Fireman Michael Haggerty of Engine Company No. 128 was overcome by smoke in the cellar of the building and was removed to the Norwegian Hospital.

CAR-MAKING PLANT MAY MOVE.

Report That Southern Car Company Works Will Be Located at Ensley.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 12.—A report is current here that the Southern Car Company will remove its car-making plant from Memphis to the Birmingham district in the near future. It is stated specifically that the proposed location is Ensley, where the steel mill of the Tennessee company and other important industries are clustered.

The rumor is said to be founded on excellent grounds. Definite details are not given now, but it is known that the proposal to move is being considered.

CONFEDERATE SOLDIERS' HOME.

Georgia to Accept the Building Erected by Subscription.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 12.—The House of Representatives to-day passed the bill accepting the Confederate Soldiers' Home, built by popular subscription eleven years ago. It is practically assured of success in the Senate.

In 1889 Henry W. Grady, then in the zenith of his fame, originated the Soldiers' Home movement. He engineered the public subscription, and to his efforts was due the erection of the building at a cost of $45,000. At the ensuing session of the Legislature his friends tendered the home to the State free of charge, the only condition being that the State should maintain it.

Principally through the efforts of Gov. W. Y. Atkinson, now dead, the home was rejected. Under the provisions of the bill passed to-day $15,000 a year is appropriated for the maintenance of the institution, and veterans now in the poor houses will be provided with a home.

LOUISIANA HUNTER LOST.

Many Searching Parties for Capt. Kaough, Missing for Five Days.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 12.—Capt. Thomas Kaough, a prominent Louisianian, who five days ago became separated from a hunting party on the sea marsh along the Gulf Coast, below Lake Charles, has not been found, though a dozen or more searching parties have walked hundreds of miles along the winding shores of bayous and lakes of that region. The grass is so high that an object ten feet away cannot be seen. Relief parties left Lake Charles today, and the search will be kept up indefinitely.

Capt. Kaough and a friend were hunting together. They became separated by a thick growth of grass. There is no fresh water in that section, and unless Capt. Kaough finds his way out of the marsh or is found by the searchers he will die from thirst in a few days.

The marsh is a wilderness of vast extent, and the searching parties have to take every precaution to prevent being lost themselves.

HOW MR. CHANLER ESCAPED.

Rode to Mamaroneck on Trolley and Boarded Train for New York.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Dec. 12.—It was definitely learned to-night that John Armstrong Chanler, who escaped from Bloomingdale Asylum, at White Plains, on Thanksgiving Day and has not been seen since, went to New York on a New Haven Railroad train. Chanler walked out of the western gate of the asylum grounds and boarded a trolley car on the White Plains branch of the Huckleberry system and rode to the Mamaroneck station of the New Haven Railroad, where he purchased a ticket. He talked freely with the telegraph operator and station agent and appeared to be perfectly sane. He had no baggage with him.

Dr. Lyon of Bloomingdale to-night said that he had not received any further word from the missing millionaire, but nevertheless he was anxious to find him. The letter which Superintendent Lyon received on the morning following Chanler's disappearance, he admits, was mailed in the section covered by Station H, as it bore that postmark.

"Mr. Chanler probably dropped the letter in the box in front of the Grand Central Station as soon as the train arrived there," Mr. Lyon added.

Oil Wagons Barred from Ferryboats.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Dec. 12.—Because of an order received by the Ramsdell Company, which came in the shape of a letter from the Treasury Department, calling attention to the law regarding explosives, the ferry company to-day served notice on Manager Stebbins, in charge of the local affairs of the Standard Oil Company, that their delivery wagon would not be carried on their ferry lines. The law, although an old one, has not been rigidly enforced for a number of years. It provides that petroleum and its products shall not be carried as freight on steamboats on account of the possibilities of explosion.

HOW LIEUT. CHURCHILL ESCAPED FROM BOERS

Introduced to an American Audience by Mark Twain.

COMMITTEE OF RECEPTION

Protests of Some with Pro-Boer Sympathies Whose Names Were Used —Mr. Van Ness's Circular.

Winston Spencer Churchill, the war correspondent, told a fashionable audience at the Waldorf-Astoria last evening how he escaped from Pretoria. The grand ballroom was crowded to the doors.

More than usual publicity had been given the lecture owing to the action taken by certain persons named on the reception committee list by Major Pond, who is managing Mr. Churchill's tour. On Dec. 7 William Dean Howells and J. Kennedy Tod announced that the use of their names was unauthorized, and this was followed by a similar protest from Edward Van Ness, who was actively pro-Boer during the war in South Africa. Mr. Van Ness addressed a circular letter to each gentleman named on the reception committee list, asking him if a similar liberty had been taken with his name.

The Reception Committee list as at first given out contained among others the following names: Gov. Roosevelt, Governor-elect Odell, Whitelaw Reid, Mayor Van Wyck, Senators Chauncey M. Depew and Thomas C. Platt, and Thomas B. Reed.

REPLIES TO MR. VAN NESS.

In answer to his circular Mr. Van Ness received this reply from A. M. Downes, Mayor Van Wyck's secretary:

I am directed by the Mayor to acknowledge the receipt of your circular letter of the 10th inst. concerning the unauthorized use of his name on the list of patrons of Winston Spencer Churchill's first appearance in New York, and to say that on Dec. 5 he received a letter from Mr. J. B. Pond, which was dated Dec. 4, in which Mr. Pond said: "Winston Spencer Churchill's first appearance in New York, Dec. 12, is going to be a brilliant affair. I write to ask you if you will allow your name to be used on the list of patrons to follow that of Hon. Roosevelt."

By direction of the Mayor, under date of Dec. 6, I sent the reply, which is herewith inclosed, to Mr. Pond.

This reply states that it is contrary to the Mayor's uniform practice to accede to the request made by Major Pond.

Among the letters of protest received by Mr. Van Ness were the following:

Princeton University.

Edward Van Ness, Esq.:

Dear Sir: Thank you for your letter. I have written to The Post protesting against the annexation of my name to support the conquest of the Boer Republic without consent. Yours truly,

HENRY VAN DYKE.

Dec. 11, 1900.

10 East Forty-sixth Street, New York, Dec. 12.

Mr. Edward Van Ness:

Dear Sir: If my name appears as one of the Reception Committee of Winston Spencer Churchill, it has been used without my authority or without asking me for the permission to use it.

I would never have acceded to the proposal if it had been made, and such use of a name shows that the person taking the liberty has no more morality than the thief or forger. Very truly yours,

C. H. VAN BRUNT.

MAJOR POND'S STATEMENT.

Major Pond assured a reporter yesterday that men with pro-Boer sympathies had been invited to welcome Mr. Churchill, in all seriousness.

"No one could be more pro-Boer than W. Bourke Cockran," said Major Pond, "and yet he was pleased to be on the committee. It never occurred to me that any one could possibly object to meeting so distinguished a man as Mr. Churchill. I gave no thought to politics. How I came to name the committee was this way:

"Many of Mr. Churchill's friends in New York are people of the very highest social standing. They urged me to adopt the English custom of a list of patrons, or Reception Committee, to occupy the stage. I consented, and a list of names was suggested of about 100 leading citizens of various walks of life. Invitations were sent out by me, and about 75 of the 100 accepted the honor with thanks.

"A prominent Scotchman recommended the names of John S. Kennedy and J. Kennedy Tod. I received no reply to their invitations, but before the final corrected circular was sent out their names were erased. Thomas B. Reed sent a characteristic delightful note of regret, alluding to the other humorist who was to preside. I wrote Mr. Reed asking if he would allow his name to remain, and he replied, no. So his name was stricken off.

"During all this time the ticket sale for the Churchill lecture at the Waldorf-Astoria dragged very slowly, and I began to get discouraged. Not till these letters of protest appeared did the sale take a sudden bound. Van Ness? I never heard of the man."

Mr. Churchill, who was seen last evening before the lecture, expressed himself as being greatly annoyed at the incident.

"I am very much opposed to anything of the kind," he said. "The names ought not to have been used without authority. I certainly did not want these gentlemen to come. It was a great mistake, which I regret exceedingly. I notice, by the way, that Mr. Van Ness quotes extracts from a letter alleged to have been written by me. I never wrote what he quotes."

Mr. Churchill alluded to a passage in Mr. Van Ness's circular in which he quotes the correspondent as saying: "We had a good bag to-day—10 killed, 17 wounded."

Among the members of the Reception Committee who greeted the young soldier-author at the Waldorf-Astoria last evening were Rear Admiral Erben, Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, Gen. N. M. Curtis, Gen. Alfred C. Barnes, Oscar S. Straus, William Berri, John Kendrick Bangs, Dr. Albert Shaw, Daniel Frohman, Col. E. M. Knox, George H. Daniels, and Frank Fuller.

MARK TWAIN'S INTRODUCTION.

The lecture began at 8:30. Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain) being in the chair. Mr. Clemens, introducing the speaker, said Mr. Churchill knew all about war and nothing about peace. War might be very interesting to persons who like that sort of entertainment, but he had never enjoyed it himself.

During the civil war he remembered visiting a battlefield once, but he had never felt comfortable there. One cannot carry an umbrella when it rains, for when shells are flying they might get tangled up with the umbrella.

Personally he disapproved of the war in South Africa, and he thought England sinned when she interfered with the Boers, as the United States is sinning in meddling in the affairs of the Filipinos. England and America were kin in almost everything; now they are kin in sin. He had long worked as a missionary, advocating bonds of friendship between America and England, and, thanks to his efforts, the United States was on good terms with Great Britain.

America and England wept at the door of China when the mailed fist of blustering Germany battered the unhappy Chinaman while Russia robbed him, and they have worked together to maintain the favor of the world. He sympathized with the Boers, but as a missionary in the cause of an Anglo-American alliance he took pleasure in welcoming Mr. Churchill, "a blend of America and England which makes a perfect match."

Mr. Churchill was greeted cordially by the audience. He showed nervousness at first, but soon forgot himself in his subject, and held the attention of his listeners by a clear recital of some of the most striking episodes of the struggle between Boer and Briton. A touch of humor, introduced half unconsciously, lightened up the lecture considerably.

STORY OF THE ESCAPE.

After alluding to the fact that he had already written a book about his escape from Pretoria, he said he trusted that every one in the audience would purchase a copy. This was the anniversary of his escape, many accounts of which had been related here and in England, but none of which was true. He escaped by climbing over the iron paling of his prison while the sentry was lighting his pipe. He passed through the streets of Pretoria unobserved and managed to board a coal train on which he hid among the sacks of coal.

When he found the train was not going in the direction he wanted, he jumped off.

He wandered about aimlessly, he said, for a long time, suffering from hunger, and at last he decided that he must seek aid at all risks. He knocked at the door of a kraal, expecting to find a Boer, and, to his joy, found it occupied by an Englishman named Herbert Howard, manager of a Transvaal colliery, who ultimately helped him to reach the British lines.

NEW YORK LAWYER'S SCHEME.

Offers to Get Corporations' Taxes Reduced—Controller Gilman Tries to Stop His Operations.

ALBANY, Dec. 12.—Several complaints have been made within the last few days to the State Controller in relation to a circular letter issued by a New York lawyer, and which statement appears to have been sent to a large number of corporations doing business in the City of New York. The circular letter reads as follows:

Gentlemen: In examining the reports filed by you with the State Controller for taxation purposes, I find that you have not literally complied with the law, in that you are paying more taxes than is therein required. If this report was corrected to meet the exact requirements of the statute, you would then pay your proportion of the State tax and no more than others in the same line of business.

I have made a special study of the corporation tax laws, and am prepared to make the necessary corrections in your report, if you so desire, upon the following terms, to wit: One-half of the savings effected the first year only, but if no reduction is made, then no charge is made by me of any nature.

As the time to make these modifications to be available this year is short, I should be pleased to hear from you at an early date, making an appointment at your or my offices.

B. S. McKEAN.

Under date of Dec. 12, Controller Gilman forwarded to the lawyer a letter requesting information as to what authority he had for making any such statement, at what time such examinations had been made, and who had permitted him to make them. In conclusion the Controller said: "If the statement purporting to issue from your office did not come from you, the department would be pleased to know it, and if you are issuing any such statement, I would most respectfully request that the practice be immediately discontinued."

The Controller denies that that lawyer or any other person has ever been permitted to examine the reports filed in the department for purposes of taxation, except where an order has been forwarded to the department signed by a stockholder of the corporation whose report is to be examined or when application has been made by the duly credited legal representative of the company. He goes on to say that these reports show upon their face what dividends have been declared by the company, the amount of capital employed in doing business in the State, and in many cases the actual amount of business transacted by the company.

In addition to these facts, he says there are cases in which an actual appraisal of the value of the capital stock is made and sworn to by officers of the corporation, and if copies of such reports should be had indiscriminately, or the reports examined in the Controller's department, the information there given might be used by competing concerns for stock jobbery and other purposes entirely illegitimate.

The Controller desires it distinctly understood that no permission will be given to any person to examine these reports until satisfactory evidence has been submitted that the party requesting the privilege of examination or of copying reports has due authority for so doing.

Bernard S. McKean is a lawyer with offices at 1,133 Broadway. When seen last night at the West Side Republican Club Mr. McKean stated that he had never seen any corporation reports after they had been filed with the Controller.

"My information was based primarily on the published reports of the Controller, which are public property," said he. "In many instances I have been furnished the reports by the corporations themselves, and I have been able to detect errors which, when corrected, saved money to the corporations. The nature of these errors I must decline to state. I have, however, acted within my legal rights at all times."

Mr. McKean added that as yet he had received no communication from the Controller.

THE LABOR PORTFOLIO PLAN.

Resolutions in Favor of It Defeated at American Federation of Labor Convention.

LOUISVILLE, Dec. 12.—An animated discussion arose in to-day's session of the American Federation of Labor convention over a resolution for a labor portfolio in the Cabinet, upon which the committee reported adversely. The original resolution provided that the proposed Cabinet officer should be a bona-fide trades unionist.

President Duncan opposed the resolution on the ground that the stipulation for a "bona-fide trades unionist" would prove a source of weakness, and probably defeat the purpose of the convention in framing the measure.

Delegate Max Hays of Cleveland, in defending the resolution, made a point of the fact that a member of the French Cabinet, M. Millerand, was, he alleged, a trades unionist. Delegate Warner of New York said his experience had not led him to put much confidence in the average labor representative in places of trust and responsibility in some of the State Governments. "I would sooner see Mark Hanna," he said, "representing our interests than some of the labor representatives who hold positions in some States."

The adverse report of the committee was concurred in by a vote of 78 to 47, thus killing the resolution.

SCHOLARSHIPS IN LAW.

Alumni of the New York University Law School Start a Fund at the Annual Dinner.

Ex-Judge Ernest Hall, while presiding last night at the annual dinner of the alumni of the New York University Law School at the Hotel Savoy, announced that the organization was to found two or more law scholarships in the university. He then had a book passed around among the guests, and more than a thousand dollars was pledged.

Among the speakers at the dinner were ex-Judge Hall, Judge Theodore F. Hascall, Judge George F. Roesch, Prof. George A. Miller, Cleveland F. Bacon, and District Attorney Asa Bird Gardiner. All of them talked on legal topics. Incidentally Judge Roesch referred to "the great east side of the city, which it has of late become fashionable to deride, but which, in my humble opinion, is no worse than many another part of this city." He also said that he thought the statute laws concerning the Municipal Court should be codified, an opinion which provoked much applause from his hearers.

Col. Gardiner talked about forty years ago and told of the services he had rendered his country in the civil war. Judge Hascall read to the diners a list of legal "don'ts," which he said had been prepared by a friend of his, an attorney, as he himself had been unable to think of what he ought to say in his speech.

AUGUST BELMONT ILL.

Confined to Bed with Typhoid Fever at His Country Home.

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., Dec. 12.—August Belmont is ill at his country home with typhoid fever. He has been confined to his bed since Saturday. Dr. Finn, who is attending him, says the case is not a severe one and that it is following the usual and well-known lines of the disease. Dr. Finn anticipates no fatal result, but says that, of course, there is always danger from typhoid until the disease is cured.

Mr. Belmont had what appeared to be a severe grippy cold all last week. He went to business as usual every day up to and including Friday. On Saturday he had to remain in bed and has not been to the city since.

Perry Belmont, who was at his brother's bedside yesterday, said last night that the attack of typhoid was not severe, and no uneasiness was felt by either the family or attending physicians.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—The Argentine Government, according to the Buenos Ayres correspondent of The Times, has resolved to invite public tenders in connection with the sale of the trans-Andes railway on the basis of £1,200,000.

ELM STREET ASSESSMENTS.

Property Holders Want to be Relieved of $2,500,000 of Expense and Put It on the City.

The property holders of Elm Street, who desire to have the city take over the amount assessed against them for the widening of Elm Street, have brought their case before the Board of Public Improvements. Their share of the cost amounts to about $2,500,000. They object to paying on the ground that they have not received any benefits from the improvements which, they say, will not be completed until the rapid transit tunnel is built.

The property holders were represented by Trueman H. Baldwin. Mulqueen & Mulqueen are counsel for the property holders, and it is understood that they are to receive something like 30 per cent. of the amount saved to the property owners and added to the city debt.

Controller Coler said yesterday that he was opposed to this petition, as he did not consider the property holders had a right to add $2,500,000 to the city's debt which they had agreed to pay themselves.

There are several members of the Board of Public Improvements who are understood to be in favor of granting the petition. On motion of Commissioner Nagle, the matter went over for two weeks.

HELD UP IN HIS STORE.

Six Colored Men with Pistols Rob an Italian Grocery.

A daring hold-up and robbery took place early last evening in the grocery store of Michael Murrae, an Italian, on Fifth Avenue, near One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street.

Murrae and a clerk were in the store alone about 8 o'clock when six colored men entered. They said they wanted to buy some potatoes and sugar. The men talked with Murrae and his clerk for some time in the rear of the store, and then three of the colored men pulled revolvers from their pockets and ordered Murrae and the clerk to go behind the counter, cautioning them to keep still. Their three companions then searched the pockets of the grocer and his clerk, taking $26. The six men then left the store.

Murrae and his clerk followed the men, calling for help. They followed them to One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street and Lenox Avenue, where Policemen Wolf and Buckridge of the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street Station joined in the chase.

The men separated, one continuing on up Lenox Avenue. He was caught at One Hundred and Thirty-seventh Street and identified by Murrae. He gave his name as Thomas Brown of 44 West One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street. Neither money nor revolvers were found on him.

Brown gave the names of his colleagues, among them a gentleman known to the police as "One-Winged" Brent, who was later arrested and locked up.

SAYS POOR ARE DISCONTENTED.

Dr. Rainsford Asserts This Is Proved by the Vote for Bryan.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 12.—Dr. W. S. Rainsford of New York talked to the students at Harvard this evening on "The Various Social and Political Problems of the United States." He classed these problems under two heads—"Discontent" and "Lawlessness." He said the fact that Mr. Bryan received a vote within 5 per cent. of that of Mr. McKinley showed conclusively that a large portion of the country is discontented with the Administration. Speaking of the conditions of the poor people in New York and elsewhere and the reasons for their discontent he said that this latter was due to education, which is bound to make the poorer classes discontented with their lot.

Under the head of "Lawlessness," he said that one of the chief evils of the United States was too many laws. A great many faddists imagine they can cure evils by legislation, he said, just as some people in New York are now endeavoring to crush vice by the passing of laws. The only way to cure evils is by raising the standard of the public conscience.

He advised college men in choosing a profession to look at the possibilities open to the teacher and to the minister.

SERVANT GIRLS' UNION.

Mrs. Beale Criticises Americans and Enrolls Six Members.

Mrs. Beale got down to business at another meeting of servant girls held last night at the Social Reform Club, 45 University Place. She persuaded six girls to enroll themselves as members of the proposed Domestic Servants' Union. Each girl paid $1 as an initiation fee. There were even "godlike women," Mrs. Beale said, who nagged their servants. She also abused the people of America generally, declaring that they were coarser-grained than the people of England, where she came from.

"And I have grown coarser by contact since I came here," she continued. "And yet I was refined and very good-looking, too—at one time."

She declared bad manners to be the rule for this country, especially in the West, where, she said, the men sat with their feet above their heads and expectorated on the carpets.

"Where did this all happen," said a woman in front, with a rising inflection in her voice.

"In Texas," said Mrs. Beale, with some hesitation.

"Well," said the woman, "I was there and never saw anything like it. The men there are as well bred as in any part of the United States."

Mrs. Beale admitted that there might be some good people there, and said she had a brother in Texas. Then she mentioned Colorado as a place where the men were very rude, especially cowboys.

"I have been in Colorado," said the woman who, it was learned, was a trained nurse from Chicago, "and found the men civil and well bred. And all the people there are not cowboys, and all the cowboys are not ill-mannered."

Mrs. Beale said that she needed money, but so far had to draw on her own purse. She also announced that there would be another meeting next week and that others could enroll at her home, 219 Second Avenue.

NEW CHURCH FOR NEGROES.

St. James's Congregation Wish to Raise $50,000.

The congregation of the St. James Presbyterian Church, which is composed of colored people and of which the Rev. P. Butler Tompkins is pastor, is raising funds to erect a new house of worship. It is the only church of any denomination for the negro race west of Sixth Avenue, between Twenty-seventh and Fifty-second Streets.

The new building is to cost $50,000, and $25,000 has been subscribed. Of this amount $10,000 is given by one person on condition that the entire sum is raised within a year.

An appeal has been issued asking that contributions be sent to Constant A. Andrews, President of the United States Savings Bank and the Treasurer of the Building Fund, 633 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Fatal Fight Due to Mistake.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 12.—A fight between revenue officers and a party of men whom the officers mistook for illicit distillers in Madison County, Ala., to-day resulted in the shooting of four men. Deputy Collector Jolly Ranier of the officers' party was fatally injured and three men of the other party received serious wounds. The officers, thinking the men in the wagon were Tennessee mountaineers with a load of "moonshine" en route for Huntsville, ordered them to halt. They mistook the officers for highwaymen and both parties opened fire.

Verdict of $6,000 for Electric Shock.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Dec. 12.—A verdict for $6,000, with 5 per cent. allowance for counsel fees, was returned by a jury to-day in favor of Mary A. Burkhas against the Metropolitan Railway Company. She was on a Third Avenue car on Feb. 13, 1900, when the circuit breaker blew out, and she received a shock which so injured her that she will be a cripple for the rest of her life.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

NYACK, N. Y., Dec. 12.—Fire started to-day from some unknown cause in the embossing room of the Christian and Missionary Alliance printing establishment and rapidly spread to other parts of the building, causing damage which is estimated at about $20,000 to material and machinery. The loss is fully covered, as the establishment is insured for $50,000.

SMALLPOX IN LUMBER CAMPS.

Epidemic in Peninsula of Michigan—Also Breaks Out in Missouri.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—Dr. A. E. Price of this city returned to-day from the lumber camps on the Peninsula of Michigan. He reports that smallpox is epidemic in parts of that section and is spreading rapidly. He went to the lumber region at the request of the Edward Hines Lumber Company, which desired to have employes who were suffering from the disease isolated and an attempt made to stay its progress.

So frightened are the men of the lumber region, Dr. Price says, that lumber owners are becoming uneasy about getting out their lumber in the Spring, as the men in the camps are talking about disbanding.

Dr. Price established a temporary pest house and vaccinated 200 persons who had been exposed. Forty-five cases of genuine smallpox came under his attention.

BURGLARS ACTIVE IN YONKERS.

They Enter Many Houses, Are Discovered in Each Case, but Escape.

YONKERS, N. Y., Dec. 12.—Two burglars entered the residence of J. B. Tiffany of Steinway & Co., at 234 Palisade Avenue, at 2 o'clock this morning. He heard them, armed himself, and went down stairs, but the burglars left the house by the window by which they entered. At 3 o'clock two burglars got into the house of Foster Slade of 70 Highland Avenue. Mrs. Slade heard them and called her husband. The burglars left the house as Mr. Slade was descending the stairs. At 3:30 William Ulrich, who lives close to Mr. Slade's residence, was awakened by a noise on the lower floor, and, going down to investigate, was just in time to see the burglars disappearing down the street.

At 7 o'clock this evening, while the family of Col. William M. Heermance of 364 Palisade Avenue, was at dinner, his daughter Susie, who was in the second room from the front on the second floor, heard a window raise in the front room. She looked in and saw a man bending over the dresser and another stepping from the window sill to the floor. She ran to the head of the stairs and called. As she did so the burglars ran to the window and out upon the roof of the veranda. William Heermance, Jr., and his brother Edgar ran out upon the veranda just in time to see two men leap from the roof to the lawn. Edgar chased the second man, who jumped, and the thief turned and fired a shot. The bullet grazed the back of the young man's hand. Both thieves escaped.

FOUND AN OLD PAINTING.

Yonkers People Think It May Be the Figure of Lord Frederick Phillipse.

YONKERS, N. Y., Dec. 12.—The Yonkers Historical Society and art critics are puzzled over an old oil painting on wood found in the cellar of the Yonkers City Hall, formerly the Phillipse Manor House. The painting had lain in a corner of the cellar for many years. It had been covered with old books and rubbish.

A week or ten days ago Janitor Carter found the picture and turned it over to the Historical Society, and since that the inquiry has been under way.

It is believed, although there is no authority for it, that the picture is that of Lord Frederick Phillipse. This is based upon the fact that in a general way the features resemble those of Lady Mary Phillipse, sister of Lord Frederick, whose portrait is in the old mansion in Van Cortlandt Park. The painting shows a rather portly man about thirty-five years old. The face is shown at a three-quarter exposure, and the subject is sitting. The board was surrounded by a wooden frame upon which had been pasted a coarse cloth. Imposed upon the cloth was either putty or plaster, which had been worked into vines and flowers. The painter's name has not been determined.

HARVARD BEATEN IN DEBATE.

Holy Cross Defeats Juniors in Discussion on the Philippines.

WORCESTER, Mass., Dec. 12.—Holy Cross College and Harvard University met for the first time in their history in a debating contest to-night, and Holy Cross won. The discussion was in Mechanics' Hall before an audience of 1,200 people.

The judges were Judge William T. Forbes, Superintendent of Schools; Clarence F. Carroll, and Charles F. Aldrich. Dr. G. Stanley Hall, President of Clark University, was Chairman of the debate, and the young disputants, who are all juniors in their respective colleges, were: For Harvard—Adolph Friedman of Cleveland, Ernest E. Smith of Brooklyn, Edward H. Letchworth of Buffalo; for Holy Cross—John A. Sullivan of Bangor, Me.; Augustus P. Conneff of Plains, Penn., and Patrick F. Doyle of Worcester.

The question, which was selected by the Harvard men, was: "Resolved, that the Permanent Retention of the Philippine Islands by the United States is Desirable." Holy Cross had the negative. In the opinion of two of the judges, the two teams were equal in point of matter and preparation, but the three judges were unanimous that Holy Cross excelled in manner and delivery.

Three Children Burned to Death.

TIONESTA, Penn., Dec. 12.—A fire occurred at Golinza, about twelve miles from this place to-day, which resulted in the death of three children of E. W. Grubbs. The mother had gone to call on a neighbor, leaving the children in the house, when an unexpected pressure of gas came on, overheating the stove and igniting the building. When discovered, the fire had gained such headway that it was impossible to enter the building, and the little ones, who were aged five and two years and six months, were burned to a crisp.

VANDALS AT PLYMOUTH ROCK.

The Granite Canopy Over It Has Been Defaced.

PLYMOUTH, Mass., Dec. 12.—The canopy over that sacred spot, Plymouth Rock, has been defaced by vandals. The act, to all appearances, was deliberately done. This canopy is of granite, 15 by 15 feet and 30 feet high, being built in the form of four piers with arched openings and surmounted by a granite roof.

The square stones on either side of the western entrance are bruised and the angles broken off, while marks of other hammerings are plain on various parts of the base. A reward has been offered by the Pilgrim Society for the detection of the vandals. To make perfect repairs on the canopy the entire structure may have to be rebuilt.

SICK MAN KILLS HIMSELF.

The Suicide of George Avery, Formerly a Brooklyn Resident.

PORT JEFFERSON, L. I., Dec. 12.—George Avery, formerly a real estate agent at Blue Point, but more recently a resident of Brooklyn and in business at 235 Broadway, Manhattan, killed himself here this afternoon.

Mr. Avery was sent here two weeks ago by a physician, as he had been suffering from nervous prostration. He complained constantly of pains in his head. To-day he went into a barnyard and shot himself. He regained consciousness for a short time, but made no statement. He was a member of the Royal Arcanum.

AN ALLEGED ANARCHIST CLUB.

Attention Called to It by a Probably Fatal Accident.

An Anarchist rendezvous, the police allege, was unearthed last night through the almost fatal burns received by a member of the club at 181 Madison Street. Policeman Ryan was patrolling his post, when he heard yells proceeding from the building, and entered. Louis Mazer, who has been out of work for some time, was permitted to occupy the headquarters of the Anarchists, in the rear room on the first floor. He attempted to start a fire with benzine, and his clothing ignited.

The policeman succeeded in putting the fire out. On removal to Gouverneur Hospital Mazer was found to be suffering from burns which may prove fatal. The police found the watchman of the alleged club, and they say he admitted that he was a member of the organization, and that an Anarchist newspaper was also published and sent out from that number in Madison Stret.

SIDNEY SAMUEL A SUICIDE

New York Importer Kills Himself in Portland Hotel.

BROODED OVER LOVE AFFAIR

Was Once Engaged to Anita Vivanti Chartres, the Writer—Relatives Are Reticent.

According to the story told yesterday by friends in this city, a love affair was the cause of the suicide of Sidney Samuel, who until recently was a member and London manager of the firm of Samuel Brothers, exporters, of 54 Broad Street, who was found dead with a bullet in his brain in a hotel in Portland, Me., early on Tuesday morning. About two years ago he met and became engaged to Anita Vivanti Chartres, a woman of Italian birth, the author of books and poems, both in Italian and English, and of the play, "That Man," which was produced here at the Herald Square Theatre. On account of the objections made by his father, the young man broke off the engagement. Since then he had become so melancholy that at times it was necessary for his relatives to keep a watch on him.

The firm of Samuel Brothers was made up of Samuel and Lionel and Sidney Samuel. The family was originally a Spanish one, but moved to London many years ago. Sidney's father, Rabbi Israel, is at present one of the most prominent orthodox Jews in London. There are two other brothers in the family, Montagu, who is the New York manager for the firm, and who lives at Port Richmond, S. I., and a younger brother who is at present in London.

Samuel, who was thirty-five years old, was educated at the University of London. About two years ago, while in Paris, he made the acquaintance of the woman to whom he became engaged. She is said to be an extremely beautiful woman and is well known in theatrical circles in this country. She was formerly the wife of John Chartres, an Englishman, who was at one time London correspondent for The New York Herald. Shortly before she met Samuel she went with her husband to South Dakota, where they were divorced. Last June she came to this country, and it was expected at the time that she was going to marry Samuel.

Montagu Samuel, when seen yesterday, declined to say anything at all about his brother's suicide. Ex-Judge Olcott, who is his attorney, also declined to say anything about the matter.

A friend of the Samuel family who had known Sidney Samuel intimately both in this city and in London, but who was unwilling to allow his name to be used, said:

"I had been afraid ever since the engagement was broken off that it would end this way. Mrs. Chartres was a Catholic, and Sidney's father was opposed to his son's marrying her for this reason. Ever since last July, when Samuel gave in to the wishes of his father, he has been melancholy and unlike himself, and I believe his mind finally became deranged through brooding on his disappointment."

From other friends of the Samuel family it was learned that the marriage had been settled upon and preparations for it were in progress when the engagement was broken off. At the beginning of last June Mrs. Chartres came to this country, expecting to be married. She lived for two months at the Fifth Avenue Hotel at the rate of $2,000 a month. At one time she bought nearly $2,000 worth of clothes, charging them to the hotel, which extended her credit for that amount.

Before leaving for Paris, Mrs. Chartres presented a claim to her former fiancé for about $8,000, which she claimed to have spent in coming to this country, buying her trousseau and making other preparations. This was paid without the slightest question by Samuel with a check drawn on his father in London. It is said that Samuel was anxious to make a much larger monetary reparation for the breaking off of the engagement, but that Mrs. Chartres refused to accept anything more.

Samuel left New York last week, announcing that he was going to Boston, where he said he would take a steamer to England to spend the holidays with his father in London. The next that his relatives heard from him was the announcement that he had committed suicide in Portland.

The firm of Samuel Brothers is known both in this city and in London as Samuel Hermanos "Hermanos" being the Spanish for brothers. The firm also has offices in the City of Mexico, where Lionel Samuel has his residence.

Mrs. Chartres, who is at present supposed to be in Paris, is principally known in this country in connection with her play, "That Man." Mrs. Chartres claimed that Mrs. A. M. Palmer, who produced the play here, spoiled it by making an alteration in the fourth act, and applied for an injunction to prevent her from producing it. The fight in court, in which Mrs. Chartres was beaten, attracted considerable attention at the time.

BROTHER WILL GO AFTER BODY.

Samuel Was Well Supplied with Funds Before He Killed Himself.

PORTLAND, Me., Dec. 12.—A telegram has been received by the police from Montagu Samuel of 54 Broad Street, New York, brother of Sidney Samuel, who committed suicide at the West End Hotel yesterday. The message closed: "Kindly wire steps necessary to take charge of remains."

Word was sent to the brother to come here at once and the body probably will be given into his care. Nearly all of the dead man's clothing bears the marks of London tailors, and down to the last practicably were of the finest quality. On his person were $82 in money and a letter of credit on Brown, Shipley & Co. of London for £600. Of this £150 had been drawn.

PLUMBER COLLINS INSANE.

He Had Tried to Shoot a Policeman for Alienating Sweetheart's Affections.

Roger Collins, the plumber of Long Island City who was held for trial Tuesday on the charge of attempting to shoot Policeman Day of the East One Hundred and Fourth Street Station, began to act queerly in the Harlem prison yesterday morning, and was transferred to Bellevue. Collins had declared in court on Tuesday that he did not attempt to shoot the policeman, but was trying to ascertain whether or not the policeman had alienated the affections of his sweetheart.

Early yesterday morning Collins began beseeching the doorman of the prison to tell him whether or not he had alienated the affections of his sweetheart. The doorman could not make Collins understand that he was not Policeman Day, and finally called an ambulance.

MARINE SOCIETY DIFFERENCES.

Friends of Capts. Newbury and Randall Displease Nominating Committee.

The committee to nominate officers for the Marine Society for the ensuing year met yesterday afternoon. A printed ticket had been sent to the members of the committee headed by Capt. A. J. Newbury for President, and Capt. H. R. Randall for Vice President. If elected these two members would be Trustees of the Sailors' Snug Harbor. Several members of the committee were displeased at the action of the friends of the above-named persons, which was the cause of the failure to make nominations.

There was some little feeling shown by the friends of Capt. Newbury when a member of the committee announced the fact that he as Vice President of the Marine Society and a member of the Board of Trustees of the Sailors' Snug Harbor, voted to pay Gov. Delehanty $1,000 out of the Harbor treasury for his expenses to Washington to enable him to secure relief from duty in the navy and retain his place on Staten Island. Capt. Trask, who declined renomination for President of the Marine Society, objected to the Delehanty appropriation, and it was one of the causes of friction between him and the other Snug Harbor Trustees.

Another meeting of the Nominating Committee will take place Dec. 17, and it is a matter of grave doubt if Capt. Newbury succeeds in being promoted to the Presidency.

BACHELOR WOMAN HAS RIGHTS

Court Decides that Landlord Cannot Lock Her Out Before Midnight.

A bachelor woman has a perfect right to remain away from her home until midnight, and if her landlord refuses to permit her to carry a night key he must, at least, respond to the bell and let her into the house. This was the ruling made yesterday by Justice Andrews in the Supreme Court. The case was that of Miss Florence Abell against Jacob A. Ondrak.

Miss Abell is a dressmaker, and on Oct. 1 last she leased two rooms from Mr. Ondrak at 435 Fifth Avenue. She was to have the rooms until May 1 next. Under the conditions of the lease she was permitted to use the rooms as sleeping apartments as well as for her work as a dressmaker.

Miss Abell claimed that on the night of Nov. 10 she had to stand in front of the house for over one hour before she could get in, and on the night of Nov. 13 she waited from 11 to 12 midnight, and then went to a hotel. She had a key to the inside door, but her landlord refused to give her a key to the outside door, and she wanted the Court to compel him to do so.

In his defense Mr. Ondrak said that the house had been largely given over to business purposes, and many thousands of dollars worth of valuable goods were stored in it, and as a result the outside door was locked as a matter of precaution.

In giving his decision Justice Andrews said that the Court could not compel the defendant to give Miss Abell a key to the outside door. "I think," he added, "that the plaintiff is entitled to an order requiring the defendant to permit her access to the house at all reasonable hours, and he should have the door opened promptly up to 12 o'clock midnight, whenever she rings the bell."

MANY TRIALS IN MATRIMONY.

Husband Who Had Fifth Wife and Wife with Fourth Husband Cannot Agree.

The truth of the ancient adage that marriage is a lottery was attested in a striking manner yesterday in the Essex Market Police Court, where the troubles of Elias Littledor, a tailor, of 169 Essex Street, and his wife, Fannie Littledor, of 72 Smith Street, Brooklyn, were given an airing.

The court proceedings began with an old-fashioned family row between husband and wife, during which each made strenuous efforts to get at each other's hair.

"Judge," said Court Interpreter Schwartz, in a discouraged voice, as he led the old couple up to the bar, "what do you think? This is the man's fifth wife and the woman's fourth husband. Their main trouble seems to be that they remind each other too much of their former partners—they are so different. There were so many things that they reminded each other of that they have concluded that they cannot live together. Now the wife wants support, and the husband says he is willing and anxious to give her $3 a week."

The Magistrate questioned them further, and found that they were determined to live apart. The husband, who was adorned with a long gray beard, which gave him a patriarchal appearance, declared that during his long and varied career in the field of matrimony, up to the time of his last venture, he had had complete success, and was always regarded as a model husband. His first four wives had consecutively, before they departed, blessed his name with their last breath.

The woman, when it came her turn, represented that, until she had tackled Littledor she had had unvaried success with husbands. Each of her other three husbands had departed this world with their respective heads on her arm. She intimated to the Court, through Schwartz, that her long periods of matrimonial tranquility had made her a trifle careless in choosing life partners, and in no other way could she account for having picked out Littledor as No. 4.

The husband was ordered to pay the $3 a week to his wife, and the old couple separated and went their several ways.

WOES OF A COSTA RICAN.

Accused of Absconding, He Protests His Innocence—Traveled as His Wife's Servant.

Lying ill in the Tombs, as a result of the sudden transition from the warm Costa Rican climate to the freezing temperature of the United States, Jose Antonio Martinez, a merchant planter of Puerto Limon, ignorant of the charge against him, is awaiting his arraignment in the Centre Street Court this afternoon.

Martinez was arrested as he landed, with his wife, "Josefa Fabuccio," from the steamer Athos Tuesday. His wife is at the Hotel America. Martinez traveled as his wife's servant.

Martinez is held as an absconder. He had with him drafts for $7,002 on London and Berlin banks; $527 in Mexican silver, and a number of Colombian gold coins. Martinez declared that the money was his and his brother's, and that he was on his way to Spain for the benefit of his wife's and his own health.

"I have been engaged for fourteen years in the cattle raising business between Costa Rica and Colombia," he said. "I left the Province of Chiriqui, Panama, for Costa Rica on Oct. 6. My wife, who has been sick for six months, and is not yet entirely recovered, accompanied me. We were going to Spain for our health. I have always conducted my business in a regular way, and I am really not guilty of having done wrong, or of even causing any suspicion of wrongdoing. My reputation is well established in Costa Rica, and has been for twenty years. My house in San Juan de Costa Rica has a good reputation, and I feel sure of my release."

R. S. Durant of Howe & Hummel, who is Martinez's lawyer, said that in view of the vagueness of Consul Gruder's cable, on which Martinez was detained, he did not know with what Martinez was charged. "He has debts amounting to about $2,000 in Costa Rica, and it may be that these creditors, thinking he has left the country for good, asked the American Consul to cause his detention as an absconding debtor. Martinez says he traveled as the servant of his wife in order to get a cheaper steamship rate."

THEFT TO REPAY KINDNESS.

Homeless Man, Relieved by Rev. Mr. Bostwick, Later Robbed the Church.

William Smith, homeless, went to Calvary Chapel, at 229 East Twenty-third Street, Tuesday, and told the Rev. Mr. Bostwick that he was cold and hungry. The minister took him into the chapel and gave him a suit of warm clothes. This kindness was requited by Smith, according to the testimony given in the Yorkville Police Court yesterday, by his returning at night and robbing the church.

A policeman saw Smith at 2 o'clock yesterday morning in front of the chapel with a bundle in his arms. He also had a brass baptismal ewer in his possession. He was likewise wearing a vestment belonging to the church. He was arrested for robbing the church.

The young men of the locality held a meeting in the chapel on Tuesday night, as is the custom. Smith entered and secreted himself in the upper portion of the chapel and was locked in. During the night he looted the clothes closet and then broke open a side door to get out.

Smith protested against the charge of burglary, maintaining that he had not broken into the chapel, but had broken out of it. He was held in $1,000 bail.

ADORATION OF THE SACRAMENT.

Perpetually Exposed Now in the Church of St. Jean Baptiste.

For the first time in the United States the perpetual adoration of the blessed sacrament was inaugurated yesterday morning in the Church of St. Jean Baptiste, East Seventy-sixth Street near Third Avenue. Pontifical mass was celebrated by Bishop Brondel of Montana and the sacrament removed from the tabernacle and exposed to view. Archbishop Corrigan officiated at the ceremonies of exposing the sacrament.

The church was crowded with a fashionable congregation, which included Miss Anne Leary, whose generosity brought about the inauguration of the new form of worship in this country; Miss Elizabeth Lumis, the Misses Delmonico, Mrs. Martin B. Brown, Mrs. John Vinton Dahlgren, and Mrs. Dr. Brosch.

At the conclusion of the services the priests and a large part of the congregation went to the basement of the church, where the relics of St. Anne are kept, and where worship before them was carried on. Later in the afternoon the visiting priests were banqueted by their local brethren.

CITY PURIFICATION WORK

Labor Representation on the Committee of Fifteen Approved.

Reports of Political Purposes Denied by Mr. Baldwin—The Committee of One Hundred.

The four vacancies in the Committee of Fifteen, which were created by declinations to serve, were not filled yesterday, and the Sub-Committee of Five had not, it was stated on authority, decided on any one in the place of those who failed to qualify. No arrangement had been made last night for the second meeting of the main committee.

William H. Baldwin said that while the sub-committee might have four men in view to bring the committee up to its quota, it would be unfair to name them, as they might decline, and a wrong construction might be put on this. In regard to the political character of the committee, Mr. Baldwin said he was correctly quoted as follows:

I don't know any one on the committee who wants to make it a campaign body and go into the Mayoralty election. That assuredly is not what I am in it for. I have been in this movement for the eradication of vice for a year, and this committee has been appointed for a similar purpose, and not for a political end.

Bishop Potter had nothing to do with its formation; the organizing of other leaders for political action had nothing to do with it; the appointment of the committee happened at the same time—a mere coincidence, that's all. What we shall do may well have political effect, but direct political action is the last thing to enter our minds.

It was regarded as probable that one of the vacancies will be filled by a man closely identified with or acceptable to organized labor. This action is favored by Charles Stewart Smith. Mr. Smith added that he fully indorsed all that Bishop Potter has said on the subject.

Interest was manifested yesterday in the Committee of One Hundred, which opened headquarters in Room 70 at the Bible House. Its membership includes Henry George, the Rev. Dr. W. D. P. Bliss, Charles F. Adams, John S. Crosby, Dr. R. Heber Newton, and John Ford, and it aims to establish a federation to act on social and civic problems. One of its circulars says that the movement is not in opposition to the Committee of Fifteen, but to consider definite measures needed for civic and social betterment, press them before legislative bodies, and demand the enforcement of such as may be legalized. A call has been sent out to trade and labor unions and reform societies.

A public manifestation of the movement will be at the dollar dinner at the Grand Central Palace on New Year's eve, when Edwin Markham will read an original poem.

WORSE THAN SHYLOCK.

Boylan Demanded $5 for Return of a Trick Bird Which Had Escaped.

"You are an Irish Shylock, and the original Shylock would pale in contrast with you," said Magistrate Brann, addressing Michael Boylan, a beer bottler of 352 East Seventy-sixth Street, who had been brought before him yesterday morning.

Mrs. C. F. Meller, a handsome woman, elegantly dressed, of 1,232 Madison Avenue, was the complainant. She had a trick canary bird, a wedding present from her husband, which was allowed to fly at will about the room. One day last week it flew out of an open window and fell into the areaway, where Boyle picked it up, carried it home with him, and put it in a cage.

Mrs. Meller offered him $1 for the cage he had bought, and $1 additional for his trouble. Boylan held out for $5. Magistrate Brann ordered him to return the bird to its owner.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM LEAGUE.

Two Public Meetings in Carnegie Lyceum and a Banquet.

The twentieth annual meeting of the National Civil Service Reform League opens to-day in the house of the City Club, in West Thirty-fourth Street. Besides the general sessions at the club there will be two public meetings at the Carnegie Lyceum and a banquet at the Hotel Savoy.

At the banquet Bishop Potter, Vice President of the league, will preside, and the speakers and guests will include Gov. Roosevelt, ex-Attorney General Wayne MacVeagh, Oscar S. Straus, George L. Rives, Wheeler H. Peckham, Charles J. Bonaparte, F. H. Gillette of Massachusetts, and Richard Henry Dana of Boston.

At Carnegie Hall to-night Carl Schurz will preside, and among the speakers will be Mr. Bonaparte, William Dudley Foulke of Indiana, and the Rev. Dr. Rainsford.

THE "TERROR OF THE ORANGES."

Richardson Used Both Pistol and Razor When Making a Friendly Call.

William Richardson, colored, better known as the "Terror of the Oranges," left his home in Orange, N. J., Tuesday afternoon to make a call on William Sommers, at 41 Maxwell Place, Jersey City. As a precaution he took along his razor and pistol.

Within a few moments after he reached Sommers's house Richardson felt impelled to bring both his weapons into play. He began by shooting Sommers in the arm. He then brought his razor into action, and slashed the arm of Pleasant Brown, a boarder, who had become mixed up in the unpleasantness. Richardson then took a shot at Mrs. Sommers, missed her, and hurried back to his home in Orange, where he was arrested late Tuesday night.

Richardson was brought back to Jersey City yesterday morning for trial. There is a warrant against him for assault committed in Newark a few days ago.

Lewis C. Van Riper Surrenders.

Lewis C. Van Riper, who, with John B. McKenzie, conducted a discretionary brokerage business at 11 Broadway, and who has been sought by the police since the arrest of C. W. Morgan, surrendered himself to Magistrate Zeller in the latter's office yesterday. Van Riper is said to have composed and sent broadcast circulars advising prospective investors to place their money with C. W. Morgan & Co. Van Riper was held in $5,000 bail for examination with Morgan and McKenzie yesterday afternoon in Jefferson Market Court. Bail was furnished by Joseph A. Flynn of 157 West Seventy-seventh Street.

Condition of Lieut. Hobson.

At the Presbyterian Hospital it was said last night that Lieut. Hobson was improving.

The addition of water, still or carbonated, to "Canadian Club" Whisky does not affect the delightful flavour and unmistakable aroma peculiar to it, no matter how great the dilution. For this reason a High Ball made with "Canadian Club" is a delightful and satisfying drink.

Every bottle bears over the capsule an official stamp of the Canadian Government guaranteeing age and genuineness.

ELECTRIC CARS HEATED.

President Vreeland Says He Doesn't Know Why Current Was Not Turned on Sooner.

After three days of cold weather the Metropolitan Street Railway Company yesterday began to heat the cars on all its electric lines. The Broadway cable cars remained unheated. President Vreeland said in explanation that the heaters in the cable cars were of a peculiar kind. "There is a system of pipes running through each car," said he, "and these pipes are filled with a specially prepared water which circulates through the pipes and is heated by a stove in the car. If we once fill these pipes we have to continue keeping the water hot to prevent it from freezing in the pipes. If we started this heating now the cars would be overheated as soon as a warm spell would come along. Therefore we have to wait until the weather is more settled before we can safely commence to use those heaters."

Asked why the electric cars had not been heated during the first days of the cold spell, although in their case the heat could be turned on and off by a switch in the power house, President Vreeland said he did not know. Probably the Superintendents at the power houses had not thought it cold enough. When he was asked whether there was not a rule of the Board of Health prescribing at what temperature cars must be heated, President Vreeland said: "There is such a regulation, but I don't know exactly what temperature is prescribed at which cars must be heated. The rule is quite complex, but I believe the temperature mentioned is somewhere around 45."

According to the reports of the Weather Bureau the temperature has been continuously below 32, the freezing point, since 6 P. M. on Sunday last.

ZEIMER PLACED ON TRIAL.

May Thompson Testifies Regarding a Fraudulent Divorce Case in Which She Acted as Co-respondent.

Henry Zeimer, who, with W. Waldo Maison, as alleged, made a business of procuring divorces upon false testimony, was placed on trial yesterday before Recorder Goff, in General Sessions, charged with subornation of perjury in the suit for divorce of Mrs. Byrde G. Herrick against William C. Herrick.

The divorce decree in this case was obtained upon the evidence of May Thompson, who swore upon the stand yesterday that Zeimer had told her that she was to act as co-respondent. Miss Thompson frequently smiled at the jury and Assistant District Attorney Gordon, who is prosecuting the case. Zeimer assisted Amos C. Evans, his counsel, in the examination of the witnesses.

Assistant District Attorney Gordon said in opening that the State would endeavor to prove that Zeimer, in November last, induced May Thompson to swear that she had lived with Herrick at 250 West Forty-third Street for several months, when in reality she had never seen Herrick. Mr. Gordon also said that he would show that Miss Thompson appeared as co-respondent in other cases. This statement was objected to by Zeimer's counsel and was stricken from the record.

Miss Thompson stated that she lived at 152 East Twentieth Street.

"What do you do for a living?" asked Mr. Gordon.

"I have done clerical work, sewing, and detective work," was the reply, with a smile.

"Did you ever see Zeimer in the offices of Royal & Maison, at 230 Broadway?"

"Often. But I saw Maison oftenest. I was employed there as stenographer."

"Did you ever see Royal?"

"Never."

"What talk did you have with Zeimer on the 8th of November, the day you testified before Referee Hubbard in the Herrick case?"

"Zeimer told me that I was to appear in the Herrick case as co-respondent. He said that I was to say that I had lived with Herrick in a flat in Forty-third Street and that I knew him well, and I asked him what would happen if it was discovered that this was untrue. He said that the referees were always looking out for their money, and that the case would just be thrown out of court and that would be all."

At this point court adjourned.

SUSPECTED WIFE A SUICIDE.

Husband Threatened Divorce Suit After Finding Man in Her Room.

Special to The New York Times.

PORT JERVIS, N. Y., Dec. 12.—Early this morning Mrs. Flora Wickham terminated her unhappy married life of only two years' duration by deliberately shooting herself with a 32-calibre revolver. The dead woman's husband, J. Emmet Wickham, is the owner of a large business block in this village, on the top floor of which he dwelt. For the past few months they had practically lived apart, each occupying a separate room and dining at a hotel at different times. The cause is said to be Mr. Wickham's familiarity with another woman of this village, which he described as undue jealousy on the part of his wife.

About 9:30 o'clock last evening Mr. Wickham's suspicions were aroused by the darkness in his wife's room. He inserted a key in the lock, but it refused to turn. Rapping the door lightly, he was admitted by his wife, and found in the room an employe of the Erie Railroad, an acquaintance of Mrs. Wickham of several years' standing. An altercation occurred, and Mr. Wickham summoned his attorney, O. P. Howell, with the idea of inaugurating a divorce suit at once.

Mr. Wickham then retired, after which his wife wrote a letter to her father, James Mollineux of Milford, Penn., imploring his forgiveness, and stating as the reason of her rash act that she could not bear the disgrace of a divorce suit. About 4 o'clock this morning the report of a revolver awakened Mr. Wickham, and hastily entering his wife's room, he saw her seated in a large rocker with a revolver in her right hand. A bullet hole was in her right temple and a pool of blood on the carpeted floor. Coroner Joseph Harding was called and took charge of the body.

For twenty years previous to their marriage Mrs. Wickham was employed at the Fowler and Delaware Houses, which Mr. Wickham then conducted. She was thirty-nine years of age.

Lieut. Leonard M. Cox, assistant to Chief Engineer P. C. Asserson at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, has been ordered to Guam to superintend the work of building the new naval station to be established there. The Navy Department, it is said, will spend about $1,000,000 on the work. Lieut. Cox, who lives in Brooklyn, will, it is thought, be detached from the local yard on Jan. 1 and given a month's leave of absence before leaving for Guam.

TANK HAD POISONOUS GAS.

It Was Sold to Miss Taintor for Oxygen and Made Her an Invalid.

Frances Russell Taintor, daughter of H. F. Taintor, President of the Taintor Manufacturing Company, has commenced an action in the Supreme Court against the Charles Besseler Company to recover $7,500 damages for injuries received in a peculiar way.

Miss Taintor was suffering from pneumonia last Summer and went to the Lake Placid Club, in the Adirondacks, for her health. Her physician prescribed the inhalation of oxygen gas as one remedy for her. She purchased a tank, No. 4,661, of supposed oxygen from a druggist at the lake and used a portion of the gas. She alleges that it was really a combination of chlorine gas with oxide of nitrogen gas, a combination "by which she was permanently injured and her life put in jeopardy." She is now an invalid in her apartments at the Murray Hill Hotel.

In her complaint Miss Taintor declares that the Charles Besseler Company put up and sold tank No. 4,661.

The defendant's counsel, Richard T. Greene, gives an outline of the defense. He declares that the tank was not sealed up, and that it was possible for the tank to have been tampered with, or even emptied and then refilled.

TRANSPORT MEN DISMISSED.

Eight Officials and Clerks Dropped by Order of Quartermaster General.

There has been a "shakeup" locally in the Army Transport Service, and eight officials and clerks at the Government pier, foot of Pacific Street, Brooklyn, have been dismissed. The men dismissed were dropped from the service by an order to Major C. A. Devol from Quartermaster Gen. M. J. Luddington.

At the Government pier in Brooklyn yesterday afternoon it was said that the officials dismissed were Marine Superintendent Ira Harris, Supervising Engineer Gardner M. Simms, Second Engineer J. A. Scott, Deputy Chief Stevedore J. J. Plunkett, and four clerks. Superintendent Harris and Engineer Simms each received a salary of $4,000 a year.

The reason assigned for the dismissals is that the work on the transport Kilpatrick having been completed and that vessel, with the Buford, having been transferred to the Pacific fleet, there was a consequent reduction in the volume of business to be transacted in this port. The men dropped from the service were selected for dismissal, it is said, because they drew the largest salaries.

Shipping men were of the opinion that the dismissals indicated that the Government contemplated a total or partial suspension of the transport service between this port and Cuba and Porto Rico. Ship owners would be pleased if the West Indian transport service was done away with altogether. It is claimed that it has been an easy matter to obtain passage on the transports for the islands, at a cost little exceeding the cost of meals on the ships. Besides this, a great deal of freight is carried by the transports.

Capt. Ira Harris is an Annapolis man and served for some years in the navy. He resigned but joined the volunteer branch of the service at the outbreak of the Spanish war.

He came to America in the capacity of a private teacher.

He was appointed tutor at Columbia in 1882. In 1884 he went to Harvard as an assistant professor, but seven years later he returned to Columbia to become the head of the French Department.

Civil Service Protects Fire Marshals.

Justice McAdam and a jury in the Supreme Court yesterday decided that Robert A. Breckinridge, who was dismissed from his place as Fire Marshal on the grounds that his position was abolished, was protected by civil service rules. If the verdict is confirmed, Breckinridge will demand his reinstatement. A Tammany man was appointed in his place the day after his dismissal.

The Wanamaker Store The Wanamaker Store The Wanamaker Store

The GREAT ANSWERER of Christmas Questions

THE always present problem is "What Shall It Be?" Tired Brains have worried over it. Days of hunting hither and thither have failed to answer it. The joy of giving is marred by the tiresome labor of seeking and finding nothing to satisfy. For many years the brains of Wanamaker's experts have been solving this problem—seeking, gathering, displaying the broadest variety of the world's choicest goods that is displayed under any one roof in the world. And this is not a hodge-podge of hurried-together Christmas plunder. It is the culmination of a year's planning by two score complete and permanent stores—each one with its own individual chief who is personally responsible for having the best stock of his particular goods that the markets of the world can supply. For instance:

The Wanamaker Book Store is not matched by any exclusive book store in the world.

The Piano Store offers the Chickering—the world's finest piano—and such a variety besides as is not shown in any other piano store.

Handkerchiefs—greatest variety of pure linen handkerchiefs that comes to America.

Oriental Rugs—the broadest, choicest, most distinctive and artistic collection to be found anywhere.

But the story cannot be told in detail.

Here under one roof all holiday shopping can be done in the most satisfying way. Most conveniently, most promptly, most economically.

After seeing Wanamaker's display, you know that the best has been seen; and after buying here you know that the lowest price for equal goods has been paid.

Lest you forget how broad is the variety of goods here to choose from, we give this hint of the lines that offer distinctly appropriate holiday gift-things:

Indian Baskets

Indian basket makers are growing extinct. The new generation does not have the patience for the tedious work; and paleface invention has supplied tin vessels for many purposes that baskets were woven to serve. Those that are made are being gathered into curio collections; and the product of the old squaws who still know the art is bought almost as quickly as made.

We have obtained, under favorable conditions, a collection of twenty-seven baskets made by the squaws of the fierce Apache tribe. So tightly are the willow fibres woven that the baskets are water-tight. The designs and decorations are typical of the tribe by which they are made.

Curio dealers are getting prices up to $500 for baskets of no more artistic or historical value than some in this present collection. An opportunity such as this is rare.

They serve decorative purposes in cosy corners and studios as well as being curios. An artistic friend will appreciate such a holiday gift. Prices, $2 to $60.

WASHINGTON CENTENNIAL

Imposing Ceremonies at the National Capital.

THE PRESIDENT TAKES PART

Military Parade and Review at the Capitol—Many Governors Present—Senator Hoar's Speech.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—With imposing ceremonies the National capital to-day celebrated the centennial anniversary of the founding of the seat of the Federal Government in Washington. The exercises combined a military parade, a review by the President from the east front of the Capitol, and orations in the hall of the House of Representatives, where a brilliant audience was assembled. By act of Congress the day was made a National holiday in the District of Columbia, the Government departments were closed, business was suspended, and the whole city gave itself over to celebrating the capital's natal day.

President McKinley and the members of his Cabinet took prominent part in all the exercises, and with them were the chief executives of a large number of the States and Territories of the Union, the Senators and Representatives in Congress, the judiciary of the United States Supreme Court, the Ambassadors and Ministers from foreign courts, the heads of the army and navy, and a great outpouring of the people.

Although Washington is the scene of many celebrations, it is seldom that one has occurred here of greater brilliancy in its outdoor features or of more impressiveness in its ceremonial exercises at the Capitol and at the White House. Early in the day the President received the Governors of States and Territories at the White House, and the model for a new and enlarged White House to commemorate to-day's exercises was unveiled with suitable addresses. At 1 o'clock the President was escorted to the Capitol, where he reviewed a parade headed by Lieut. Gen. Miles and including the full military strength of the capital, regulars and militia.

The ceremonies at the Capitol began at 3:30 P. M. and included addresses by Senators Daniel of Virginia and McComas of Maryland; Representatives Payne of New York and Richardson of Tennessee, and a historic oration by Senator Hoar of Massachusetts. A reception by the President to the Governors of States at the Corcoran Art Gallery to-night closed the festivities.

RECEPTION AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

The exercises of the day began at 10:30 o'clock with a reception at the Executive Mansion, given by the President to the Governors of the States and Territories, their ladies, and the members of their staff. The East Room, the Red, Green, and Blue Parlors, the corridors and staircases, had been tastefully decorated with flowers and foliage plants in great numbers and in the flood of electric light presented a spectacle of rare beauty. The distinguished guests began to arrive at the mansion some time before 10 o'clock and half an hour later all of the large public rooms were comfortably filled, the brilliant military uniforms of the staff officers adding much to the spectacular effect of the scene.

As the President and party entered the west corridor, the Marine Band Orchestra, in dress uniform, struck up "Hail to the Chief." Gov. Roosevelt of New York, who had been spending an hour with the President in the library on the second floor, came down a few minutes later and joined the other Governors in the Red Parlor. As the orchestra struck up the inspiring strains of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," the reception began, the preparations being made by Col. Bingham, United States Army. Following is a list of the Governors present.

G. W. Atkinson, West Virginia; W. D. Bloxham, Florida, (represented by Col. F. Q. Brown;) C. M. Barnes, Oklahoma; D. W. Jones, Arkansas; J. A. Mount, Indiana; S. Thomas, Colorado; E. W. Tunnell, Delaware; L. M. Shaw, Iowa; Llewellyn Powers, Maine; F. W. Rollins, New Hampshire; F. M. Voorhees, New Jersey; J. H. Tyler, Virginia; M. A. Otero, New Mexico; F. Steunenberg, Idaho; William A. Stone, Pennsylvania; E. Scofield, Wisconsin; D. L. Russell, North Carolina; Theodore Roosevelt, New York; A. E. Lee, South Dakota; N. O. Murphy, Arizona; William Gregory, Rhode Island; J. W. Smith, Maryland; W. M. Crane, Massachusetts; J. L. Heard, Louisiana. Gov. Stephens of Missouri was represented by Governor-elect Dockery and the Lieutenant Governor. Gov. Stickney of Vermont was represented by Adjt. Gen. W. H. Gilmore.

Following the reception, Col. Bingham exhibited his model of the proposed enlargement of the Executive Mansion and explained its details. The plan, he said, consists, in a word, of buildings about the size of the present house, one on the east side and one on the west side of the White House grounds, connected to the present mansion by curved wings—the quadrangle being completed by rebuilding the conservatories at the south end of the grounds.

H. B. F. MacFarland, President of the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia, then delivered an address on "The Development of the District During the Century 1800-1900." Gov. Shaw of Iowa closed the speechmaking at the White House with an address on "The Development of the States During the Nineteenth Century."

The addresses were concluded at about 11:40 o'clock, when the President and the members of the Cabinet retired to the state dining room, where luncheon was served to the invited guests. Among those present were the members of the United States Supreme Court, the Governors of the States, their ladies, and their Chiefs of Staff; the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate; the District committees of Congress, the Washington Historical Society, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, members of the American Institute of Architects, and a large number of distinguished citizens of the District.

THE PRESIDENT HEADS THE PARADE

The great public spectacle of the day was the parade and escort of the President from the White House to the east front of the Capitol, where the President reviewed the marching thousands. At the head of the parade rode Lieut. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, Chief Marshal, in full uniform. His staff included many prominent officers, mounted and in uniform, presenting a brilliant appearance.

Vying with the Presidential party in the interest excited was the notable procession of Governors of the States and Territories, with their staffs and military escorts. This gave a touch of individual interest to the people from many States, and the Chief Executives were warmly welcomed all along the line of march. The Governors marched in the order of the admission of the States to the Union, Gov. Tunnell of Delaware coming first.

The head of the escort reached the Capitol about 2 o'clock. As it moved along Pennsylvania Avenue there was tremendous cheering. The Presidential party was a centre of attention. The President sat in an open victoria, smiling and lifting his hat to the salvos along the line. With him sat Senator Hale, while the Cabinet officers followed in carriages and shared in the ovations.

The President alighted at the Senate wing and was greeted by waiting committees. The reviewing stand was resplendent in the National colors, in the midst of which rose an artistic stand provided for the President. He occupied a large leathern chair, the members of the Cabinet and Governors sitting at either side in tiers of chairs.

As the parade swung into the plaza a mighty cheer went up, and as the various divisions of the procession passed the reviewing stand the regulation salute to the President was given and returned.

The first salutes were exchanged between the President and Lieut. Gen. Miles, the latter giving a sweep of his sword and looking toward the President, who raised his hat. Back of Gen. Miles came a flag escort bearing a tattered American flag which had seen service in the Spanish war. The President took off his hat and stood uncovered as the flag passed. Again each time "Old Glory" passed the President stood with bare head, while the acknowledgment to the various commanding officers was the conventional salute.

Just after passing the reviewing stand Gen. Miles had a slight mishap, a break in his horse's saddle girths giving him a fall. The saddle girth suddenly parted, permitting the saddle to turn on the animal, and Gen. Miles was seen to fall sidewise. The horse did not plunge, and an officer sprang forward. Gen. Miles saved himself from being thrown with force, and suffered nothing save the inconvenience and annoyance of the accident.

EXERCISES IN THE CAPITOL.

After the parade came imposing exercises in the hall of the House of Representatives, where gathered as distinguished a company as its walls had ever held. As a spectacle nothing could have been more imposing or impressive. The bright sun streaming through the ground glass ceiling, on which were the arms of several States, flooded the hall with light, and heightened the effect of the gowns of the ladies in the galleries, the glistening uniforms on the floor, and the elaborate scheme of decoration which submerged the hall in a sea of color. Never before in the history of the House has the staid old legislative hall, with its severe gold and white galleries and its plain marble rostrum, been decorated to anything like the extent it was to-day. A company of Jackies from the Government yacht Dolphin had literally swathed the hall in flags. The fronts of the galleries were hidden by them, the brass railings which marked off the lobbies were festooned with them, and the Speaker's marble rostrum was covered with them. Not more than half were American flages, and this fact was at first rather startling until the full beauty of the color scheme dawned upon the spectators. From the galleries every other flag was that of a foreign country.

Next the executive gallery on the right was the imperial black, white, and red of Germany. The crested flag of Austria-Hungary, the tri-color of France, the royal ensign of Russia, the green, white and red of Mexico, and even the red and yellow of Spain were there. But below, circling the hall, and walling in the distinguished assemblage, were the glorious buff and blue under which the Continental Army of Washington had achieved the independence of the American Republic, while fronting the audience back of the Speaker's desk hung the beautiful silk flag of the Republic, and from it, stretching away on either side over the paintings of Lafayette and Washington, blazed the Stars and Stripes. The flags of the Continental Army, many of which were old and tattered, had been brought from the War Department for the occasion.

The President and members of the Cabinet were the last to enter the hall. They were escorted to the chairs reserved for them by President McFarland of the District Commissioners. Meantime the speakers of the occasion had taken places facing the assemblage at the desk immediately below the presiding officers. When all had been seated, Speaker Henderson called the gathering to order and briefly explained the purpose of the celebration.

Everybody rose and stood with bowed head while Dr. Milburn, the blind chaplain of the Senate, offered an impressive invocation in his wonderfully rich and vibrant voice. The speaker then turned the gavel over to Senator Frye, who called the joint assemblage to order and introduced Mr. Richardson of Tennessee, the minority leader of the House, who delivered the opening address on the transfer of the seat of Government from Philadelphia.

In concluding, Mr. Richardson quoted the profoundly impressive invocation to the future prosperity of Washington and the capital which President Adams uttered in his message to the first Congress which assembled in this city, as follows:

May this territory be the residence of happiness. In this city may that piety and virtue, that wisdom and magnanimity, that constancy and self-government which adorned the great character whose name it bears be forever held in veneration. Here and throughout our country may simple manners, pure morals, and true religion flourish.

The address of Mr. Payne of New York, the floor leader of the majority in the House on "The Establishment of the Seat of Government in the District of Columbia," received marked attention. Senator McComas of Maryland followed with an address on the "History of the First Century of the National Capital." It also was well received.

The fervid eloquence of Senator Daniel, who spoke on the "Future of the United States and its Capital," frequently aroused the assemblage to applause. Senator Hoar of Massachusetts concluded the exercises with a finished and scholarly historical oration.

SENATOR HOAR'S ADDRESS.

In opening, Senator Hoar spoke impressively of the antiquity of the European capitals compared with the youth of that of the American Republic. London, he said, had been a centre of civilization for more than 1,200 years; Paris the seat of Government for thirteen centuries; Berlin for nearly four, and Vienna for seven centuries.

"And yet," said he, "there are few places that can show for any one century more than three products of architecture that equal the Capitol, the Washington Monument, and the Congressional Library. If we can add to the glory of Washington three such structures only for each coming century, we need not be ashamed of comparison with any foreign city when Washington shall have reached the same age. If God spare the Republic, what may we not hope for Washington?

"These three structures, unrivaled as they are, each for its respective class, are more interesting still for what they typify. The monument to the Father of the Country is but a simple shaft. It marks a narrow spot. It commemorates a single human character. But the spot it marks, as was said, Mr. Speaker, by one of the most accomplished men who ever sat in your chair, 'is a prime meridian.' The prime meridian of universal longitude on sea or land may be at Greenwich or at Paris or where you will. But the prime meridian of pure exalted human character will be marked forever by yonder obelisk. Integrity and patriotism are to be measured by nearness to it or departure from it. The whole city is in a larger sense a Washington monument. It were better that the great name should pass forever into oblivion and be forgotten unless the walls of this building where we are assembled, dedicated to legislation and to justice, also bear honorable witness to the character and influence of him who laid its corner-stone."

With sweeping strokes Senator Hoar then proceeded to paint the great achievements of the country, the glories which had crowned it, the ordeals through which it had passed, the growth of literature, art, and science which had advanced with the years, and concluded as follows:

"The men who wrought this great work are gone—most of them. A few of their companions and coadjutors survive to behold the dawn of the new century and give their counsel to the people who are to carry on its work, as a few of the companions of Washington beheld the beginning of this, and inaugurated its great accomplishment on the principles of the revolution. Their work also is about done. They seem to survive for a brief period only that the new century may clasp hands with the old, and that they may bring to the future the benediction of the past."

The exercises were concluded at 6:15 P. M. After dissolving the joint session, Senator Frye turned the gavel over to Speaker Henderson and the House immediately adjourned.

The concluding feature of the celebration was a reception to-night at the Corcoran Art Gallery from 8 to 11 o'clock, attended by the President and several members of his Cabinet. Governors of the various States and their staffs who participated in the day's events, and a large contingent of official and resident society.

President McKinley, accompanied by Secretaries Wilson and Hitchcock and Private Secretary Cortelyou, arrived about 9:30 o'clock. They were met at the door by the Reception Committee, and were escorted to the balcony, where the President sat for fifteen minutes in conversation with the Chairman of the Reception Committee, watching the moving throng below. Mr. McKinley was given a hearty reception by the crowd.

CHILD DROWNED IN A TUB.

Mother Was Sleeping in an Adjoining Room at the Time.

George Van Blocon, ten months old, living with his parents at 2,476 Eighth Avenue, was drowned yesterday afternoon by falling into a tub of hot water. The child's mother had been washing all day, and at 5 o'clock left a tub of hot water on the kitchen floor while she went to have a sleep in an adjoining room. She left the child in charge of his seven-year-old brother, Paul.

Paul was playing about a rocking chair when the chair accidentally tipped to one side, throwing the baby into the water. Paul ran into the room where his mother was sleeping and awakened her. She rushed into the kitchen, but the child was already dead when pulled out of the water.

Tenement House Commission.

The Tenement House Commission held an executive session last night in the assembly hall of the United Charities Building, Twenty-second Street and Fourth Avenue. Chairman De Forrest said that there was nothing to be given to the public except that the commission had held its last public session, and will meet in private in the future. He said that at these future executive sessions the commission would consider the mass of information it has gathered and seek a conclusion to be presented to the Legislature in January.

Dies Suddenly on Broadway.

A seedy looking man strolled out of a clothing store at Broadway and Canal Street yesterday afternoon, and as he reached the sidewalk he fell suddenly to the ground. He was dead when Policeman Crum, who saw him fall, got to him. He had only 99 cents in his pocket, and no papers by which he could be identified. He was apparently about forty years old, had brown hair and mustache, and blue eyes.

ATTORNEY BECK'S TELLING REPARTEE

Puns on Bishop Potter and Andrew Carnegie at a Dinner.

Jolly Meeting of the Pennsylvania Society—Dr. Paxton Says Money Making Is a Virtue—Mr. Carnegie Talks.

Nearly 300 loyal sons of Pennsylvania sat at table at the Waldorf-Astoria last evening for the second annual dinner of the Pennsylvania Society of this city. The New Yorkers were reinforced by quite a number of the residents of Philadelphia, who came over to add to the cheer of the occasion. The Presidents of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, Huguenot Society, Maryland Society, Canadian Society, St. George Society, New England Society, St. Nicholas Society, Ohio Society, St. David's Society, Pennsylvania German Society, Holland Society, Southern Society, and the Deputy Commander of the Mayflower Descendants were guests.

Bishop Potter, President of the Pennsylvania Society, presided, and on either side of him were James N. Beck, Assistant Attorney General of the United States; James A. Beaver, ex-Governor of Pennsylvania; Andrew Carnegie, Judge Samuel W. Pennypacker of Philadelphia, the Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady of Philadelphia, the Rev. Dr. John R. Paxton of this city, and the Presidents of the various societies. After the speaking had commenced, Winston Churchill, M. P., who lectured at the hotel during the evening, and his manager, Major Pond, came in.

Bishop Potter recalled his father's long service as a Bishop in the State, and said that, though he himself had been born in Schenectady, he had lived in Pennsylvania, and the associations were dear to him. The Bishop called for a toast to the President of the United States, which was drunk standing. The orchestra played "America," and all joined in, adding out in great volume, sang a verse of the old hymn.

In introducing Mr. Beck, Bishop Potter caused a laugh by referring to his long training as a speaker in the convivial halls of oratory. "Beck came with nothing to say," added Bishop Potter, "and spent some time in Philadelphia in learning how not to say it."

Mr. Beck said there was but one occasion in Biblical history that he could recall in which a lawyer had gotten the best of a clergyman. That was the time, he said, when Elijah, the law giver, had a little conflict with Balaam. "But I'm only a potter's vessel [laughter] and liable to be broken to pieces in the encounter. If I'm here as a victim to be thrown to the lions I can only say that such a victim is never in a position to be broken after such an encounter."

Here Mr. Carnegie, who was sitting next to Mr. Beck, made a reference to the Prophet Daniel. Quickly turning to him, Mr. Beck remarked: "As Mr. Carnegie is such an eminent authority on profits I'll not contradict him. [Laughter.] The only difference between myself and Mr. Carnegie is that he hopes I'm poor and I am certain that I am poor."

Mr. Beck presently touched on politics and went on to say that Philadelphians are not so slow in that game as New Yorkers seem to think. He said that a man who had served the party most service went to Gov. Beaver and asked for a position as janitor in the State House. The Governor said to him: "You are an excellent man, but the position is filled." "The politician, very disconsolate," said Mr. Beck, "wandered along the banks of the Susquehanna. He saw a body brought from the water, and to his surprise he saw that it was that of the man who had been appointed to the place that he wanted. He did not lose any time, but ran to the Governor and said he wanted the place. The Governor replied blandly, 'There is no vacancy.' 'But,' says the applicant, 'I saw that man taken out of the water.' 'Yes,' replied Gov. Beaver; 'I have just appointed the man who saw him fall in.'

When the laugh had subsided Mr. Beck remarked:

"So you in New York can teach us nothing in new in politics."

Speaking directly on his toast, "The United States," Mr. Beck contrasted the difference in power of this country between eighty-five years ago, when the British burned Washington, and the present day. He said that eighty-five years ago, when the Government wanted $5,000,000, it was obliged then to offer a bonus of 30 per cent. and guarantee 7 per cent. interest additional.

"Nobody had enough faith in the Government at that time," said Mr. Beck, "to give it the money which it had to have, and the offer went begging until a Philadelphia banker, who, I am sure, did not have that amount himself, stepped forward and took the whole five million."

The contrast was most striking, he said, between then and now, when the United States is loaning money abroad and New York is rapidly becoming the financial centre of the world. Later on the speaker said that at the Bench and Bar dinner in London, at which he was present, the Attorney General told him that it was a most fortunate event for England that the United States severed herself from the mother country.

Andrew Carnegie said in part: "We hear of the threatened dethronement of Pennsylvania from the empire position as a manufacturing State. The seat of empire is to move South, or it is to move West, but so far as the speaker sees, there is no danger of removal. Several regions are 'going to be' the seats of steel manufacture. This reminds me of the story of the old Pittsburg gentleman fond of speeding his trotter, who was finally dusted by some of the younger generation.

"He slipped away secretly to Kentucky to get a horse that would restore his supremacy. He was shown over a long string of high-bred horses of the past, with their records, then over an equally long string of their progeny, and regaled by tales of what they were going to do. It was a warm day, and the old gentleman stopped and, wiping his forehead, said: 'You have shown me the 'have dones' and you have shown me the 'going to do's,' but what I am here for is 'an iser.' Pennsylvania is the iser.

"In one respect I have been disappointed about Pennsylvania. She was at the beginning of the Republic the Empire State, but lost that title and was far behind New York until the last few decades, when she began gaining, and has gained every decade steadily upon New York.

"It is sad, Mr. Chairman, to see how immaculate virtue goes unrewarded in this wicked world! In political matters there is no State suffers so much from this cause, none is so immaculate, so splendidly, purely virtuous as our own State of Pennsylvania. The politicians may have doubts of New York, doubts of Indiana, even doubts of Ohio, but they know that nothing can tempt Pennsylvania from the true faith, and, knowing that she will do right, they ignore all her claims.

When Mr. Carnegie had concluded, Bishop Potter introduced Winston Churchill. Mr. Churchill said: "I have strong ties which bind me to America. My grandfather, Leonard Jerome, was an honored citizen of your city, and my mother was born and raised here.

"The idea of an alliance between England and the United States is outside the realm of practical politics. What we should look to is a closer friendship. There is now existing between the two countries a broad understanding of good fellowship which the citizens of each country should do all in their power to develop.

"There are two points in which England and the United States show their common blood. One is the prejudice that exists in both countries for hitting a man in the front. Now, philosophically considered, there is no reason why you should not hit a man with whom you are at war at any point which comes between you. But Anglo-Saxons do not look at it that way.

"Another strong point of resemblance is that we both wash. The educated American, like the educated Englishman, has a fondness for plunging his body into water which is not characteristic of any other white race. We are, in truth, divided by an ocean of salt water, but we are united by an ocean of soap and water.

"A cleanly and cleansing force—that is what England and America should be. It is for them to pour through civilization a stream of cool, clear water of good sense and natural, honest, progressive feeling.

"We English have our difficulties and you have yours, but the Anglo-Saxon character, stubborn and unflinching, will wear down all difficulties, and by its influence on civilization will increase the happiness of the world."

The Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady followed Mr. Churchill. He said that Philadelphia did not appreciate her great men, which was the reason so many of them came to New York.

Dr. John R. Paxton made the concluding address. In speaking of what Pennsylvanians had accomplished Dr. Paxton said Mr. Carnegie had built more monuments to his philanthropy than had been erected to the glory of Washington. In explaining why so many Pennsylvanians had come to New York Dr. Paxton said:

"Most of us came here to make more money. In this age money talks—money is 'it.' It is not strange that it should be so. We talk about money, we praise the man who has plenty of it, write about him, and print his picture in the papers. What everybody praises everybody wants. Each age is summum bonum. That of our age is money. If John D. Rockefeller had lived in the age when asceticism was the fad he would have been the greatest hermit of his time, but, living in our age, he is the greatest money maker.

"The pursuit of money is not so bad as some make out. No man is ever more innocently employed than when making money honestly. The making of money, unlike other passions, causes no remorse. Making money is a clean habit. It promotes longevity. All misers live long. You can't kill them. The avaricious generally die of dry rot."

Turning to Bishop Potter, Dr. Paxton said: "The making of money is not so bad, Bishop. What is the underlying cause of vice on the east side? Poverty. Bishop Potter, our brother, has undertaken a crusade against east side vice. We must rally to his side and help him purify New York. We must see to it that virtue can walk the streets of our city unmolested."

Other speeches were made by ex-Gov. Beaver, who spoke on "The State of Pennsylvania," and Judge Pennypacker on "Pennsylvania Germans."

DISTRICT WORKERS HONORED.

Lincoln League Gives a Banquet to Messrs. Adler and Murray.

The Lincoln League celebrated the recent Republican victory in the Eighth Assembly District last night with a banquet given in the Broadway Central Hotel in honor of Charles H. Murray and Charles S. Adler. Nearly 600 covers were laid. A letter of regret was read from Gov. Roosevelt. Among the guests of prominence were Gens. Francis V. Green and James R. O'Beirne, Abe Gruber, Edward Lauterbach, Alderman Elias Goodman, and Postmaster Cornelius Van Cott and others.

Toastmaster Otto A. Rosalsky announced that the toast, "The State of New York," would be responded to by Abe Gruber. Mr. Gruber staid in part:

"I find myself assigned to the toast, 'The State of New York,' and I find myself too short to cover the territory. I feel, moreover, that the committee acted wisely in choosing my senior partner, ex-Gov. Black for that job, and I am sure were he here he would do justice to the subject. I will speak to you instead on the Republicans of the Eighth. On election night it must have been the proudest feather in the cap of Gen. Francis V. Greene to realize that he had won the victory in the Eighth Assembly District. The victory was the second biggest Assembly District majority that was scored by the party, and that in the heart of the enemy's country.

"I would fear that I had not done justice to the occasion did I not read to you a poem which I have made. If you will allow me I will read it to you:

The workers ever pin their faith
In Charley Adler of the Eighth,
And when you see them in a hurry
It is to honor Charley Murray.
Republican gods, spare from sad fate
The bully workers of 'De Ate.'
And when you cut and pass the pie
Keep them in mind and in your eye.

"Gentlemen," the little speaker said, raising his voice until it fairly filled the room, "those are sentiments lightly put, but I predict the day that the Republican Party will know regret if it does not insist that wherever it is in power not a single appointee other than a Republican will hold office."

The other toasts of the evening were, "The Republican Party," by Gen. James R. O'Beirne; "The City of New York," by Gen. Francis V. Greene; "The Legislature," by Nathaniel A. Elsberg; "The Republican Club of the City of New York," by Charles Treat; "The Eighth Asembly District," by Otto A. Rosalsky; "The Soldiers of Our Party," by Leonard A. Snitkin, and "The Young Men in Politics," by Max Franklin.

COLUMBIA SOPHOMORES DINE.

The Guests of Honor Captured Freshmen Whose Diet Was Milk and Starch.

The annual dinner of the Sophomore Class of Columbia University was held last night at the Majestic. About 150 members of the class were present. The guests of honor, who provided the evening's entertainment, were freshmen who had been captured by the "sophs" yesterday afternoon.

All day the sophomores were on the outlook for stray freshmen—the class officers preferably—and before 4 o'clock they had made captives of E. S. Whitin and O. R. Houston, respectively the President and Secretary of the class. The capture of Houston was made easy through his ignorance of the wiles of the enemy. As he was coming out from one of his classes a sophomore approached him, shook hands, and proposed a walk. The freshman agreed, and five minutes later he was being whirled away in a cab to an empty coal cellar.

At the dinner the hapless freshmen sat hungry-eyed in the midst of the good cheer and refreshed themselves with a pale blue mixture of milk and starch, especially prepared for their benefit. A number of their classmates gathered in front of the hotel in the hope of assisting them to escape, but a band of second-year men dispersed them.

TRIUMPH OF SOPHOMORES.

New York University Cane Rush Fiercely Contested—Three Men Succumb.

The members of the sophomore class of New York University last night rejoiced at a victory over their rivals, the freshmen. This latest victory was earned in the annual cane rush, which took place earlier in the day. The class gathered at Gould Hall Dormitory early in the evening and, singing and cheering, the members marched about the campus defying attack from the freshmen.

At the cane rush the new rules were in force. Each class selected three men to hold the cane in mid-field while the remainder of the two classes were aligned five yards away, and at a pistol shot rushed for the cane. The men selected as cane men were: 1903—Moore, Twidy, and Weil; 1904, Raidris, Lyon, and Moss. The rush was the hardest and fiercest in the history of the university, and three men succumbed. They were restored to consciousness with little difficulty, however. When time was called, hands were counted, and the upperclassmen won by 19 to 15.

CREDIT MEN'S DINNER.

The business meeting and banquet of the New York Credit Men's Association, held last night at the Drug Club, 100 William Street, was attended by more than 100 members representing nearly every important branch of the trade. The President of the association, A. H. Watson, acted as toastmaster. After dinner addresses were made by R. S. Ramsey, President of the Hide and Leather Bank; Richard Young of the Richard Young Company, and William R. Corwine of the Merchants' Association of New York.

The speakers united in the sentiment that the success and even safety of mercantile houses of to-day rest and depend on good credit associations. It was agreed that all business associations should hasten the development of a banking system with New York as the centre of all banking exchange which involved immense credits abroad. It was further agreed that the merchants of New York should go to the Legislature and demand the money to deepen the Erie Canal.

MR. COMSTOCK IS ACCUSED

F. Norton Goddard Tells of Queer Alliance Against Policy Bills.

Senator Grady the Choice of Mr. Comstock to Kill a Measure—Mr. Comstock Calls Goddard Names.

F. Norton Goddard, who was instrumental in introducing into the last Legislature a bill making it a felony for any one to have in his possession paraphernalia used in writing policy, which bill was defeated largely through the opposition of Anthony Comstock, said yesterday that he had been deceived at the time regarding Mr. Comstock's motives in the matter. He now accuses Mr. Comstock of having formed an alliance with Senator Grady. "In order," said Mr. Goddard, "to ally himself with Senator Grady, Mr. Comstock deceived, and, in fact, lied, to Mr. Theron G. Strong and myself."

Mr. Goddard referred to the case of Edward Johnson, who yesterday pleaded guilty to writing policy slips, and was fined $75. In this case Mr. Goddard distrusted Mr. Comstock, who suggested to Charles P. Bleney, attorney for the prosecution, and also to the Court that the defendant be given a light sentence, as his offense was slight.

"The circumstances," continued Mr. Goddard, "hardly admit of a doubt that Mr. Comstock and the defendant's attorney had agreed together that the men would plead 'guilty,' and Mr. Comstock that he would agree to a fifty-dollar fine."

When Anthony Comstock was shown Mr. Goddard's statement he said with considerable indignation: "That man Goddard is the most notorious liar I know of.

"Why, if the bill that Theron G. Strong drew up had gone through it would have enabled these men to carry on their business on the street, in their hats.

"With reference to the Johnson case, there was only evidence to show that the man had sold one policy ticket. He was not the real culprit.

"Goddard is a dangerous man. He is dangerous because he meddles with matters he don't understand, and don't scruple to make statements about me that are untrue."

DOODY TRIAL RESUMED.

Justice Marean's Admission as to Immunity for the Contractor.

The trial of Daniel Doody, a contractor, on a charge of perjury, alleged to have been committed in connection with, the trial of Robert W. Fielding, Deputy Commissioner of City Works of the old City of Brooklyn, accused of conniving with Doody to defraud the city, was resumed yesterday in the Kings County Court. The chief witnesses examined were Supreme Court Justice Josiah T. Marean, ex-District Attorney Hiram R. Steele, and Assistant District Attorney Martin W. Littleton. A good part of the day's session was taken up with the reading of testimony given by Doody in the trials of Theodore B. Willis and other City Works officials in 1899.

Justice Marean testified to the part he took in the City Works Department cases while he was District Attorney. He told of conversations he had had with Doody about percentages alleged to have been paid by the contractor to Fielding in connection with contracts. The witness said, on cross-examination, that there had been an informal understanding between all parties interested that no criminal or civil action would be taken against Doody in consideration of his having turned State's evidence.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL

Some Sober Second Thoughts About "Janice Meredith."

Mary Mannering as a Star—The Amateur Actors—Explanation of First Night "Booing" in London.

Mary Mannering in her new capacity of "star" actress is in no wise different, artistically or personally, from the former "leading lady" of Daniel Frohman's permanent company. She is always charming, and she rarely fails to secure just the right effect in a scene or passage of a play when the dramatist has fairly met the actor half way. That is to say, Miss Mannering is a good actress when she has a good part.

She was a wholly good actress in "The Late Mr. Castello," "Trelawney of the Wells," and "The Manoeuvres of Jane." She acts remarkably well in some of the scenes of the new "romantic drama," "Janice Meredith," which Edward E. Rose has tinkered for her out of cold remnants of Paul Leicester Ford's novel. What a delightful episode that is, for instance, in which Janice makes the best of her predicament with her "soldier." Those scenes with the sentinel are as good comedy as any lately written, and they are acted charmingly.

There is some good material, too, in the jumble of Act II, particularly Janice's break down after her wild frolic with the British officers, and the conventional and preposterous, but still theatrically effective, climax in which Janice throws oil on the burning fire of British wrath by mounting a chair and proposing the health of Washington. Most of the third act is actable, but all of the last act, (to speak quite as politely as is consistent with the truth these notices of plays and actors always aim to tell,) is silly twaddle.

But let it be said, at once, that thousands of "nice" folks already like the play, even its needlessly scrappy and involved and barely intelligible first act, and are so particularly pleased with it because it is well suited to entertain the youngsters who are coming home from school for the Christmas holidays. It is "clean," bless its heart! this "Janice Meredith" is, as clean and wholesome as the story of the Three Bears, and it is full of pretty pictures. Wallack's Theatre will be fairly jammed at every performance Christmas week.

Wherefore, it makes very little difference, perhaps, that the play, as a whole, is rather feeble and incoherent, and that it might be made so much better with a little pains. Why was it necessary to introduce the miniature, to make Brereton a "bondman," to fill a whole act with vague illusions to things in the book that are of no consequence in the play?

But there is no reason to worry, from an artistic point of view. These inartistic rehashes of current novels have almost had their day. It is sad news, with the holidays at hand, to hear of so many traveling troupes concerned with this kind of theatrical commodity, returning to "reorganize"—sad for the poor actors, but good news for the cause of dramatic art.

Miss Mannering will probably never be a great actress, though she will be popular so long as she retains her youthful charms. She has no largeness of resource. There is a confusion of outline and a weakness of expression in her work always when the part itself does not strongly bear her up. Her best remembered predecessor in the Lyceum company, Georgia Cayvan, had comparatively few first-rate parts throughout her brilliant career as a leading actress in modern drama. How much her exquisite taste, ingenuity, and tact, and keen observation, did for innumerable second and third-rate rôles! But Miss Mannering in such rôles is merely commonplace, just as she is in the purely inconsequential episodes of "Janice Meredith," substituting motion for action, and producing no definite effect. Personal charm can do wonders, but even that fails sometimes. However, it is a matter of fact that a star actress ought to have an artistic play, and doubtless Miss Mannering's manager will try to find such a one for her second venture.

Meanwhile, for the reasons above noted, the theatrical show at Wallack's is likely to be very profitable.

The amateur actors are always busy at this season of the year, but their doings are not often accounted of public importance nowadays. The Strollers, however, are so much more than merely amateur actors, are so aggressive and ubiquitous, that what they do is news, and it is well to bear in mind that their term of annual performances at the Waldorf-Astoria is not yet finished, and that they have striven hard to improve the piece called "The Cruise of the Summer Girl," and their own acting of it, since their "first night." The production has been successful in a pecuniary sense, and some worthy charities have thereby substantially benefited, while, in an artistic sense, the dancing and singing, and some of the comic acting, have been noteworthy.

The young men of St. Francis Xavier College, who always have a dramatic entertainment about Christmas, will produce this year in the college hall an adaptation of "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme" of Molière, called "The Upstart." The Rev. Charles C. Jones, S. J., made this translation and alteration of a French dramatic classic, and one of its odd features will be the suppression of the women in Molière's play. Instead of a wife Monsieur Jourdain will have an uncle, the Marquise will become a Marquis, the maid servant a valet. The heroine, Lucille, is suppressed altogether, but the fun and philosophy of the comedy will all be retained, and the production will be elaborate.

One good reason has been put forward in the London newspaper discussion of the frequent baiting of the author on theatrical "first nights," for the growth of the practice." It is said to be aimed less at the author than at his ill-advised friends and the manager's employes who go to first performances solely to applaud, and do so, with vehemence, in the right and wrong places, whether the piece is good or bad. If that is true, the existence of the spirit of opposition in the galleries of the London theatres is not an unmixed evil. There is entirely too much unjustifiable applause of actors and plays in our own theatres.

MISS TRACEY'S RECITAL.

A Small Audience Applauds Her at Mendelssohn Hall.

Miss Minnie Tracey, lately a prima donna soprano of the Metropolitan English Grand Opera Company, gave a song recital yesterday afternoon at Mendelssohn Hall. A small audience, evidently composed largely of friends of the lady, assembled to hear her and applauded her in a most amiable manner. Miss Tracey's experiences in the opera company were unfortunate. She appeared as Elsa without proper rehearsal and, suffering from extreme nervousness, was unable to do herself justice. She doubtless hoped by yesterday's recital to demonstrate that her ability was greater than that displayed at her début. It may be said that yesterday she certainly was heard to better advantage than in the opera. She has a voice with a light color, but an abundance of body. It is a big voice and one of agreeable quality. Its tones yesterday were much steadier than they were on the last occasion on which THE TIMES's musical reviewer heard her. Miss Tracey, furthermore, is not without temperament, and her singing shows that she has had experience in her profession.

It may be, however, that the experience has not always been beneficial. If it had not been her fortune to find her career in theatres, where work is more plentiful than artistic progress, she might have taken a higher position. Her method, too, is susceptible of improvement. More use of the nasal resonance chambers would benefit her tone quality, which is now brilliant rather than mellow. Her programme yesterday contained songs by Gluck, Bachelet, Gabriel Fauré, Hahn, George, Massenet, Schubert, Schumann, Grieg, Lundberg, Nevin, Dvorak, Howland, and Leroux. The group of small songs, following the air from Gluck's "Iphigenie en Tauride" showed the French song writers in their most trivial style. Such songs do not seem to be worth while when there are so many good ones floating about. Mr. David Mannes, violinist, played the Wilhelmj fantasy on themes from "Parsifal," and smaller compositions by Schumann and Wieniawski. Mr. Luckstone played the accompaniments excellently.

"Carmen" at the Opera.

At the Metropolitan Opera House last night "Carmen" was given for the last time in English. This is the final week of the Metropolitan English Grand Opera Company, and the opera is changed at every performance. Consequently, Bizet's popular work came along in its turn last night. The performance was much better than the last previous one of the same opera. Miss de Lussan returned to the title rôle. The house was full, and the prima donna was in excellent voice and humor. The result was that she gave a very spirited interpretation of the part. The audience evidently enjoyed it, and she was very heartily applauded.

Mr. Brozel repeated his manly and vigorous impersonation of Don José, but his voice was not in the happiest possible state. Miss Van Studdiford was once more the Micaela, but she was plainly tired and not able to keep on the key. Her impersonation, however, was not without charm. The Escamillo was Mr. Whitehill. Signor Sepilli conducted the performance.

Edward Lloyd's Farewell Concert.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—Edward Lloyd, the well-known tenor, gave a farewell concert last evening at the Albert Hall. He was enthusiastically cheered. Mr. Lloyd's voice shows no diminution of power or quality; but he is tired of public life, and is retiring to raise fancy cattle.

A HOLIDAY BURLESQUE.

Weber & Fields Announce a Special Christmas Bill.

Pending the production of a new burlesque, Weber & Fields will introduce what they term a holiday novelty next Thursday night at their music hall in the shape of a series of skits upon the several recent dramatic successes. The burlesque of "Arizona" will be taken off and replaced by a pot-pourri of fun combining a continuation of "Fiddle-Dee-Dee," and a running travesty embracing bits from local attractions. The entire cast will be utilized in the new offering, which will include first a scene burlesquing the principal episode in "The Gay Lord Quex," with Fay Templeton and De Wolf Hopper in the leading rôles. This will be followed by a burlesque of "The Royal Family." It will take in all the principals now appearing with the company, with Lillian Russell and Charles J. Ross as the principal figures.

David Warfield will add another character to his repertoire, appearing as the Queen, and wearing, necessarily, all the feminine attributes to the part. Lew Fields is to be the King, resplendant in the costume of the period, and Joseph Weber is to play the Prince in befitting attire with the usual stomach pad in place. John T. Kelly will be the Cardinal.

In this skit there will be introduced, among numerous other things, a burlesque of the double sextette in "Floradora" portrayed by Weber, Fields, Warfield, and three of the prettiest girls in the company.

Edgar Smith has written the skits and John Stromberg has composed the music. Julian Mitchell is giving his customary attention to the staging and Bessie Clayton has invented a new dance.

VAUDEVILLE LICENSE REFUSED.

Park Circle Amusement Company Is Denied a Writ of Mandamus.

The Park Circle Amusement Company will not be able to open up the vaudeville theatre at Sixtieth Street and Broadway. Justice Fitzgerald, in the Supreme Court, yesterday handed down an opinion denying the company's application for a writ of mandamus to compel the Board of Police Commissioners to issue a concert hall license to the place. The Paulist Fathers were actively opposed to the issuing of the license and protested to the Police Board. Evans & Mann, who are the managers of the new enterprise, had fitted up what was formerly a bicycle academy at an expense of $12,000, for the purpose of conducting vaudeville shows. When the concert hall license was first refused by the Board of Police Commissioners the proprietors of the new theatre applied to the Supreme Court for an order compelling the board to issue the license. It was contended that, as the license fee had been paid for, and that, as the place met all the requirements under the law, the board was compelled to issue the license. The Justice, in disposing of the case, said that the law gave the board the right to accept the money and then return it in case a license was refused.

Sothern to Resume His Tour.

E. H. Sothern, who was compelled to abandon his tour in Baltimore on account of a wound received on his foot in the duel scene of "Hamlet," has made such progress that his manager, Daniel Frohman, has issued notices to the members of Mr. Sothern's company requesting them to report for rehearsals next Monday at the Lyceum Theatre. With Virginia Harned, who will continue during the present season as Ophelia, Mr. Sothern will resume his tour at the Olympic Theatre, St. Louis, on Dec. 24. The following week a three weeks' run of "Hamlet" in Chicago at Powers's Theatre will begin.

HELEN BAIRD DIES IN ST. PAUL.

Was Leading Woman of "The Man from Mexico" Company.

Miss Helen Baird, the leading woman of Broadhurst Brothers' "The Man from Mexico" Company, died yesterday morning at St. Luke's Hospital, St. Paul, Minn. Miss Baird was taken ill with typhoid pneumonia on Nov. 18 while the company was playing in Butte, Mont., and was sent on to St. Paul from that point for treatment. It was thought for a time that she had overcome the disease, but she had a relapse, and sank gradually until her death yesterday morning.

Miss Baird was born in this city twenty-five years ago. She began her career about five years ago in vaudeville. She appeared with Donald Robertson in "The Man with the Iron Mask," and two years ago appeared in a small part with Ada Rehan's company. This year she was engaged to play the leading female rôle in "The Man from Mexico" in support of George C. Boniface, Jr.

IRVING PLACE THEATRE.

Heavy Romantic Play of Last Week Succeeded by Comedy.

"Das Grobe Hemd," a volksstück by C. Karlweis, which made its first appearance last evening at the Irving Place Theatre, comes appropriately as an antidote to the preceding play of "Rosenmontag." Perhaps it could better be called the ameliorating sauce for the meat served upon Herr Conried's theatrical table. "Rosenmontag" was a serious play touching upon an important social question in Germany.

In it a young army officer, unable to marry the girl with whom he is in love because of her poverty and low rank in the social scale, with her departs this life, that they may be together in another, if not in this world. The sauce of last night's play was a comedy, in which the two pairs of lovers, in spite of poverty and German social conditions, determine to take each other for better or worse and love in a cottage, or whatever is synonymous for that condition of bliss in Vienna, the scene of the play.

This serious state of affairs did not continue, however, a scheming papa having deceived the lovers in regard to his loss of fortune. Under other conditions the author would undoubtedly have prevented the sentimental turn of affairs or sent the young people to America, a proceeding which, a German critic said last week, would have been more sensible than suicide for the young officer in "Rosenmontag."

It was Gustav von Seyffertitz's play last night. That is equivalent to saying that it was interesting and amusing, for Herr von Seyffertitz rightly deserves the name of chief comedian of the Irving Place Theatre. He held the centre of the stage throughout the evening, and even the stage setting was his. "Das Grobe Hemd," ("The Coarse Shirt,") the name of the play, comes in figuratively, referring to the condition of a working people to which the young people of the family will be reduced when poverty comes.

This is the bright idea of the father, Schöllhofer von Seyffertitz, who pretends to speculate and lose his fortune for the moral benefit of his children. Adolf Zimmerman is Max, one of these, and he may have been cast for the rôle to show that he can act without good clothes. He did appear in one act with a collarless shirt and torn coat. But his was a most respectable appearance of poverty.

Maria Elsenhut was the daughter Franzi and Ada Merito Christire Winkler, who gladly offered her hand, heart, and fortune to the impoverished Max. Willy Frey and Johanna Clausäeh-Koch did good work, and there was a funny scene in the last act in which Franz Kierschner, the "pantoffelheld," as the Germans call it, slipper herd, made a declaration of independence, and after twenty-seven years of bondage freed himself from the domination of his shrewish wife.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Mr. John Hare will give a professional matinée of "The Gay Lord Quex" at the Criterion Theatre on Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 18.

When "The Village Postmaster" is presented at the Fourteenth Street Theatre on Dec. 24, it will reach its one thousandth performance, and in honor of the event handsome souvenirs will be distributed.

Gilbert Gordan, who was identified with Daly's Theatre as Treasurer for a number of years prior to the change of management after the death of Augustin Daly, has secured the position of Treasurer of the Casino.

Miss Josephine Hall has been engaged by Manager E. R. Reynolds for the Jefferson De Angelis engagement at the Broadway Theatre, which begins on Monday, Dec. 24. She will have a prominent role in "A Royal Rogue."

Anna Held will spend the next week in taking a much-needed rest and recuperation at Lakewood, and on Christmas Eve, when she reopens in "Papa's Wife" at the Montauk Theatre, Brooklyn, she has arranged for a Christmas celebration on the stage after the performance.

Raymond Hitchcock, who recently was identified with May Irwin's company when "The Belle of Bridgeport" was being presented, has been engaged to play the part of a crushed tragedian, subsequently the proprietor of a dime museum, in the forthcoming production of "The Burgomaster."

John Findlay has been loaned by Daniel Frohman to Broadhurst Brothers to play the part of Dr. Jack in the production of "The House that Jack Built," which opens at the Madison Square Theatre Dec. 24. Mr. Findlay replaces Herbert Ayling, and upon this same occasion George Henry Trader will replace Alfred Klein in the part of Percy Huntington.

Elizabeth Marbury, through her counsel, applied to Justice Blanchard, in the Supreme Court yesterday, for an order restraining Samuel E. Rork, Thomas Q. Seabrooke, and Stryker Williamson from producing the play known as "The Rounders." Miss Marbury appears as attorney for Henri Heugel and Paul Emil Chevalier, owners of the play from which the English version has been taken.

POLICE HUNTING FOR PRICE.

Disappearance of the Man Whose Sweetheart Killed Herself.

The police of the Morrisania and Tremont Avenue Stations are looking for Eugene Price of 2,066 Ryer Avenue, who disappeared late Sunday night after the funeral of Minnie Gerhardt of 627 Eagle Avenue, who committed suicide by taking carbolic acid last Thursday while he was visiting her at her home. Price was known as the sweetheart of the dead girl, and while the police have no specific charge to make against him, they have been started on a hunt by several of her neighbors, who say that he may be able to tell why the girl committed suicide.

Last Thursday there was a party at the Gerhardt house and Price remained after the other guests had gone. After talking with him for a while the girl arose and left the room for a few moments. When she returned she announced that she had poisoned herself. She died a few moments later from carbolic acid. Price refused to talk about the matter. On Sunday the funeral of the girl took place. Price had sent a large wreath, and was there himself.

Immediately after the funeral he told Fred Glazier, a brother-in-law of the dead girl, that some one in the house had been trying to blackmail him. Glazier, upon hearing this, seized hold of Philip Huebner of 690 Elton Avenue, and after a struggle threw him out of the house. Late that night Huebner returned and told Glazier that Price was at his house talking with his sister. This threw Glazier into a rage, and with a younger brother he started for Huebner's house. They found Price there with Miss Huebner, and a fight followed. Several of the neighbors who had been attracted by the noise charged Price with having something to do with the death of the girl. Price disappeared that night and has not been seen since.

Lulu Gerhardt, a younger sister of the dead girl, started out on a hunt for him the following day, armed with a horsewhip and a bottle of carbolic acid. She did not succeed in finding him, but has kept up the hunt every day since. Yesterday the police of the Morrisania Station were notified by several people that there was something suspicious about Price's disappearance, and they have instituted a search for him.

WANTS $50,000 FOR AN EYE.

Workman Garcia Says His Sight Was Destroyed by an Imperfect Tool.

Anthony Garcia has begun suit against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, to recover $50,000 damages for the loss of his left eye. Garcia says that he was employed as a boilermaker's helper in the shops of the defendant company in Jersey City.

Garcia on Feb. 6 last with a hammer struck a tool called "fuller" while his mate held it. A piece of steel, he claims, was chipped from the "fuller" and struck him in the eye, which had to be removed. The sight of the right eye was also affected. Garcia claims that the company was negligent and responsible in furnishing him with an imperfect tool.

TROUBLES OF THE KELLYS.

Begin with the Big Roosevelt Meeting and End in Court.

It all happened because the Kelly Association of West Thirty-seventh Street could not get into Madison Square Garden on the night Gov. Roosevelt spoke. If the Garden had not been so crowded the Kellys, who are all colored, would not have marched, disgruntled, back to their quarters, and the trouble that ensued would have been averted.

Kelly with his wife and a delegation of friends and relatives of both sexes marched in the parade on the night of Oct. 26, but, being far down the line, found the "full house" sign up when they reached Madison Square. Back to Thirty-seventh Street Kelly marched his cohorts. In Special Sessions yesterday he alleged that Hydrant Inspector Charles Linnear, a Democrat, used disrespectful language to Mrs. Kelly. At any rate, Mrs. Kelly brought a lighted torch she carried into contact with Linnear's head, and Kelly added his bulk to the fray. Kelly says Linnear had a knife. Linnear denied this strenuously. Kelly was fined $25.

New Alabama Mining Project.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 12.—James Weisel, former Cashier of the Republic Iron and Steel Company, is at the head of a projected industrial enterprise which, it is proposed, will engage extensively in the mining of coal and iron ore and the quarrying of dolomite in the Alabama field. The projectors, who are principally capitalists of Baltimore, Md., and Allentown, Penn., have already secured, by option and otherwise, 10,000 acres of coal land on which there are several openings. Mr. Weisel is now in the East. It is stated that he has about closed the negotiations, and the deal will materialize in the near future.

Tennessee Coal and Iron Company.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 12.—It is specifically denied here on the authority of the Directors of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, who were in session in New York yesterday, that there will be any changes in the personnel of the Birmingham officers of the company. Reports to that effect have been rife ever since the origination of rumors of efforts on the part of the Standard Oil Company, the American Steel and Wire Company, and other concerns to obtain control of the Tennessee company. These rumors have also been denied.

Eleventh Army Corps Dinner.

The annual banquet of the Eleventh Army Corps of the Army of the Potomac took place at the Fifth Avenue Hotel last night. Col. Augustus C. Hamlin of Maine, who presided, introduced the following speakers, who related experiences of camp life; Gens. Franz Sigel, Orlando Smith, James Grant Wilson, Gen. Horatio C. King, and Capt. Jewett of Ohio. Among those present were Gen. Egbert L. Viele, Gen. L. P. di Cesnola, Gen. J. T. Lockman, Job E. Hedges, Col. Asa Bird Gardiner, Julius Chambers, Capt. J. W. Miller, U. S. N., Demetrius N. Bogassi, Consul General of Greece; Count Corinaldi, Attaché of the Italian Embassy, and William L. Andrews.

THE UNION OF LIBRARIES

Trustees Take an Important Step Looking to Consolidation.

All Local Institutions May Come Under One Management—Branches for Public Schools.

The Trustees of the New York Public Library, Astor, Lenox, and Tilden Foundations, at their monthly meeting, held yesterday in the Astor Building, Lafayette Place, took active steps looking toward consolidating with the New York Free Circulating Library.

The matter of the consolidation of these two most important libraries in the city has frequently been mentioned from time to time, but yesterday was the first time it was formally brought before the Trustees of the Public Library. The action taken is considered as the first step toward the consolidation under a single management of all the libraries of New York.

After discussing the resolutions passed by the Trustees of the Circulating Library last Tuesday offering to consolidate under certain conditions, the Public Library Trustees yesterday passed a set of resolutions expressing appreciation of the spirit in which the proposal was made and offering to make every effort to bring about the consolidation. The resolutions referred the subject of consolidation with the Free Circulating Library "and any other corporation engaged in circulation in the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx" to the Executive Committee.

The Executive Committee thus has power to consider the whole matter and report upon details. Although the committee of the Circulating Library was given full power to act, the matter will, as a matter of law, have to be referred back to the Trustees before the consolidation can be actually effected.

Another matter which was regarded as of great importance was the proposition for the establishment of branch libraries in the public schools. A communication on the subject had been received from President O'Brien of the Board of Education at the November meeting and referred to the Executive Committee. The committee conferred with the school authorities, and last Monday President O'Brien sent another letter, in which the Board of Education agreed to furnish the necessary accommodations for libraries in eight public school buildings in the Borough of Manhattan, and to provide for the payment of the necessary attendants, lights, &c., the library authorities to furnish books for reference and circulation, also periodicals and newspapers. The Board of Education further agreed to make appointments of attendants subject to the wishes of the library authorities, and the latter to be allowed to make such rules regarding such attendants' duties as they may see fit.

The Library Trustees at yesterday's meeting, in a set of resolutions cordially approved President O'Brien's suggestions, and appropriated $8,000 to be used in establishing and maintaining such branch libraries as an experiment during the twelve months beginning Jan. 1 next. The Executive Committee was given the power to settle the details of the scheme with a committee of the school, consisting of Miles M. O'Brien, John G. O'Keefe, Abraham Stern, and Vernon M. Davis.

After the meeting Mr. Rives said it was the opinion of the board that the scheme might develop into something of great magnitude, but that it was felt that the work should be taken up at first in an experimental way until the best methods can be determined.

GOULD YACHT ATALANTA SOLD.

Venezuelan Government Pays $125,000 for the Vessel.

George Gould's steam yacht Atalanta, after long negotiations, has at last become the property of a South American republic. Venezuela, however, is the purchaser of the yacht instead of Colombia. Possessio was formally transferred to the Venezuelan Consul General in this city yesterday afternoon, when Napoleon Bolet Peraza, special Commissioner for his Government, paid $125,000 to Mr. Gould's agents.

Under the supervision of Consul General Gonzalez the work of the Atalanta's conversion to a gunboat will begin at once. Her armament, as planned, will consist of four six-pounder guns and one fifteen-pounder, the latter to be placed forward. Some minor changes will also be made in her interior and cabin plan, but it is expected to have the converted yacht ready for commission within four weeks. Her chief occupation in Venezuelan waters, according to Mr. Bolet Peraza, will consist of service in State ceremonials and in the observance of international courtesies.

Colombia, by the definite transfer of the Atalanta to Venezuela, loses the deposit of $35,000 paid as earnest-money. A change in the Colombian Administration and the jealousy of political factions led to the lapse of the supplementary payments until long past the expiration of the option, and about one month ago the Colombian agents notified Mr. Gould that they would abandon any claims to the yacht.

TRIPPED ON SCHOOL STAIRS.

Mrs. Schmidt Thinks Boy's Play Caused Her Son's Death.

The mother of Charles Schmidt, thirteen years old, of 503 East One Hundred and Sixteenth Street, has requested the Coroner to investigate the cause of the boy's death, which occurred in Mount Sinai Hospital on Nov. 14.

Schmidt was admitted to the hospital suffering from injuries reported to have been received by falling downstairs. His mother said last night that her son went to the public school in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, between Second and Third Avenues, and that on Nov. 8 he was tripped by a boy while coming down the steps.

COURT ATTACHES' SALARIES.

Brooklyn Employes Granted Increases by the Supreme Court Justices.

The raising of the salaries of a number of the Supreme Court attachés in Brooklyn by the Justices of the court has occasioned a lot of gossip about the Kings County Court House. Certain court officers have had their salaries increased.

Thomas Shevlin, Captain of the Supreme Court officers, who is a brother of James Shevlin, the Brooklyn Democrat leader, has had his annual salary raised from $1,800 to $2,500. The Supreme Court Justices, in explaining the raise, say that they merely took advantage of the law which gives them the power to make increases, if a majority of those on the bench agree that they are deserved.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S POWER.

Test of the Act Appointing Deputies to Prosecute Election Fraud Cases.

The legislative act authorizing the State Attorney General to appoint deputies to prosecute cases of alleged election fraud is to be tested in Kings County as to its constitutionality.

Ex-Police Justice James G. Tighe of Brooklyn announced yesterday afternoon that he had begun proceedings with this purpose in view. The matter will come up in the Supreme Court on Saturday. Mr. Tighe contends that all such work within the county is provided for under the regular duties of the District Attorney, and that there has been no act repealing the duties of the District Attorney's office.

This conflict of authority in the local courts, Mr. Tighe believes, is sufficient to render the act providing for the appointment of State deputies unconstitutional. It is said that the proceedings, brought nominally by Mr. Tighe, have been inspired by the Kings County Democratic organization.

Ex-Messenger Boys Accused.

Four discharged Postal Telegraph Company messenger boys were held in $500 bail in the Centre Street Court by Magistrate Flammer yesterday on complaint of Manager Charles W. Harlan, who said that the boys had been collecting money upon false representations that it was to be used for the purpose of giving an entertainment for the benefit of the boys. The boys were Joseph Perrine of 50 Oliver Street, Edward Dunn of 357 Pacific Street, Brooklyn; William Fairbrother of 17 Stone Street, Brooklyn, and Joseph Denefon of 111 Hancock Street, Brooklyn.

KILLED HERSELF IN HALLWAY.

Josephine Noirjean Called at Friend's House to Commit Suicide.

Josephine Noirjean, or Eckhardt, a well-dressed young woman, committed suicide yesterday afternoon in the hallway of a tenement house at 48 Greenwich Avenue by taking acid. The woman gained entrance to the hallway by ringing one of the bells at the entrance. She then walked up to the third floor, where she seated herself on the bottom of the stairway leading to the floor above. She drank the acid and dropped the bottle, the noise of which brought Mrs. J. E. Starr to the door of her flat. She saw the woman's lips were burned by the acid, and asked her why she had taken it.

"I came here to see a widow," she remarked, and then became unconscious. Dr. Kennedy of St. Vincent's Hospital was called, but the woman died while he was working over her.

Later she was identified, and her mother was notified at her home, 276 West One Hundred and Nineteenth Street. The mother said that the dead woman lived there. In January last she married William Eckhardt and went to live in Brooklyn. In March last they moved to One Hundred and Nineteenth Street, Manhattan, and lived there until May, when Eckhardt, after a quarrel with his wife's mother, disappeared. The woman left her home yesterday morning to visit friends on Greenwich Avenue.

Arraigned by Men of Devery's Staff.

Detectives Darcy and Schoenith of Chief Devery's personal staff arraigned in the Centre Street Police Court yesterday Joseph Lenox of 2,027 Third Avenue and Charles W. Parker of 136 West Thirty-sixth Street, charged with maintaining gambling houses at 14 South Street and 219 Greenwich Street, respectively. The men were arrested on warrants issued by Magistrate Flammer. The detectives said that they had visited the two places, playing roulette, Klondike, and other games. The men were admitted to bail in $1,000 pending further examination.

HOW LIND LOST VOTES.

Carelessness of Democrats Said to Have Cost Him 15,000.

From The St. Paul (Minn.) Globe, (Dem.)

It appears that on the vote for Governor, at least 15,000 votes were thrown out because the ballots were marked for both Lind and Lucas, the Socialist-Democratic candidate. In Le Sueur County 384 votes were thus thrown out. Of the Congressional candidate Heatwole, (Rep.,) polled 1,976 votes, Schaller, (Dem.,) polled 2,141, and Lowe, (Middle of the Road Pop.,) polled 24. But on the vote for Governor Van Sant polled 1,783, which is 190 votes less than Heatwole received, and these 190 votes were evidently cast for Lind. But in spite of the fact that 190 Republicans voted for him in preference to Van Sant, Lind only polled a total of 1,947 votes in the county, or 194 votes less than Schaller, which is explained by the fact that 384 votes were thrown out on account of being marked for both Lind and Lucas. In the same manner about 325 votes were thrown out in Scott County, Waseca about 300; Stearns, 450; Carver, 250; Meeker, 150, and there is probably not a county in the State where there were not at least a hundred votes thrown out for this same reason. A total of 15,000 is therefore putting it very low.

That all those whose votes were thus thrown out really intended to vote for Lind cannot be questioned. Every Socialist-Democrat knew that Lucas was his candidate and therefore had no occasion to make such a blunder. It was the men who had never heard of Lucas and the Socialist-Democratic Party that were misled and for them the blunder was a very natural one. Such a man, wishing to vote the straight Democratic ticket, would just glance down the ballot and put his mark wherever he saw the word Democrat, and let it go at that.

An Aitchless Tale.

From The London Globe.

Another very aitchless tale comes from the same source as the 'opping flea. This is a description of the common bat: "This interesting animal 'as no 'ole to 'ide in, no 'ands to 'old by, no 'orns to 'urt with, but Nature 'as given 'im 'ooks be'ind to 'itch 'imself up by."

DOCTOR ON INSANITY.

Said He Thought All Men Insane on Some One Subject.

From The Baltimore Sun.

One of the older members of the Baltimore bar tells this anecdote of the late Severn Teackle Wallis, as illustrating the cleverness and sarcasm of Mr. Wallis:

Mr. Wallis was defending the will of a wealthy testator, and, as the lawyers say, when the estate is large a lawyer "will wrestle with a will with a will." A prominent physician was called to testify for those contesting the will. The doctor became very restless under the lengthy and exhaustive cross-examination of Mr. Wallis, and finally he petulantly exclaimed:

"Oh, Mr. Wallis, I believe the testator was insane."

Mr. Wallis kept his temper and said quietly: "Doctor, you are the first person who has ever intimated in or out of court that the testator was insane. Why do you say he was insane?"

"I believe," the doctor replied, "that every man is more or less insane on some one subject."

"Is it your deliberate professional opinion," Mr. Wallis then asked, "expressed here in court under oath, that every man is more or less insane on some subject?"

"Yes," the doctor replied. "I will say here under oath that from my reading, knowledge, and experience, I believe that every man is more or less insane on some one subject."

Then Mr. Wallis said in that fine tone of sarcasm for which he was noted: "Doctor, has it ever occurred to you that you are insane on the subject of insanity?"

Immediately the doctor fired up and exclaimed: "But, Mr. Wallis, I am not insane."

Mr. Wallis arose and said: "Doctor, according to your own sworn theory, you must be insane on some subject. I pronounce you insane on the subject of insanity."

Court, jury, and spectators laughed aloud, and nothing more was said about the testator being insane.

THE STATE OFFICIAL VOTE

Mr. McKinley's Plurality Is 143,606, Majority 96,072.

Odell 111,126 Votes Ahead of Stanchfield, Who Led His Ticket by 15,347.

ALBANY, Dec. 12.—The State Board of Canvassers has finished the canvass of the State vote in the last elections. The vote shows that but four of the sixty-one counties cast a majority of votes for Bryan. They were New York, Queens, Richmond, and Schoharie. Onondaga County gave the largest plurality for the Republican ticket, 9,633; St. Lawrence, second, 9,595; Chautauqua, third, with 8,660, and Oneida, fourth, with 6,393.

The Prohibition, Socialist Labor, and Socialist-Democrat Parties have sufficient votes to go on the next election ticket without a petition.

Five cities went Democratic: New York, Niagara Falls, Dunkirk, Elmira, and Oswego.

The vote by counties for the first Elector on the Republican and Democratic tickets, and for Governor, is as follows:

The vote for Governor gives Odell a plurality of 111,126, 32,480 less than that of the leading Elector. His total vote was 804,859, as against 693,733 for Stanchfield, who received the largest vote on the Democratic State ticket, while Odell received the smallest on the Republican. Further than this, Stanchfield received 15,347 more votes than did the leading Elector on the Democratic ticket. The latter also ran behind every other Democratic State candidate.

EXTRA SESSION IN MICHIGAN.

Legislature Meets to Enact a Law Taxing Corporations on Cash Value of Property.

LANSING, Mich., Dec. 12.—For the third time in two years the State Legislature convened here to-day in special session called by Gov. Pingree. Consideration of a measure taxing railroads, telephone and telegraph companies, express companies, and other forms of corporate property on the cash value of their property instead of specifically upon their earnings, as under the present law, is the object of the session.

In his message to the Legislature Gov. Pingree urges in explaining his reasons for calling the special session that this Legislature is more familiar with the subject of taxation than the next Legislature will be; that therefore the debate need relate only to the provisions of the law under consideration; that they have passed the Atkinson bill, (which was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court,) and that their work at this session is merely the reenactment of that law, with such changes as may be deemed advisable.

The Governor asserts that a conservative estimate of the taxes that would be paid by the railroads under the proposed law, if assessed on actual cash value at the average general rate of taxation in the State, as the Constitutional amendment adopted at the last election provides, would be more than $2,250,000, as against $1,240,845, the taxes received for the year 1899, which were assessed specifically on the roads' earnings.

He submits the report of the expert appraisers who have been at work for the past three months on the property of thirty of the smaller railroads in the State, explaining that the appraisers have not yet finished their work.

Representative Cheever of Detroit will introduce the tax bill to-morrow. It is modeled after the former Atkinson bill and provides that the State Tax Commission shall constitute a Board of Assessors, and that all franchises and intangible property shall be taxed, as well as physical property.

DELAY IN ELECTION CASES.

State Official Blames District Attorney's Office—Mr. Gardiner's Reply.

Deputy Assistant Attorney General Hammond and Assistant District Attorney Gordon had a sharp verbal encounter in Recorder Goff's courtroom yesterday concerning alleged delay in the trial of violations of the election laws. Mr. Hammond stated that the Assistant District Attorney had publicly stated that the cases were of no importance, and that it did not make much difference whether they came to trial immediately or not. Mr. Hammond made this statement in the form of a complaint to the Recorder, and said that routine cases were hastily moved for trial whenever any election cases were on the calendar, thus crowding the election cases out of the way.

Mr. Gordon, who was in the courtroom, took exception to Mr. Hammond's statement and, jumping to his feet, indignantly denied it in toto.

"I have made no such statement," he said, hotly. "I am in perfect accord with the Attorney General in this matter, and desire the disposal of the election cases as heartily as he does."

Recorder Goff stated that he would direct the District Attorney not to interfere with the placing of the cases on the calendar in their regular turn. In addition he designated Thursday and Friday of each week upon which no cases but election law violations would be tried until the entire seventy awaiting trial are disposed of.

PENNSYLVANIA SENATORSHIP.

The Republican Caucus Will Select a Candidate Jan. 1.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Dec. 12.—Announcement is made to-day that the Republican caucus to agree upon a candidate for United States Senator to fill the vacancy caused by the expiration of the term of M. S. Quay will be called to meet on Tuesday night, Jan. 1, at 8 o'clock. The Legislature meets in biennial session at noon that day.

The Republican caucuses to select candidates for Speaker of the House of Representatives and President pro tem. of the Senate will meet, it is stated, the previous night. The Republicans have a majority in both branches, but both factions of the Republican Party are claiming control of the Legislature, the anti-Quay Republican leaders asserting that they will be in the ascendency by reason of an alliance with the Democrats.

The Legislature will vote for United States Senator on Jan. 15.

ONE NEW SMALLPOX CASE.

Large Number of Typhoid Cases Shown in Official Report—Col. Murphy's Explanation.

James Nelson, a laborer, of 517 West Forty-second Street, was found last night to be suffering from smallpox. He was removed to Willard Parker Hospital. Every one in the house was vaccinated.

Assistant Sanitary Superintendent Dillingham said that there were thirty-nine persons afflicted with the disease on North Brother Island, and there had been three deaths from the disease there. Eight patients had been discharged from the island cured.

The weekly report of the sanitary authorities for Dec. 1 is of interest, because it shows that the annual prevalence of typhoid fever at this season is more than twice as severe as it was of even date last year. The report, with a comparison with 1899, is:

	Week Ending Dec. 1, 1900. Cases.	Week Ending Dec. 2, 1899. Cases.
Typhoid fever	110	53
Smallpox	34	2
Phthisis	221	199
Diphtheria	244	260
Croup	14	7
Measles	95	275
Scarlet fever	117	149

Col. Michael C. Murphy, Health Commissioner, said last night that there was nothing extraordinary, or that should cause anxiety, in the record of typhoid fever cases last week.

"You can say from me," he added, "that the people of New York need not be in the slightest degree alarmed about typhoid fever. We have no local typhoid. The number of cases of last week is, it is true, more than double that for the corresponding week of last year. This is due to the long, open and warm Autumn, which has kept people in places where they caught the disease, which has developed here. That's all there is about it. New York is just the place at this time for people who drink typhoid-infected water to come."

The statement is made in the report that the condition of Croton water has improved both as to temperature and elements as shown by analysis.

Carried Infection to Hoboken.

Louis Semple of 259 Eleventh Street, Hoboken, was yesterday removed to the hospital for contagious diseases at Snake Hill, suffering from smallpox. He is the father of Sarah Semple, the little girl who was stricken by the same disease two weeks ago. Semple and his family came from the infected district of Manhattan shortly before the child was stricken. He has been working up to Monday in a hat factory in Willow Avenue, where 200 workmen are employed.

TYPHOID SPREADS IN PRISON.

Twenty-three Cases in Sing Sing—Arthur Harris of New York Dies from It.

SING SING, N. Y., Dec. 12.—Arthur Harris, a convict in the State prison here, died from typhoid fever this evening. He was sent up under a two years' sentence six months ugo from New York on conviction of forgery. His record in the prison was good.

There has been a further increase in the typhoid cases, and there are now twenty-three convicts ill. Several other prisoners show the first symptoms, but are not yet sick. Warden Johnson said to-night he now looked for a total of about thirty cases. He thinks those now being taken sick contracted the disease before the Croton water was discontinued in an unboiled state.

Whole Family Down with Typhoid.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Dec. 12.—The family of William H. Strickland, 69 Delaware Avenue, Ocean Grove, is sadly afflicted. Yesterday morning, Genevieve, the five-year-old daughter, died of typhoid fever, and the other six children are down with the same disease.

THE MANITOU'S COAT OF ICE.

Liner Shows Signs of a Stormy Passage from London.

Wrapped in a coat of ice, the Atlantic Transport liner Manitou steamed up the bay to her pier yesterday morning. To her must be accorded the distinction of being the first vessel to reach port this Winter clad in the picturesque garb that is indicative of a frigid atmosphere on the high seas. With her bridge rails, bulwarks, winches, stanchions forward, and other deck fittings covered with the frozen brine, her superstructure made a beautiful picture, as she slowly proceeded to her berth in the North River.

When the liner docked, her officers, in response to inquiries as to the weather encountered, reported the passage as one of unusual roughness. From her departure from London, on Nov. 29, until the shores of America were sighted, gales and high head seas of tremendous size and terrific strength had been encountered.

The fiercest gale encountered was on Monday and Tuesday of this week, when the wind attained a velocity of over seventy miles an hour. The weather was intensely cold all the way across, being accompanied with snow squalls on many occasions.

DUTY ON HAWAIIAN GOODS.

Importers' Suit Involves Question of the Time of Annexation.

In the case of William H. Crossman & Brother against the United States, argued yesterday before Judge Townsend in the United States Circuit Court, is involved the question as to whether or not the Hawaiian Islands came under the Constitution and laws of the United States immediately on the passage of the joint resolution of annexation on July 7, 1898, and before the act of April 30, 1900.

Crossman & Brother imported merchandise from Honolulu April 26, 1900, and duty was assessed under the tariff act of 1897. The importers claimed that at the time of their importation the Hawaiian Islands were a part of the United States, and their goods therefore were not dutiable.

The joint resolution of Congress of July 7, 1898, contained this clause:

Until legislation shall be enacted extending the United States Customs laws and regulations to the Hawaiian Islands the existing Customs relations of the Hawaiian Islands with the United States and all other countries shall remain unchanged.

The importers claim that this clause is unconstitutional because the Constitution provided that "the duties, imposts, and excises" shall be uniform throughout the United States. Judge Townsend reserved decision.

Attachment Against Defaulting Clerk.

An attachment for $18,000 was issued yesterday against Allerton Merritt, the clerk who disappeared on Aug. 6 last after having embezzled $26,000 from the Weehawken Wharf and Warehouse Company, of which he was a bookkeeper, receiving $10 a week. The clerk had a fad for collecting rare books and pictures. He had nearly $3,000 worth of books at the office of the warehouse company, and these were attached by the Sheriff, as well as some at his home. The attachment was also served on two booksellers, who, it is claimed, have books owned by Merritt.

ODELL AND THE CHARTER

Governor-Elect Not Committed to Revision Plans.

Attends Mr. Rives's Luncheon to Commissioners—A Letter of Gov. Roosevelt's Criticised.

George L. Rives, Chairman of the Charter Revision Commission, yesterday gave a luncheon at his home, 14 West Thirty-eighth Street, to the members of that body and Governor-elect Odell. All attended with the exception of Commissioners John D. Crimmins and C. C. Beaman.

The report of the commission was discussed at length, but the Governor-elect would not commit himself for or against any of the recommendations. It is understood, however, that Mr. Odell favors some of the recommendations, and will make the report the subject of a special message to the Legislature.

Mr. Rives read a letter he received yesterday from Gov. Roosevelt, in which he says in part:

I have referred the copy of the proposed charter amendments drawn up by your commission and have read them very attentively. It lies with the incoming Executive and Legislature to decide whether or not they shall be enacted into law; but I desire personally to express to you my very high appreciation of the value of your work. The amount of hard and exacting labor entailed by your task was very great, the opportunity for disagreements equally great. You are to be congratulated because your commission have been able to come to a unanimous decision, and still more because this decision has received the hearty support of the far-seeing and thoughtful men of the community.

Without committing myself on every specific change you recommend, I desire to say that in my judgment there can be no question as to the desirability of your scheme of amendments taken as a whole, and of the betterment they will work in our scheme of municipal government.

Some politicians said last night that Gov. Roosevelt should not have written such a letter. When a TIMES reporter asked Governor-elect Odell his opinion concerning it, he said:

"Really, I do not care to discuss it."

Mr. Odell went to Washington last night, where he will remain until Sunday, going then to Newburg. He will be in the city again the latter part of next week.

CITIZENS' UNION'S DENIAL.

New Association in Eighth District Repudiated—Party Influence Alleged.

The officials at the Citizens' Union's headquarters, 42 East Twenty-third Street, repudiate the so-called Citizens' Union Association of the Eighth Assembly District, incorporated at Albany on Tuesday. The incorporators are Bernard Lazones, Louis Friedel, Isaac Marks, Abraham Friedel, Charles K. Lebeck, Albert Lazarus, and Jacob Lazarus.

Thomas A. Fulton, the Secretary of the Citizens' Union, said yesterday:

"We have no knowledge of the persons named. They certainly had no authority from the Central City Committee to form an association. The new organization does not disturb us in the least."

Another member of the Citizens' Union charges that the new organization in the Eighth District is the work of people in close touch with the Republican organization.

HAWKES TO SUCCEED HESS.

The Republican Leader in the Twenty-fifth Insists Upon Resigning.

Charles A. Hess, for several years the Republican leader of the Twenty-fifth Assembly District, insists on resigning the leadership. He tendered his resignation last week, but the district organization declined to accept it.

The members of the County Committee for the district will meet at county headquarters this afternoon, when McDougall Hawkes, Vice President of the County Committee, will be selected to succeed Mr. Hess.

Mr. Hawkes is in Europe, but he will be represented by Assemblyman John A. Weekes.

Referring last night to his purpose of retiring from the leadership, Mr. Hess said:

"I have concluded positively not to stand for re-election as leader of the Twenty-fifth District. I cannot afford to do so. Its duties took me from my business, and the labor of the position involved too much sacrifice of time which should have been devoted to more important matters. My successor will have my cordial support."

REPUBLICAN CLUB STIRRED.

Gen. Tremaine's Candidacy for President—Mr. Gibbs's Reply to Charges.

There is trouble in the Republican Club. The report is that the Nominating Committee has named Gen. Henry E. Tremaine as the candidate for President to be supported by the "regulars" at the election next month.

Senator C. M. Depew is the present incumbent, but he declined to be a candidate in the face of certain opposition.

Ex-Judge W. M. K. Olcott will be named by the opposition, and his supporters declare openly that Gen. Tremaine is the candidate of National Committeeman Fred S. Gibbs, who wants to secure control of the club for party purposes.

Mr. Gibbs was blackballed when his name was first presented for membership, but at a subsequent meeting he was elected. When the reports in circulation were called to his attention yesterday he said:

"I do not aspire to the control of anything that is dead. The idea that Gen. Tremaine is my candidate is all wrong. As a matter of fact, I favor Judge Olcott. He stands now, and always has stood, for all that represents machine politics. When he is elected President of the organization the latter may become a useful Republican machine annex."

Some politicians say that Mr. Gibbs made this statement to secure votes for Gen. Tremaine.

REV. DR. SMITH VINDICATED.

Bride Was Not Weeping When Annie Castka Was Married.

The Rev. Dr. Victor C. Smith, rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Holy Faith, in East One Hundred and Sixty-sixth Street, appeared before Justice Lawrence, in the Supreme Court, yesterday as a witness in the action brought by Mrs. Annie Castka for annulment of her marriage. The testimony was so convincing that the action was withdrawn.

Annie Castka swore last week that her father had forced her to marry Frank Castka. Justice Lawrence abruptly adjourned the case until yesterday, saying he wanted an explanation why ministers married weeping brides.

Dr. Smith said: "It is not my habit to marry weeping brides. There were neither tears in the eyes nor voice of the plaintiff when I married her to the defendant. The party all seemed merry; in fact, so merry that I had to rebuke them for their hilarity."

"Did you notice any reluctance on the part of the bride?"

"None."

After some unimportant testimony, Justice Lawrence said: "I must refuse to grant a decree. The clergyman who married the pair has told a very clear and convincing story." Then the Justice gave the counsel permission to withdraw the action.

FOR FATAL ASSAULT, $1,000.

Damages Awarded to a Husband for Death of His Wife from an Attack.

John Lievnow, as administrator for Alice Lievnow, his wife, recovered a verdict of $1,000 yesterday in the Supreme Court in a suit brought against Leopold Baumann & Co., furniture dealers, of 1,421 Third Avenue, for damages in assault. The assault was committed in September, 1899, at the home of the plaintiff, 116 University Place. Four men in the employ of the furniture dealers attempted to take away some furniture which the Lievnows had bought on the installment plan. There was a small amount due to the defendants, although a payment had been made two days before.

When Mrs. Lievnow offered resistance David Dringer, one of the employes, knocked her down and kicked her, of the effects of which attack she died three days later. The trial lasted two days and a half and the jury was out for three hours.

NEWS OF NEW JERSEY

ROBBED OF NEARLY $1,000.

A Scotchman Who Took Two Drinks for a Chill Found Dazed and Penniless.

On Tuesday afternoon Andrew Morrison, apparently dazed, and without any money, was found walking on the Newark turnpike, just outside of Jersey City. Yesterday he was able to tell his story. He is a resident of Glasgow, Scotland, and arrived here on Saturday to inspect the Vaugh Sanitarium at Dackertown, N. J. He expected to return to Glasgow next Saturday. He went to Jersey City on Monday, intending to go to Deckertown by the Susquehanna and Western Railroad. He had with him nearly $1,000. He got on the wrong train, and was put off at West End Station.

Morrison says that while waiting for a car he became chilled and went to Carmino Balbo's saloon, where he took two drinks. From that moment he remembered nothing. To Detectives Pearson and Lynch Balbo denied that Morrison had ever visited his saloon. Thomas Ryan of 851 Newark Avenue told the police he had seen Morrison and Balbo in the saloon counting money Morrison had taken from his pocket. Balbo did not return the money to Morrison. Two other witnesses corroborated this statement, and Balbo was locked up.

Morrison said that when he entered the saloon he had one five-hundred-dollar note, three one-hundred-dollar notes, and nearly $200 in small bills.

QUEER BUSINESS MIX UP.

Silk Plant Bought at Sale by a Foreman —Creditors Astonished.

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 12.—Rudolph Cohen, silk commission merchant of New York; the Neuberger Silk Company, Kearns Brothers, silk dyers, and Haenionen Brothers have engaged counsel to protect their interests in connection with the failure of Henry Schippers, a silk manufacturer, who commenced business here about a year ago. Schippers made an assignment two weeks ago, but on the same day the plant was sold under foreclosure of a chattel mortgage. The mill is running as before, with the old proprietor acting as foreman and the old foreman as proprietor.

When Schippers began operations, he hired Charles Goldman as foreman, and a few days later Goldman advanced Schippers $1,000, taking a chattel mortgage on the property in the mill as security. Goldman was a member of the silk firm of Benz & Goldman that went into bankruptcy a little over a year ago. The assignment by Schippers was a surprise to some of the creditors, but the sale of the plant under foreclosure on the same day annoyed them, but they were astounded when they learned that Foreman Goldman and Proprietor Schippers had changed places. The financial statement given by Schippers in the assignment was: Liabilities, $3,700; assets, $1,148.

Several of the creditors attended the foreclosure sale and were surprised when they found that Goldman bid more than the mortgage for the plant.

LICHTENSTEIN'S STRATEGY WON.

Now the Bodies of His Father and Mother Are Buried Side by Side.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 12.—After trying for two weeks to obtain his father's body by peaceful means, Jacob Lichtenstein of Bedford Street, this afternoon, with the aid of a Justice of the Peace and Constable, gained entrance to the cemetery in which the elder Lichtenstein had been buried. A keeper who for the two weeks had been on guard at the locked gates to prevent the disinterment was lured away.

Solomon Lichtenstein was buried in October last by the New Jersey Burial Lodge in the Acudatte Achim Cemetery, East Orange. Mrs. Lichtenstein died two weeks ago, and her son wanted to disinter his father's body and place it beside his mother in another cemetery. The burial society refused because the President thought Lichtenstein was withholding $60, believed to have been bequeathed to the society. Accompanied by an undertaker, two grave-diggers, a Constable, and Justice of the Peace William N. Rapp, the son had the guard lured away, disinterred the body, and took it from the cemetery.

ASKED TO GIVE UP DANCING.

Church Requests Miss Marshall to Resign or End Her Dancing Classes.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 12.—The Trustees of De Groot Methodist Episcopal Church have asked Miss Edith Marshall of 78 South Twelfth Street to resign membership in the church or give up a dancing class for children which she recently organized. Miss Marshall's mother is organist in the church.

The young woman says she has not made up her mind yet what she will do, but declares she will be guided entirely by her mother. She declares she will never go to De Groot Church again.

PORTO RICAN LEGAL QUESTION.

Right to Recover Under American Law for Injury Done There to be Settled.

Francis Garrity has sued, in Hudson County, N. J., Edward Jenks and Francis Bowen for damages for an accident that happened at Porto Rico where the defendants were building a pier. The foreman motioned the crowd to stand back until a photograph of the work could be taken, but the workmen, mistaking the signal, removed the supports. A beam struck Garrity, who was an employe of the firm, breaking his leg. After his return to Jersey City he brought suit for $10,000 damages.

Plaintiff's counsel claim that American law prevails in Porto Rico. The defense will be that the Spanish laws were in force at the time of the accident, and that under the Spanish law a workman cannot sue his employer for damages.

MUNICIPAL LEAGUE MEETS.

Fourth Annual Convention Opens at Charleston, S. C.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Dec. 12.—The fourth annual convention of the League of American Municipalities met here to-day in the Auditorium. The Mayors were welcomed in addresses by Gov. M. B. McSweeney of this State and by Mayor Smyth of Charleston. Response was made by the President of the league, Mayor Henry V. Johnson of Denver.

The morning session was opened by the annual address of President Johnson. The first topic for discussion was, "What Policy Is Best to Use in Enforcing the Law Pertaining to Saloons?" on which subject Mayor Chappell of Columbus, Ga., read an interesting paper. M. N. Baker, editor of The New York Engineering News, read a paper on "Sewage Disposal Problems," and Consulting Engineer Thomas C. Perkins of Hartford, Conn., made an address on "A Practical Illustration of Municipal Ownership in a New England Community of 10,000 Inhabitants."

This evening the Mayors and civic officials and engineers are attending a reception at the City Hall, given by the Governor of the State and the Mayor of this city.

Large numbers of municipal officials have arrived here on every train since last night. Among them are the Mayors of Columbus, Ohio; Peoria, Ill.; Mayor Samuel Jones (Golden Rule Jones) of Toledo, Ohio, with a party of eighteen; Mayor Woodward of Atlanta, with a party of six; Mayor Stephens of East St. Louis, with twenty-two visitors; City Clerk Cramer of Camden, N. J., in a special car, with a party of fifteen; President William S. Alexander of Wilmington, Del., City Council, with twenty-five others; George V. Maltby of Jamestown, N. Y., with a delegation of five citizens, who will invite the league to meet next year in their city, and Alderman Berry of Detroit, with six city officials, who will work hard to elect Mayor Maybery of that city President of the league.

JUDGMENT AGAINST CITY.

Consolidated Ice Company Recovers $143,763 for Land Condemned.

A judgment for $143,763 was entered against the city yesterday in favor of the Consolidated Ice Company on a claim for the assessed valuation of property taken by the city for a public park between One Hundred and Eleventh and One Hundred and Fourteenth Streets and the East River. The award of the Commissioners of Appraisal was confirmed by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court last February, but Controller Coler refused to pay the award.

The ice company then brought an action in the Supreme Court for the recovery of the award. Corporation Counsel Whalen on Monday last consented to allow the judgment to be entered, and this was done yesterday.

BUSINESS MEN'S RESOLUTIONS.

The Board of Trade and Transportation Considers National Questions.

At the monthly meeting of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation held yesterday there was considerable difference of opinion expressed on a number of resolutions and several were laid on the table.

The first of the measures to be opposed was the resolution asking Lyman J. Gage to remain at the head of the Treasury Department. This resolution was presented by Mr. Wiley from the Executive Committee. After discussion the resolution was amended so as to express "the earnest hope" of the board that Mr. Gage would remain in office. The resolution was still opposed, and after more discussion was referred back to the Executive Committee.

A resolution was adopted asking Congress to make the volume of the currency more responsive to the requirements of trade and to insure the perpetuity of the gold standard.

The board also took strong

THE SENATE AND THE TREATY.

The Senate killed the arbitration treaty with England, a convention that embodied the intelligent spirit and deep moral conviction of the American people. It holds under advisement, with intent to kill, the reciprocity treaty with France, which would extend our commerce and stimulate our industries. It may to-day kill or maim the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

We hope it will neither kill nor maim. It is impossible that any Senator should have been convinced or influenced in his judgment by the arguments of the war party. The canal is worth building as an open waterway for the commerce of the world in peace and war. It is not worth while to build it as a war measure. To look upon the construction of it as primarily a war measure is an indication of mental inversion, an attempt to make the worse appear the better reason. The support of the Davis amendment has indeed been attempted by arguments and appeals that affront the intelligence of the Nation. No good cause was ever so bare of respectable advocacy.

For the treaty as negotiated there stands the Administration, the President, and the Secretary of State, who have made it the expression of a sober National policy, determined upon with deliberation, with full knowledge of all the facts, some of which cannot be known to the Senate, and with a wise regard for the interests and the honor of the United States. For it there is the certainty that its ratification would remove the only considerable obstacle to an immediate beginning of the work of building the canal. For it is the high purpose of assuring the continuance of friendly relations with that great nation whose good understanding with us is the chief contemporaneous guarantee of the peace of the world. For the principle it involves we have given our binding pledge.

The people have just expressed their confidence in the Administration. If the Senate does not share that confidence it ought to be able to give prevailing reasons for the want of it. Within its chamber attempts have been made to graft deformity upon the sound body of the treaty. It has engendered and justified the offensive suspicion that some of its members seek not merely the defeat of the treaty, but the death of the canal project itself.

To-day the Senate comes to the test in the vote on the Davis amendment. It will be a National misfortune, a repulse for straightforward and honorable procedure, and probably a deathblow to the canal if ratification shall be made meaningless by the adoption of this incongruous and unacceptable amendment.

MR. CLARK'S VINDICATION.

It is plain that Mr. CLARK of Montana is not to be allowed to get into the United States Senate without more trouble than he had expected. The alert and untiring Senator from New Hampshire has in effect given notice that any new application will be considered in the light of the facts brought out in the inquiry into the first election.

It will be remembered that Mr. CLARK, when it became certain that he would not be admitted, because of the methods he had adopted to secure his seat, resigned from the Senate, and that he then held that this action took the whole matter entirely out of the jurisdiction of the Senate. Mr. CHANDLER thinks otherwise. It is greatly to be hoped that Mr. CHANDLER is correct as to the law. He undoubtedly is as to the need of protecting the Senate from Mr. CLARK'S participation in its counsels. The question in which the people of the country are interested is not whether Mr. CLARK'S first election was not vitiated by his practices, but whether he was not personally disqualified by those practices for association with the members of the Senate, and for taking any part in the exercise of the high powers with which they are intrusted. It is a matter of far less consequence to the Nation whether the ordinary conditions imposed on the election of a Senator have been observed than it is that such men shall be kept out of that body. This is especially the case when the badness of the men take the form of corrupting the expression of the popular will in the manner shown in the case of Mr. CLARK.

The people of Montana are, of course deeply discredited by the fact that such a man is able, after the exposures of last session, to come again to the door of the Senate with a demand for entrance and credentials to back the demand. But we are not wasting any sympathy on the people of Montana. They cannot deny that they are negatively at least responsible for their plight. They cannot complain if Mr. CLARK is accepted as representing the actual standard of political decency in their community. But the people of the whole country have a right to insist that they shall not be forced to accept him as a member of the Senate if it can be helped.

WHERE IS THE MAYOR?

Has this city a Mayor? Is he alive, at large, and awake? If we have a Mayor who is alive, at large, and awake, we should like to know whether his attention has at any time been called to the state of public morals in the lower east side of this city and whether he has ever considered his official powers and duties in relation thereto.

Meetings have been held, committees have been formed, and organizations effected to undertake the work of purification. The newspapers have for weeks been full of the subject. Public indignation is aroused. The criminals themselves and their police accomplices and protectors are alarmed. The only quiet person in the community is the Mayor—if there really be a Mayor.

The charter puts into the hands of the Mayor an axe. It is called the power of removal. With that dreaded instrument he can always cause the laws to be enforced and corruption to be punished. A Mayor who could not prove charges of inefficiency and neglect of duty, if not more grave offenses, against the present Police Commissioners would be a very poor sort of Mayor. The Governor would give his approval with alacrity—there need be no fear about that.

There are a dozen motives any one of which, it would seem, ought to be potent enough to move the veriest human clod of a Mayor to some show of interest and activity in these times—ordinary decency, common morality, pride, respect for public opinion or the fear of it, self-respect, the obligation of his oath, political expediency, a rudimentary or vestigial sense of the attributes that differentiate men from the beasts, the cheap joy of getting the better of the better element, a sudden, impulsive desire to show that he is not a clod, the desire, even, to show that he is alive and at large. Some of these stimuli, surely, ought to prick the Mayor into action.

At any rate, the mental and moral pathologists ought to get hold of him while this mood lasts. They don't often have such a chance.

AMERICAN "INFANTS."

The whole theory of the Ship Subsidy bill is that Americans cannot compete with Englishmen or Germans in building and running ships. If any American were told that he was inferior in brains, energy, and business ability to the average Englishman or German, he would resent the statement as an insult or pity its author as a prejudiced and ignorant persons. Yet the evidence that the American people, and especially the American business class, are at least the equals of any other people is far more complete and convincing than the evidence can be in the case of individuals. Why is it that the confidence in himself and respect for himself which is so strong in each American seems to vanish when the question of aid from the Government is raised?

In the speech made by Mr. JAMES J. HILL, the President of the Great Northern Railroad, at Chicago on Saturday, some striking instances were given of the capacity of the American people to do the very things Congress is asked to vote money for more cheaply and better than they are done elsewhere in the world. Take water transportation on the lakes. Certainly the building of ships for that purpose in American yards suffers in comparison with foreign building as much as any other kind of shipbuilding. Labor for running the steamers is notoriously higher than it is in England. Yet, according to Mr. HILL, it costs only one-fourth as much to carry ore on the lakes as it costs to cary it in British waters, and only one-tenth as much to carry coal. In land transportation somewhat different conditions prevail, but the rate of seven mills per ton per mile charged in this country is not more than one-third the rate charged on the Continent of Europe, whether by privately owned lines or by State lines. Clearly the American people, for one reason or another, do understand the business of transportation and know how to make it pay in the long run. Why, if they were left free from Congressional interference, should they not get their share of the international trade? It is the opinion of Mr. HILL that they would do so. He is not in favor of subsidies, though we presume that he would not decline his part in them if they were thrust on him.

The reliance of our people, however, is not on the subsidies that Congress may take out of the pockets of some to enrich others. It is on the native energy and intelligence of the people themselves, such as Mr. HILL himself has shown. In his speech he told how a few years since he was visited by some Japanese manufacturers, who he found were using short staple India cotton in their mills. He offered to send them some American cotton to mix with their India cotton. "The result was that in two years every available foot of ship space on the Pacific was engaged by the middle of December until the next August." Another instance is thus recounted:

> In October, 1896, a number of our steel friends felt they would have to shut down some of their mills. I asked them if they would not bid on steel rails for Japan. The contract called for prices delivered at Yokohama. They said, "How could we get them there?" I told them we could give them a rate, and we did so, and they made the bid and they got the contract.

As the Ship Subsidy bill approaches a vote, such facts as these are beginning to tell on the public opinion of the country. The West, especially, is getting restless, and the Republican papers are protesting that the party should not be asked to carry the weight of special legislation for a small number of favored Eastern interests. We by no means are without hope that this most absurd and inexcusable measure may be defeated. If it can be blocked in this session, we are confident that it will be.

ANTI-"ANTI-SEMITISM."

One scarcely expected to see in St. Petersburg a demonstrative rebuke, implying organized sentiment, to anti-Semitism. Considering the attitude of Russian law and Russian officialdom toward the Jew, the riot occasioned last Thursday by the presentation of an anti-Jewish play in the Russian capital is most remarkable. But the demonstration is not, as one might gather from the cable dispatches, a reaction against long ages of Jewish persecution—the attempt to reform the attitude of the State toward a persecuted class—but simply the outward manifestation of the idea held by an educated and philosophical body of students that anti-Semitism as at present definsd represents a dangerous force at work at the very base of the existing order of things. This force, which had its inception in the Dreyfus case in France, has been augmented and unified during the Boer war, until it now includes the reactionary elements in all the larger European States, whether known under the names of Anti-Semitic, Clerical, Anglophobe, Nationalist, or a combination of all.

It is a long call from DREYFUS'S Island to St. Petersburg, from 1895 to 1900, and yet in the protest of St. Petersburg students against a play calculated to arouse race hatred was also a protest against perpetuating those conditions which made the Dreyfus case possible. When the fact that DREYFUS had been illegally convicted dawned upon the candid French mind, the men who considered it a public duty to have the case reopened were met by the ejaculations of "What! would you again arouse an anti-Semitic storm?" And it was this bogy which the Nationalists, Clericals, and Royalists flaunted in the faces of those whose only aim was to secure justice for the individual; and, when the word had lost its power to alarm, they all banded themselves together under the name of "Patriots" and openly attacked the Government, which at the eleventh hour had rescued the country from their sinister influence. How complete the rescue was has just been shown by the absence of any general anti-republican, anti-British feeling in the demonstrations which have just signified the personal sympathy of France toward Mr. KRUEGER.

There have for some time been indications that these reactionary elements, these factions, rearing themselves against the universal idea of truth and justice, of freedom of thought and action, were not confined to France. It was only when the South African war came that it was revealed that anti-Semitism was merely a means to promote some sort of union of action among the various Clerical and anti-Liberal elements on the Continent which could be concentrated and directed against Great Britain as the supreme representative of all those things which the reactionists of every country in Europe vociferously denounced. And, unconsciously or not, inspired by the same underlying principles of protest which identify the reactionists abroad, Mr. BRYAN conducted a campaign in this country which struck a peculiarly responsive note among the irreconcilables of Europe.

The appearance of international reaction upon the stage of the world's politics constitutes a factor which has so far escaped the eye of the political economist. It has nothing in common with existing Governments, nor does it seek, like Socialism, a general, reciprocal, and co-operative equality. Still, it is a movement which, in Europe at least, cannot but cause monarchies to examine themselves in the light of modern progress, and to strengthen their stability by supporting all those liberal and forward tendencies which are so abhorrent to the reactionists.

THE CITY AS AN INFRINGER.

A judgment has been entered against the City of New York for $818,074.32, with interest from May 14, 1897, being the amount of damages awarded the trustee of the successor of the assignee of an inventor named KNIBBS, for the use by the city of a device applicable to steam fire engines. The patent to KNIBBS was granted in May, 1864, and is very much broader in its scope than the present rules of the Patent Office would permit. The invention is undoubtedly useful. It consists of a relief valve in the discharge nozzle of the pump by which the water discharged, when impelled under greater pressure than the hose will carry, opens a clog-pass for itself and is returned to the suction pipe. The object of the device was to permit any of the streams discharged by a steam fire engine to be cut off without interfering with the other streams, or bringing an undue strain upon the hose lines. It was undoubtedly a useful improvement in attachments for power pumps. The same result could be reached by a dozen mechanical devices wholly different from that used. Mr. KNIBBS's patent was drawn, as to its first claim, to cover the principle of the invention, independent of the specific means by which the result was attained. Such a claim would be impossible of allowance under the rules of practice now enforced, and a patent which should contain such a claim would not be sustained by the courts. Nothing is better established in Patent Office practice than that an inventor is entitled to his invention; that to establish his invention he must show a way of attaining the result described, and that if he wants to cover other means he must take out other patents.

The principle underlying the invention of KNIBBS was applied to all steam fire engines as a necessary detail of construction. In this way it was adopted and used by the New York Fire Department. Suits to recover what the owners of the patent alleged to be due them were begun in 1877. The details of the litigation are unimportant. In 1897 a decision sustaining the patent was obtained, and a Master appointed to determine the amount of profits. Those for whom it has interest will find it indexed as CAMPBELL vs. The Mayor, &c., 28 Blatchford, 67, 9 Fed. Rep. 500; 47 Fed. Rep., 515. The Master, after a critical examination, reported that the city had profited by the use of the invention to the amount of $28,336. This was probably fair and just—it was certainly liberal. It probably represented a good many times what the inventor would have been extremely glad to take for the local rights, but that is of no consequence. Exceptions were taken by both parties. These exceptions were argued before Judge WHEELER in the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York, who, on the 14th of May, 1897, rendered a decision to the effect that, by the use of KNIBBS'S device, the city had saved $183,394.32 in hose, $28,336 in machinists' wages, and over $606,344 in salaries of men. The sum of these colossal economies, $818,074.32, was the award. This judgment, though rendered three and a half years ago, has just been entered. Interest and costs will bring the amount for which the city stands as a judgment debtor well over a million dollars.

It is not the province of a newspaper to review the opinion of so learned a jurist as Mr. Justice WHEELER. We may respectfully suggest, however, in the language of Solon Shingle, that $818,074.32 "is a lot of money," especially when rounded out with costs and interest for three and a half years. The lay mind is incapable of appreciating the judicial acumen which is capable of weighing economies practiced on so large a scale in a balance so delicate as to determine a saving in the item of hose alone of $183,394.32 during a period of fifteen years and four months.

We think the award of the Master, $28,336, was extremely liberal, and that the representatives of the city were warranted in taking exception to it as excessive. Had it been sustained it would have been abundantly compensatory to the owners of the patent, who long ago extinguished the rights of the inventor in the outcome of the suit against New York when $10,000 was accepted from the City of Troy for the local right of use. We incline to the belief that the United States Circuit Court of Appeals will promptly reverse Judge WHEELER and confirm the report of the Master. The maintenance of a Fire Department is not a gainful occupation for the city. It is extremely doubtful if any of the theoretical economies discovered by Judge WHEELER were, or could be, realized. It would be equitable for the city to pay an amount representing a fair royalty upon the device claimed in KNIBBS'S patent, and then to recover the same from the companies building steam fire engines which appropriated the device without license and embodied it in their constructions.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Even a great poet, using his powers with the most serious intention, can make himself ridiculous if he chooses an unfortunate subject or expresses an absurd opinion. M. EDMOND ROSTAND—about whose greatness there is no question—has just chosen the unfortunate subject, expressed the absurd opinion, and made himself ridiculous. He has contributed to Figaro a long string of verses in which he advises Mr. KRUEGER to go and see Queen WILHELMINA and get her to accompany him on a tour of the European Courts in search of aid, assuring him that every door will open to them and that their combined plea cannot fail of success. The value of this suggestion has been made evident by the events of the last few days, and the laughter which ROSTAND'S verses will excite arises, not from the badness of the verses—they are the reverse of bad—but from the fact that he has ignored the real character and appearance of the Boer leader and rashly posed him as a heroic figure—a new Oedipus beside a new Antigone. Now the little Queen of Holland, on a pinch, might play the rôle of Antigone—in parlor or boarding school theatricals—but the portly KRUEGER, with his pipe and his inseparable tall hat, with his mysterious fortune constantly clamoring for explanation, and with his well-known record for combining an archaic religion with a very up-to-date facility in the exploitation of strangers in particular and everybody outside of his own family in general—he is hardly a person to justify a poet's frenzy or to win the expensive admiration of Kings. EDMOND ROSTAND, however, is no ALFRED AUSTIN. In an evil moment he can talk nonsense, it seems, but his words as words are charming. As proof, here are two of his stanzas:

Alors, tu poseras ta lourde et large paume
Sur l'épaule de cette enfant,
Et vous vous en irez de royaume en royaume,
Couple que son rêve defend!

Et ce sera si noble et d'une telle ligne,
Si déchirant et si charmant,
Qu'Antigone, du fond de l'ombre, fera signe
A Wilhelmine, doucement!

—Certain facts and phenomena that were noticed yesterday in the old building on Elm Street, where the Board of Health is now giving free vaccination to all who will accept that slightly disguised but immensely valuable blessing, produced a most favorable impression on the observer's mind. It happened that this particular observer had never before been brought quite so close to the operations of a municipal department, and his expectations, based on the abundant criticisms of the City Government, were the reverse of high. He was both surprised and confused, therefore, when he saw, not only that the work in progress was not only good in itself, but that it was performed with no less courtesy than care. The operating doctor would not have manifested a more kindly personal interest in each object of his beneficent skill if he had been bestowing it upon clients from whom he was to receive a portly fee instead of upon those who paid nothing and were not particularly grateful at that. And, assisting the doctor by recording the applicants for protection and instructing them as to the necessary preparations for the needle, was an equally admirable policeman. He, too, though indistinguishable in appearance from the typical burly and rubicund guardian of crosswalks and corners, was a model of manner and patience. Especially notable was the gentleness with which he calmed the apprehensions of an incomprehensible Italian woman, evidently from the top floor of a rear tenement, and seconded her efforts to quiet her puny baby. The officer's bearing was that of the natural gentleman in the presence of a woman and mother who was frightened and helpless. No clearer evidence than he furnished could have been given of the often admitted, but hardly realized, truth that the average individual policeman has good intentions and a habit of carrying them into practical execution when circumstances—and his superiors—will permit. It is a great pity that this vaccination station is on a street so secluded, and in a building the old age of which is so uncomely. The business done there is excellently done, and if the attention of more people were drawn to the what and the how of the daily proceedings in that gloomy—and, alas! not too thoroughly ventilated—old school room, respectable New Yorkers would deny more frequently than they do that everything is as bad as bad can be in the conduct of the city's affairs.

—Very simple and obvious methods of overcoming difficulties and annoyances are sometimes curiously slow in suggesting themselves. The truth of this statement was illustrated by a reader of THE TIMES who came up into the office one day this week to complain that, since our establishment of a rule against the return by news dealers of unsold copies of the paper, he had often been unable to secure on his way to business his favorite source of information as to the doings of the world. He took one copy of the paper at his home, he said, but that he was accustomed to leave for the edification of the other members of the family, buying another for himself on the way to the elevated station. He doesn't go down town, however, till the morning is well advanced, and at that time of late he has often found the newsstands well supplied with the papers he doesn't want and destitute of the one he desires. This, our troubled friend declared, was a real hardship, and he more than intimated that we ought to abandon our new rule. The reality of the hardship was cordially admitted, but his deduction was gently questioned. "Why not," it was asked, "take two copies of the paper at home instead of one?" and then it was pointed out that to do so would involve no extra expense whatever, and would mean merely the substitution for one habit of another open to no possible objection on the score either of inconvenience or complexity. Our visitor thought a moment, and, with the remark, "Queer I didn't think of that before," went on his way in apparently complete contentment. Our system of outright sales and no returns is a good one, commendable on many practical grounds, and reprehensible on none. It probably costs us a few sales every day, but it does away with the wasting of a considerable amount of good black ink and good white paper, both somewhat expensive, and it does not necessarily inflict annoyance on a single reader, regular or occasional. With no reasons for abandoning the rule, therefore, and with dozens for keeping it up, we will continue to say, "No returns."

—Among the questions brought to us by the mails yesterday was this one: "Is Mr. RICHARD CROKER'S birthday a legal holiday in New York?" The signature was preceded by a "Yours, patriotically," and with only that for aid we are left to conjecture whether our correspondent is a sincere seeker for information or a sarcastic and cynical individual of pessimistic tendencies whose assumption of ignorance is merely the expression of disgust with the general tendencies of Tammany rule. Of course, Mr. CROKER'S birthday is not a legal holiday—yet. It may be one in time, and then, again, it may not. It is more than doubtful if Mr. CROKER himself will ever make any effort to attain this particular form of honor and recognition. There would be little or nothing in it for him, and it is his habit to grasp after the substantialities of wealth and power, leaving fame, as much as possible, to convenient friends who know how to combine ambition with docility. And even if Mr. CROKER did want a legal—of illegal—perhaps that would suit him better, on general principles—even if he did want an illegal holiday all his own, the present condition of metropolitan sentiment is not such as to encourage him in hoping for the immediate fruition of his desire. Mr. CROKER'S popularity is not at this moment quite coextensive with the city limits. To be cruelly frank, it seems to have been shrinking rapidly of late, and it now covers only a few out-of-the-way holes and corners. And upon every one of these holes and corners there are fixed the fierce eyes of many energetic sanitarians, amateur and professional, all firmly determined on making a final and complete clearing-up of the remnants. By the bye, Mr. CROKER was born on Nov. 24, 1843. Perhaps our correspondent didn't know that, either. Nov. 24, much as our climate has been mitigated in recent years, is still apt to be chilly, and, therefore, unsuited for public ceremonies and rejoicings. All things considered, we can only add to our denial that New York now has a Croker Day, in its calendar a modest prophecy that if it ever does have one, the anniversary will mark, not Mr. CROKER'S birth, but the date of his final severance of all relations, political and personal, with this city. That would be an event moderately well worth celebrating.

SAM SMALL'S REMARKS ON CUBA.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I see in to-day's edition of THE NEW YORK TIMES that the so-called Evangelist Sam Small vents his spleen on the people of Cuba by saying, "They are immeasurably inferior to the Southern darky." I also see that he was arrested in Havana for contempt of court; he calls this "a peculiar Cuban custom." Let me assure Mr. Small that there is nothing peculiar about this custom, but that it is the accepted procedure in such cases in this State, as in other civilized countries.

As for his opinion about the Cubans, I quote from THE NEW YORK TIMES of Nov. 21, 1900. Secretary of War Root, responding to a toast in Santiago the day before, said: "From newspaper reports I had come to imagine that the Cubans were only partially civilized, and I am agreeably surprised to find an enlightened people." And this he said after having made an extensive tour of the island.

Now my reason for writing this letter is not that I consider the so-called evangelist of much importance, but that you have given his interview prominence in to-day's issue of your paper, and many may be misled on a subject upon which it is well that we should be properly informed at the present time, so that we may judge the Cubans justly.

It is such articles as this, when reprinted in Cuban papers, that create false impressions and engender bad feeling between the Cubans and the Americans.

NEW YORK CITY, COSMOPOLITAN OR PROVINCIAL?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your brief "Topic of the Times" of to-day, speaking of the intense satisfaction of all the other cities—Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, and the like—over the abandonment of the Naval Arch by the people of New York, and assigning adequate reason therefor, induces me to say: A few days ago that journalistic curio, The Springfield Republican, evidently enraged by the failure of its strident anti-imperialistic utterances to obtain any recognition of importance, had a lengthy article in which it derided New York for still having a few lines of horse cars, some old wooden piers, uninviting approaches by land and water, &c., concluding, therefore, that New York is a provincial city. It gave New York little or no credit for its pre-eminence in population, wealth, and business enterprise, educational, art, and musical advantages, humane and philanthropical spirit and institutions, international as well as domestic trade, quick communication with all parts of the world by the finest steamships afloat—from which and many other circumstances a more truthful, just, and logical writer would conclude that New York is not only the metropolis of the country, but the most cosmopolitan city existing to-day and that ever did exist.

And, so far as street passenger traffic is concerned, New York has had for over twenty years the first elevated roads ever constructed, has had cable roads for about eight or ten years, and is now busily engaged in changing to electricity on the elevated and in putting in the first underground trolley ever put in anywhere. The overhead trolley has been in operation in the Boroughs of Brooklyn, Bronx, Queens, and Richmond for years, and the principal reason it has not been put in in Manhattan is that the people did not want it and the authorities discouraged it, thus compelling the fraction companies to solve the storage battery or sub-trolley system. A better informed paper than The Republican and a juster editor would know and admit these things, and the wisdom of delay in this matter has already been amply demonstrated.

The rural or provincial editor, when he comes to the discussion of New York, attempts that which he does not understand and would better leave alone, for it is only those who have resided here for years and mastered the subject who are competent for the task. For no other city has anything like the possessions and advantages that this city has, as all who come from other cities, after sufficient residence here, frankly and freely admit; and I have never seen an exception, having questioned many, no matter what their prepossessions or previous residence.

Travelers assure me that in no city of this country or the world can they get around so easily and comfortably by street conveyance as in this, it not being necessary, except in rare cases, to patronize a horse car at all. And, by the way, if it be not an impertinence, what has New York done to build up the educational and other advantages of other sections of the country, especially New England, and what has she ever got for it except slander and misrepresentation, especially by the bucolic editor? And what about her generous help to other people everywhere in the day of distress? These things would seem to be proper subjects for consideration by the rural editor who ignorantly or maliciously calls New York a provincial city, mad, perhaps, because his illogical and intemperate preachments are not allowed to control all things, both terrestrial and celestial, but fall impotent and unheeded upon the adjacent vacuity.

"A very fine sermon this morning, a very fine sermon," said young Mr. Muttonhead to Dr. Johnson, as they emerged from the church door.

"That may be so, Sir, that may be so," replied the sarcastic Dr. Johnson, "but it is impossible for you to know."

And this is the category the crossroad editor often finds himself, or, rather, is found, in, (Mr. Muttonhead's, I mean.)

TRIUMPH OF SAFE POLICIES.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The speeches of Lord Salisbury and the American Ambassador at the Guildhall banquet on the 9th of November accentuate in a significant manner not only the good feeling which already exist between the two nations which they represent, and which we all confidently hope may continue to exist and to increase, but they bring to mind more vividly the importance of those two great events which have just taken place coincidently in England and America.

Te return of Lord Salisbury and of President McKinley to office have a very similar bearing upon the welfare both of England and the United States. It marks the approval of the great majority in these two countries of those principles and political doctrines which have during the last years produced the prosperity and advance of the masses, and it insures for another period the continuance of those precepts and the consequent blessings that are to be derived from them.

In the United States the return of the Republican Party to power means not only the return of that large and broader policy which has marked the external relations of the Government during the last four years; it means also the uninterrupted policy of a sound financial system, retained upon the present gold standard. It means the rejection of the dangerous doctrine of Mr. Bryan for the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, a doctrine which, if Mr. Bryan had been elected and it had been carried into effect would have upset the entire currency of the United States, and brought misery and desolation into countless communities and homes. It is therefor that the more conservative elements of both nations have every reason for self-congratulation and satisfaction that those dangers of a radical legislation upon vital questions of National interest have been thus forestalled and avoided.

There is another matter, it seems to me, for congratulation and satisfaction also in the fact that the platform upon which Mr. Bryan stood in the United States as a candidate for the President was rejected and finally defeated, including the pro-Boer resolutions and sympathy. To all those who have really at heart the interest and the advisability of increasing those friendly relations which now exist between the two Governments of England and the United States, and who bear in mind the action taken by the British Government among the European powers during the war between the United States and Spain, any such resolutions of sympathy in the programme of a party platform were alike distasteful to their political feelings and to their sense of a friendly neutrality.

I take pleasure in adding to that of the majority of the American people my own expression of satisfaction at the defeat of such precepts and at the return of other and more solid principles of political good faith, and the desire of binding together more closely those kindred interests and relations which are alike the hope and the strength of these two great factors of the Anglo-Saxon race. CHARLES GIBSON.

REASONS FOR PROTESTANT APATHY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The letters which almost daily appear on your editorial page are a source of much interest, discussing, as they do, various matters; but the subject of great import, to me, is that of the Christian religion, and I am glad that you so freely give space in your admirable paper to the publication of so many contributions bearing on this vital matter, but to which not many men give much attention.

I am a Protestant; but I find much to criticise and condemn in the way we have forsaken Christlike precept and example and have substituted ceremonies and usages, which are a hindrance rather than a help to the Gospel's advance. I refer at this time to the matter of religious apathy, which several contributors have so forcibly brought to your readers' attention. One cannot be honest and deny that this indifference is a reality; and I regret to have to say that it is confined almost wholly to the Protestant churches. There is never an effect without a cause in nature, and this rule holds good in the affairs of men. The Protestant apathetic condition is admitted, and I do not believe that the cause is found in the fact that churches harbor hypocrites or do not employ trained, talented men to preach and preside. In many churches I believe the apathy is the product of the fact that the church buildings, supposedly dedicated to God, and therefore consecrated structures, are prostituted to base and worldly usages. I well remember, when a boy, witnessing and taking part in plays and entertainments on stages built over the altar, in the old, country church—"Among the Breakers," ludicrous pantomimes, dialogues of such a farcical nature as to convulse the audience, which would express its appreciation of "its money's worth" by hand clapping and stamping of the feet. Oyster suppers and festivals were events which polluted the church, much the same as New York's garbage robs old ocean of its primeval purity to-day.

I am now attending an evangelical church, where recently an "entertainment" was given of such a nature as to cool the religious sentiment of an enthusiast. But what must be the conclusions of those who are not very much troubled concerning the welfare of the soul, and who live within the influence of such a church? On the Lord's day the sacred and soul-stirring hymns, as sung by the congregation, and the prayer of the minister are wafted by the winds across the street to the open window, where, perchance, may be sitting the indifferent one, but on Monday night there falls upon his ear the sound of revelry and boisterous approbation of something said or done on a stage in the same building whence, but a few hours before, came an influence which stirred the heart and prompted the thought, "I ought to be a Christian."

But some pastors are spiritually minded, and where such a one is holding forth the church building is used for the sole purpose of worship; and, having been connected at one time with such a church, I can testify from experience that apathy was quite foreign to our nature there.

The true Church of God is a spiritual body, having visibility, consisting only of those regenerated by the Holy Spirit and baptized on a personal profession of faith. How, then, can we misuse and hold up to ridicule the church by diverting its purposes into base and wanton practices? The Roman Catholics are absolutely consistent in maintaining a standard of reverence for the church building, and some of the Protestant denominations might well emulate their Romish contemporaries in this regard, and apathy would not be such a prominent factor in the discussion as to why pews are empty and why sermons never "hit the mark." H. E. SCOFIELD, Layman.

West Hoboken, N. J., Dec. 9, 1900.

CHURCH APATHY DISCUSSED.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The subject of "Church Apathy" is, indeed, most important, and one worthy of serious thought and action. It would seem to me that "Layman" is about right when he says that ministers, like poets, are born and not made; that theirs is a "calling" rather than a "profession," and that, in this dollar-worshipping age, we want men of high ideals and ability, men whom we can look up to and respect for their integrity and broad-mindedness, rather than men who pander to the prevailing sin of the day, viz., the glorification of place and wealth rather than that of character.

Then, again, so many ministers preach in such a mournful strain that, as a friend of mine aptly voices it, "I do not go to church because I usually come away with such a dejected feeling, and I have enough troubles of my own without having them added to by listening to doleful sermons."

There are also men, (unlike many "pious frauds" who regularly attend church,) whose conscious makes cowards of them, and who, while robbing the widow and orphan during the week, have sense of honor, feelings of remorse, or pale cast of thought sufficient to prevent their worshipping the Lord in the beauty of holiness and righteousness on the Sabbath. These latter we must certainly respect more than the former, of whom there are so many. It may also be added that perhaps golf playing and cycling have something to do with non-church attendance. Certainly it is a fact that, compared with the increase in population, churchgoing is sadly on the decrease, and, as this is a matter of vital importance to all, it is one which demands our best consideration and remedy. Bells as a Public Nuisance.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was interested in your article on "Bells as a Public Nuisance." I have a tender recollection of boyhood days, when I used to lie on the hillside and listen to the chimes of the village church in the valley below. In such a case the bells fitted in with the surroundings, and no one could possibly object to them. How different, however, is the point of view of the sufferer in the sick-room, racked with nerve destroying pain.

I feel so strongly on this matter that I trouble you with an inquiry as to the correctness of the report that the new cathedral which is being built on Morningside Heights is to be equipped with a peal of bells which shall be superior in weight to those of the Cathedral of St. Patrick. I trust that this report is not correct, because St. Luke's Hospital is only a block or so away from the cathedral, and it would be the refinement of cruelty to a large number of the patients if the cathedral bells were rung frequently.

The Times as Spokesman.

From The Newark Daily Advertiser.

Not in the length and breadth of this land is there a printed publication which will not agree with our esteemed contemporary THE NEW YORK TIMES in its position, courageously taken, for the remission of the tariff upon paper and pulp used in books and newspapers. The tax has nursed an infant industry into a giant, which seizes every publisher by the throat and wrings from him an exorbitant price. The tariff does not afford protection in the true sense of the word, but it shields extortion.

The statesman who beats down this unjust and indefensible tax will deserve and receive the famous approbation of every newspaper in the land, irrespective of its politics.

Wife—How much are you going to give me to spend?—Syracuse Herald.

Small Jimmy—Say, dem lubly words once more.

Smaller Gladys—I said I don't want you to be wastin' your money on me for ice cream and sweets any more.—Boston Globe.

Devious Weighs.

"How many pounds are there in a ton?" asked the teacher.

And the timid, clean-faced boy with a patch in his trousers timidly suggested:

The Universal Ego.

"Some men," said the quoter, "are born great; some achieve greatness, and—"

"And the great majority," the cynic interrupted, "believe they come under either or both of those heads."—Philadelphia Catholic Standard and Times.

Meaningless.

Mr. Hubb—Nonsense! I do not see why I should take any notice of the epithet he applied to me. It meant nothing.

Mr. Penn—What! Why, the man called you a blithering idiot.

Mr. Hubb—Exactly; and there is no such word in the English language as blithering.—Philadelphia Press.

CHUM WITH OLD NATURE.

James Barton Adams in Denver Post.

When weary and worn with the trials of earth and life looks exceedingly blue;
When appetite fails and the angel of sleep seems shirking its duty to you,
When health's rosy flush has died out from your face and dim is the light of your eyes,
And the breast that once glowed with the fires of delight now serves as a wellspring of sighs,
Don't picture a vision of coffin and flowers and silence and crape on the door,
Of sober-faced women and men all in black and hearts that are bleeding and sore,
But shed all your troubles and cast a dark cloak of forgetfulness over the pile
And seek those magnificent hills over there, and chum with old Nature a while.

The doctors will feel your weak, fluttering pulse and scan the expanse of your tongue,
Will listen with ear to your bosom to hear if you're short, whole or part, of a lung,
Will dose you until you are weary of life with potions and powders and pills,
And stuff your poor stomach with nauseous drugs and stuff your breast pocket with bills.
Seek not for relief by the medicine route,
but pack up your roughest old duds,
Treat the friend who protests near the tail of his coat with a series of leathery thuds,
Turn your back on prescriptions and patented slush so worthless and damnably vile,
And fly to the mountains, where heaven prescribes and chum with old Nature a while.

There is life in the breeze that will kiss your wan cheeks, there is health on the wings of the air,
There is food in the wonderful scenic display for the soul that has famished on care,
There is music most sweet in the song of the brooks and a laugh in their silvery spray
As it gleams in the light of the cheery old sun like a shower of jewels at play,
And the frost in the air whets the appetite down to an edge that's as keen as a knife,
And the blood in the veins seems to dance with delight to the music of newly born life;
The despondency cloud that has ruled on your face will yield up the throne to a smile,
If you'll just pull your freight for those mountains so grand and chum with old Nature a while.

MORE CRITICISM OF BRITISH GOVERNMENT

Acrimonious Debate in House of Commons on Boer War.

Mr. Bryce Denounces Sir Alfred Milner —Report on Supply Agreed To.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—Considerable irritation was aroused during yesterday's debate on supply in the House of Commons.

Sir Robert T. Reid, Q. C., (Liberal,) Member for Dumfries Burghs, painted a gloomy picture of the conditions in South Africa. He said that after a fourteen months' war, costing £5,000,000 a month, anarchy was prevalent, famine was threatened, and that might be followed by a native rising. An attempt to place the colonies under military rule, he added, would imperil the very existence of the empire. He thought the time had arrived for offering the Boers terms not inconsistent with British dominion. All ideas of unconditional surrender should be discarded.

The Right Hon. James Bryce, (Liberal,) Member for South Aberdeen, followed on similar lines. He suggested granting general amnesty to the Boers now in arms as legitimate belligerents. The Government, he added, had no right to treat the Boers as rebels. The negotiations, Mr. Bryce also said, should not be intrusted to Sir Alfred Milner, (the British High Commissioner,) who was the object of almost universal distrust, including that of at least half the Queen's subjects in South Africa.

The Right Hon. William St. John Brodrick, the Secretary of State for War, hotly challenged the statements anent Sir Alfred Milner. He declared that, whatever else it might do, the Government would never weaken the power or the responsibility possessed by Sir Alfred.

Sir Robert Reid's speech, Mr. Brodrick asserted, was impracticable, unwise, and mischievous. He went out of his way to gratify the Queen's enemies. The Government was perfectly willing to offer terms for surrender, so long as it could not be interpreted as proof of weakness and thereby cause a prolongation of the guerrilla warfare.

After further recriminations the report on Supply was agreed to.

TRANSVAAL TO BE TAXED.

Chancellor of Exchequer Promises It Shall Pay Large Part of Cost of the War.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—In the House of Commons yesterday, in the course of the discussion in Committee of Ways and Means, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Right Hon. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, promised that a considerable portion of the cost of the war should be obtained from the Transvaal.

He added that a Treasury commission was about to proceed to the Transvaal to ascertain its assets and their taxable capacity. Sir David Barbour, continued the Chancellor, had been selected for this task.

Sir David Miller Barbour, K. C. M. G., was a member of the Council of the Governor General of India from 1887 to 1893; was Royal Commissioner to inquire into the conditions and prospects of sugar-growing colonies in 1896, and recently Commissioner to inquire into the finances of Jamaica.

THE IRISH CONVENTION.

Resolution Favoring Abolition of Landlordism Passed.

DUBLIN, Dec. 12.—The National Convention resumed its sessions to-day. John E. Redmond presiding.

After resolutions had been adopted amending the constitution of the United Irish League and making the Nationalist Convention an annual fixture, William O'Brien made himself still more popular with the delegates by moving a strongly worded resolution in favor of the abolition of landlordism in Ireland and the transfer of the soil to the occupying proprietary.

Ireland's struggle, Mr. O'Brien declared, should continue unceasingly until the landlords were forced to abandon their present intolerable system of dual control. One branch of the Irish League would devote its time to bringing to the doors of landlords, land grabbers, and their castle allies the inconvenience of landlordism.

The resolution was adopted amid the utmost enthusiasm.

Resolutions appealing for funds from America and elsewhere, to be used against jury packing and for the propagation of the Irish language, were adopted.

The convention also adopted a resolution inviting Thomas Sexton and Michael Davitt to return to Parliament.

The subscriptions announced to the Parliamentary Fund included £100 each from the Hon. Edward Blake and The Freeman's Journal.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—Commenting upon the Nationalist convention's resolution to abolish dual ownership, The Daily News says:

"The impracticability of dual ownership is too hastily assumed; but the union of Mr. William O'Brien and Mr. T. W. Russell in a demand for general compulsory purchase makes a formidable combination, which may bring the Ulster Protestants into political agreement with the Home Rule Catholics."

The Daily Chronicle, which urges the Government to take steps for the complete buying out of the landlords, says:

"The time must come when the plunge will be inevitable, and just now it would come as one of those graceful concessions for which Lord Salisbury's foreign policy is much more noted than his domestic policy."

The Standard expresses the belief that John E. Redmond will decline the leadership at the next session of Parliament.

"TIM" HEALY NOT DOWNCAST.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—Timothy M. Healy is not a whit disturbed by his exclusion from the Irish Party. He has neither the intention of resigning nor of forming an opposition section. He is avowedly hostile to John Dillon and still more so toward T. P. O'Connor, who, Mr. Healy alleges, is behind the whole movement, and he is sincerely hopeless of the cause of Ireland. In the course of a lengthy interview Mr. Healy said:

"I care nothing for the expulsion. Inasmuch as such action and scenes hurt our cause, I shall take no notice of the resolution, nor, if I can help it, will any of my Parliamentary supporters. My constituents passed a vote of confidence in me last Friday. I shall acknowledge it and continue to do the best I can to help Ireland on the lines I have pursued for the last twenty years.

"Yes, I shall look upon Mr. Redmond as my leader and follow his wishes. But the O'Brien crowd is not likely to let Mr. Redmond continue long in the leadership."

Mr. Healy, in a letter to his constituents acknowledging a vote of confidence, says:

"The seasoning which comes to a campaigner of old service converts even the rubric of the gloomiest executioner into a source of gayety. Indeed, I find so much fun in poor William O'Brien that I freely forgive him all his incantations."

POWERS AGREE AS TO CHINA.

Conditions Outlined by von Buelow on Nov. 19 Only Slightly Modified.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—The negotiations of the powers in regard to the joint China note were concluded satisfactorily on Tuesday.

All the powers agree to the conditions as outlined on Nov. 19 by Count von Bülow, the German Imperial Chancellor, with the exception of the introductory clause, saying that the demands are irrevocable, which is eliminated.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—The Peking correspondent of The Daily Mail, wiring on Tuesday and confirming the reports of the agreement as to the collective note, says that a committee of representatives of the powers has been chosen to regulate the conferences with the Chinese plenipotentiaries.

ORDERS TO AMERICAN WARSHIPS.

Only Two Vessels to Remain in Pe-Chi-Li Waters During Winter.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—With a view to avoiding the danger of having any of the United States war vessels caught fast in the ice in the Gulf of Pe-Chi-Li, at the mouth of the Pei River, during the Winter, the Navy Department has reduced its representation in that quarter to two ships.

One is the Monocacy, which has been ordered into a mud dock in the Pei River, near Taku, where she will serve as a station ship. She will be frozen in tight, but will be perfectly safe in her dock from the ordinary vicissitudes of the Winter. The other vessel is the New Orleans, which has been turned into a dispatch boat for the time being, plying between Shanghai, Che-Foo, and Taku at regular intervals. She will be kept clear of the ice at Taku as far as possible, and will not be expected to enter the river mouth in case of danger.

The army transport service has landed all the supplies deemed necessary to carry Gen. Chaffee's troops comfortably through the Winter, so that it will be unnecessary for any of those ships to enter the Pei-Ho. Gen. Humphrey, the Quartermaster in charge, has established a new base at Shang-hai-Kwan, which, while located on the Gulf of Pe-Chi-Li, is said to be approachable by chipping all through the Winter, and which is connected with Peking by a fairly good road.

SULTAN WAS VERY AMIABLE.

Displayed Much Friendliness to the American Guests at the Dinner Last Monday.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 11.—The Americans were the only foreigners at the dinner given at the Yildiz Kiosk on Monday. The Sultan sat between the Grand Vizier and the United States Chargé d'Affaires, Lloyd C. Griscom, and showed unusual cordiality. His Majesty's display of excessive friendliness for Capt. Colby M. Chester of the United States battleship Kentucky is attributed to his desire to demonstrate that the visit of the Kentucky to Smyrna has produced no irritation.

Capt. Chester sailed for Smyrna to-day in order to join the Kentucky. Prior to his departure he thanked the authorities for his agreeable visit, of which, he added, he will retain the most pleasant memories.

Some question has arisen in regard to an alteration of the clause in the contract for building a cruiser for Turkey in the United States, concerning the supply of ammunition, but no importance is attached to it.

Trial of Peter Austin Begins.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Dec. 12.—Peter Austin, the Stormville farmer who killed his farmhand, Charles Brower, fourteen years ago and threw the body into an old well on his farm, was placed on trial in the county court here to-day, under an indictment for murder in the second degree. The crime was not discovered until August last, when a new owner of the farm was cleaning out the well, and found the skeleton. When Austin was arrested he confessed that he killed Brower, but said he did so in self-defense. He will go on the stand to-morrow and show the jury three scars on his legs which he says were inflicted by Brower's knife in a scuffle.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

A fresh, if not an entirely novel, diversion is now dividing the interest and attention of the modish world. This is the Christmas shopping, which this year, seemingly more than ever, is crowding the streets and stores. The hostesses who have their receptions this and next week are feeling the effect of the shopping craze, and these as well as other entertainments will not be as well attended from now on to Christmas itself.

The calendar for to-day is fairly well filled with incidents and events. There will be a number of receptions, including those to be given by Mrs. John Wolfe and Mrs. Grenville Kane of 110 East Thirtieth Street, the first of two for Miss Sibyl Kane; by Mrs. Edward N. Crosby, of 165 Madison Avenue for her granddaughter, Miss Nina Floyd Crosby; by Mrs. W. H. Davidge a third day at-home for Miss Frances Davidge; by Gen. and Mrs. Joseph Jackson of 138 East Thirty-fourth Street for Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Jackson, Jr., and by Mrs. William Fraser of 36 East Sixty-fourth Street.

The event of the day, however, will be the First Assembly Ball at the Astoria. This promises to be the most brilliant and successful ball that the "Matriarchs" have ever given. For weeks past the small army of débutantes have been anticipating the event, and dressmakers have been busily engaged in making gowns for fair wearers. The decorations, as is usual at the Assembly balls, will not be elaborate, and, in fact, the fair faces of the girls and their dainty frocks, contrasting with the richer stuffs and deeper shades of the matrons' gowns, will be sufficient decoration. The guests will enter by the private entrance of the Waldorf on Thirty-third Street, and will go to the east foyer, which is to be lined with palms. They will then, after leaving their wraps, proceed through an avenue of palms in the corridor to the west foyer, where Mrs. Ogden Goelet, Mrs. John Jacob Astor, and Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, and Mrs. Charles A. Post will receive. The walls of this foyer will be draped with garlands of smilax and roses, and the sides will be banked with palms. The front of the box tiers of the main ballroom are to be draped with garlands. The boxes in the upper tier will not be used. They will be filled with palms and chrysanthemums. Supper will be served soon after midnight, after informal dancing, at small tables in the Astor gallery. After supper the cotillion, which is to be led by Craig W. Wadsworth, will be danced. The favors will be simple and tasteful, but not rich. For the women there will be satin work bags, decorated with flowers, and for the men boutonnières of flowers to match those on the bags.

There are to be a number of dinners given to-night from which the guests will go to the Assembly ball. Mrs. Luther Kountze of 5 East Fifty-seventh Street; Mrs. Albert B. Boardman of 40 East Fifty-third Street; Mrs. Lewis Quentin Jones of 116 West Fifty-fifth Street; Mrs. Adrian Iselin, Jr., of 9 East Twenty-sixth Street, and Mrs. John Sloane of 883 Fifth Avenue, will be among the hostesses at their dinners.

Dean Robbins of All Saints' Cathedral, Albany, will officiate at the ceremony, which will be at 4 P. M., at Gen. Pierson's residence, 20 West Fifty-second Street. The wedding is to be a small and quiet one, and there will be no reception.

Blake, Jacob Wendell, and Evert Jansen Wendell.

Peters, and Mr. and Mrs. Francis Burton Harrison are all having series of dinners given in their honor. Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Collier is planning a series of runs for his Monmouth County Hounds during Christmas week at Lakewood, if the weather permits. Another large Christmas house party will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid at Ophir Farm. The members of the Hempstead colony, with few exceptions, will be in their houses over Christmas, and there will be much gayety there. There will be several house parties also at Cedarhurst, and it begins to look as if the Christmastide would be spent out of town by the majority of the men and women of New York's modish world.

One of the largest of the coming-out receptions of the season was given yesterday afternoon by Dr. Octavius A. White and Mrs. White, (Miss Elizabeth Chanler,) at their residence, 1,011 Madison Avenue, to introduce their granddaughter, Miss Helen White Stevens, a daughter of Mrs. Berkeley Mostyn. The day was the forty-fifth anniversary of the wedding of Dr. and Mrs. White, and for that reason was selected by them for the bringing out of their eldest grandchild. Miss Stevens is a direct descendant of Gov. Winthrop of Massachusetts and Gov. Peter Stuyvesant of New York, being the eighth in direct line from the last, and is a cousin of Winthrop Rutherfurd and Mrs. Henry White, wife of the Secretary of the American Legation in London. Her father was the late Alexander H. Stevens, a son of Dr. Alexander H. Stevens, who married Miss Lloyd of Lloyd's Neck, L. I., a granddaughter of James Lloyd, appointed by King James as the original Lord of the Manor. The guests were received by Mrs. White, who was gowned in black velvet, and Miss Stevens, assisted by Mrs. White's two daughters, Mrs. Berkeley Mostyn and Mrs. Ledyard Stevens. The débutante wore a frock of white point d'esprit over white satin, with fluffy frillings of chiffon, and carried a bouquet of roses. Mrs. Mostyn was gowned in black lace over white, pailletted, and Mrs. Stevens was in gray silk with steel trimmings. The girls who assisted in receiving were the Misses Sibyl Kane, Anita Boulton, Nellie Hard, Lena and Julia Fanshawe, Katharine G. Pratt, Molly Lefferts, Elsie Schefer, Marion Low of Brooklyn, Eleanor Swayne, Chloise Hatch, Charlotte H. Prime, Helen Olyphant, Bertha Wurts of New Haven, Dorothy Edwards, and Ella De Peyster. ***

The Oriental tea given yesterday afternoon by Ernest Rudolph Gunther, at his apartment, 1 East Forty-first Street, was largely attended. Mr. Gunther's sister, Mrs. Wilbur Bloodgood, assisted in receiving. There were an Arabian band, a real Turk to serve coffee, and a real Japanese to serve tea. There were also a geisha girl, who sang to an accompaniment of the national music, and a howling dervish. There were also an Egyptian woman and a Ceylonese, the latter of whom performed interesting sleight-of-hand tricks, and the former of whom gave several Egyptian songs. THE YALE BICENTENNIAL FUND.

Committee Issues an Appeal for the $1,000,000 Still Needed.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 12.—The Committee on Funds for the Yale bicentennial to-day issued a call to the alumni and undergraduates for the sum needed to pay for the auditorium vestibule and the two bicentennial buildings, which it was originally proposed to have completed in time for the celebration next October. The deficit is $1,000,000. President Hadley, in his appeal, says:

"The favorable conditions prevailing in the business world and the renewed confidence in the Yale spirit among graduates seem to make the present an auspicious time for completing the bicentennial fund of $2,000,000.

"In addition to conditional pledges of $250,000, the total amount of subscriptions to the funds of the university received since the starting of the bicentennial movement has been over $900,000, of which nearly one-third has been for special objects. But Yale cannot feel satisfied with the result as long as there remains a large body of graduates which has not responded to her appeal."

Special to The New York Times.

MATTOON, Ill., Dec. 12.—Dr. Franke, a prominent physician of Toms Creek, Tenn., has written telling his brother that he is alive and prosperous, although his relatives have mourned him as dead for seventeen years.

His father died, and in settling up the estate Franke was officially declared dead by a decree of the Circuit Court, and every one concluded that he was actually so. He assigns no reason for his action.

Branford Poorhouse in Bad Condition.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 12.—Branford people are thoroughly aroused over the report made by the State Board of Charities on the condition of the town's poorhouse. The almshouse is in much need of repair, and six inmates are exposed to the weather on account of the cracks in the building. One old woman inmate had her foot frozen in the recent cold snap because of insufficiently heated rooms. The farm is run on the contract system on $2.50 a head, and the six paupers, the manager, and his seven children are forced to live on this $15 a week. Repeated demands on the Selectmen have met with no response, and public sentiment has reached the boiling point.

Norman is in mourning on account of the recent death of his father and brother, there was only a small number of guests, but these included representatives of the leading families in Newport, of the army and navy, State officials, and guests from Providence and Boston. The Rev. Dr. Henry Morgan Stone, rector of Trinity Church, Newport, officiated. The bride was given away by her father. She was attended by her sister, Alice Little, fourteen years of age.

The best man was the bridegroom's brother, George H. Norman. The ushers were Messrs. Stuyvesant Leroy, John Bolt, Roland K. King, and J. Neilson Howard. A reception followed at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. Edward D. Bolt.

Col. and Mrs. Norman will sail for Europe on Saturday, and their wedding journey will comprise a tour of the world. They will return to Newport early next Summer.

Stone—McCormick.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 12.—Herbert Stuart Stone and Miss Mary Grigsby McCormick, both of Chicago, were married here to-day, their wedding being one of the social events of the present season. The marriage took place at noon in Brown Memorial Presbyterian Church, the guests including practically all the social leaders of Baltimore and many of equal prominence from other cities. The Rev. Thomas Hall of New York officiated, assisted by the Rev. John Timothy Stone of Brown Memorial Church. Melville E. Stone, Jr., brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man, and Miss Carrie McCormick, sister of the bride, was maid of honor.

The ceremony was followed by a wedding breakfast at Cloverdale, the beautiful home of Mrs. Walter B. Brooks, grandmother of the bride.

The bride is the daughter of William G. McCormick of Chicago and the bridegroom the son of Melville E. Stone, formerly of Chicago, now residing in New York. Both bride and bridegroom are prominent and popular in the social circles of Chicago, where they will take up their residence on their return from an extended bridal tour.

An Independence Hall Relic.

From The Philadelphia Record.

A well-known Admiral, who did notable service in the war with Spain, told a good story on himself when in town recently. He came to the city during the restoration of Independence Hall for no other purpose than to secure one of the original bricks of the historic structure. One day he visited the hall and told the caretaker who he was and what he wanted. That official, willing to do a favor for such a distinguished person, wrapped up one of the bricks and handed it to the Admiral, who was profuse in his thanks. Upon his arrival in Washington the Admiral gave further evidence of his gratitude by writing a letter to Director Riter, expressing thanks to him. What was his surprise the next day to receive a call from the caretaker who had given him the brick, with the statement that if he did not bring it back to Philadelphia he would surely lose his job. Reluctantly the Admiral returned the cherished brick. A short time after he received the identical brick, accompanied by a slip of paper, on which was written, "Silence is golden."

The Late-Coming Storms and Cold.

From The Harrisburg (Penn.) Patriot.

For several years past the severity of our Winters appears to have been drifting more toward Spring. That is to say, that while formerly Thanksgiving Day was cold enough for skating and the wearing of Winter apparel, and a fortnight before Christmas the sleigh bells were jingling, the ice man now waits until January to harvest his crop, and our dreadful blizzards fall upon and smite us in February. The most terrific blasts have come to us in recent Winters in later December and January, while our heaviest snowfalls have occurred in February.

Imported Worms Into Arizona.

From The Phœnix (Arizona) Republican.

Several years ago John B. Montgomery planted an orchard in what is now known as Montgomery addition. Mr. Montgomery reasoned that his trees would grow better if the soil were kept loose and open. At that time there were no earthworms and few bugs. He sent back to Arkansas for a large consignment of angleworms, and when they came he sowed them throughout his orchard. They are now found all over the southwestern part of town and almost anywhere between the river and that part of the city west of First or Second Street.

WAFFLE SEASON HERE.

"The Waffle Lady" Visits the Woman's Exchange and Goes Away Satisfied.

The waffle season is in full swing at the Woman's Exchange, Madison Avenue and Forty-third Street. The season does not open until cool weather sets in, which means a long wait for the waffle devotees who return to town early. The waffles at the Exchange are something to dream of, and to be a habitué of the Exchange and one of its waffle eaters marks the connoisseur. One of these devotees was at the Exchange yesterday. She is a little lady, who lives in one of the big hotels, not far from Forty-third Street. She has been waiting with impatience since July for the regular Exchange waffle opening.

In the middle of that month she wrote a note to the managers, which read something like this:

Ladies: Will you kindly inform me, on the inclosed directed postal, at the earliest possible moment, when you are ready to serve waffles, to oblige THE WAFFLE LADY?

That was not the signature, but it might have been. As the waffle season was not then in sight, no response was made, and in a few weeks another letter was received, which was a duplicate of the first, and also inclosed a directed postal. Then came another and another, at intervals of about three weeks. It is just possible that on account of this strong pressure from the outside the waffle season opened earlier than usual. At any rate, the big waffle opening day arrived, and so did the "waffle lady," who had been notified in due time. She made her appearance at 12 o'clock, but she was not then ready for waffles.

"You can't do real justice to waffles at 12 o'clock, after a late breakfast," she remarked, sagely, and waited.

At intervals she was notified when a table was vacated in the Exchange's always crowded dining rooms, but she was not ready. At 2 o'clock the "waffle lady" sat down and began her long-expected treat. For the soup, fish, meat, and dessert courses she took waffles. An order of waffles is one round, four-piece cake from the waffle irons, and the ordinary dinner at the Exchange takes one order of waffles. But this is not the waffle devotee.

When the "waffle lady" left the dining room at last there was a look of supreme contentment on her face.

"I think," she said, tranquilly, "that the maids began to look a little surprised when I ordered the fourth waffle. But I only ate six."

It is not only on culinary dainties like waffles that the Exchange makes its fame and the fortunes of its contributors. There is a woman on the other end of the Exchange line who is devoted to hash. She is not an eater, but a maker, and sends many quarts of hash to the Exchange each week. It is famous corned beef hash, and the woman who consigns it, who is a widow, has her four little children clothed for church and school for this whole Winter to come through her proceeds from the Exchange hash.

The annual Christmas sale is now in progress at the Exchange, and an unusual number of pretty things of all kinds are on exhibition.

BASEBALL ON OLD PLAN

A Twelve-Club League May Be in Existence Next Year.

TO OFFSET JOHNSON'S SCHEME

Players' Association Heard by Club Managers, but No Formal Report Has Been Made.

The practicability of a renewal of the old plan of embracing twelve baseball clubs in the National League, which was abandoned only last year by the dropping of the Baltimore, Washington, Louisville, and Cleveland clubs, was considered seriously yesterday by the promoters of professional baseball, in the National League's annual meeting, in the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

This proposition was made and supported, it was said, by some of the strongest men in the League, with the one purpose of forestalling the operations of "Ban" Johnson and his new American League, by occupying the most valuable part of the territory which Johnson hopes to enter, namely, by reviving the National League teams in the cities that were dropped when the circuit was reduced from twelve to eight cities. Johnson, according to his announced plans, had arranged to include Baltimore and Washington in his American League, and was credited with having already entered into agreement with McGraw and the Robisons, who were to control the Baltimore franchise.

The argument advanced by the old League managers was that if the National League went back to the former arrangement of twelve clubs, taking in the cities that had been dropped, Johnson would be shut out, or at least, even if he had any idea of going on with his American League, would be confronted with the certainty of a hard and losing fight. The return to the old order of things is a perfectly feasible matter for the National League, as that body still controls the baseball parks in the four cities where National League baseball was abandoned. The League managers have not yet decided upon their action in the matter, but the twelve-club plan was the subject of much corridor gossip in the Fifth Avenue Hotel yesterday, and the general conduct of the League managers was such that there could be no doubt of their having recovered from the terror that Johnson's plans, coupled with the talked-of strike by the ball players, caused earlier in the meeting.

The promoters of baseball certainly presented a more confident front when the threatened troubles were under discussion, and for the time seemed to have lost sight of Johnson and the American League. There was all the usual mystery about the proceedings, however, and league and committee meetings followed each other so rapidly that the enthusiasts in the corridors could not even guess at what was going on.

FREEDMAN AT THE MEETING.

Andrew Freedman was present at the league conference, as representative of the New York Club, for the first time since the baseball people assembled. The subject of players was the chief matter discussed, and in that connection the players themselves, through the committee representing the Protective League of Professional Baseball Players, had the hearing that they asked for the day before. This was at 11 o'clock in the morning.

A special League committee, composed of J. I. Rogers, John T. Brush, and A. H. Soden, heard the demands of the players, presented by another special committee, appointed by the players, whose representatives were Hugh Jennings, first buseman of the Brooklyn Club; Clark Griffith, pitcher of the Chicago Club; Charles Zimmer, catcher of the Pittsburg Club, and Harry Taylor, attorney for the players' organization, formerly first baseman playing with the Louisville and Baltimore Clubs.

At the request of the players, this hearing was public. The representatives of the players, in presenting their case, said they wanted it understood that they were merely offering suggestions for a basis of agreement between the National League and their own body, and then specified three subjects, to which they asked the League to agree. These were, first, that the term of contracts of players with clubs be limited to a stipulated number of years, three, four, or five, all contracts to end after the expiration of the term agreed upon, leaving the players free to enter into new contracts at their pleasure; second, that the "farming" of players be forbidden by an agreement that no player should be bought, sold, or exchanged into another club without his written consent to such transfer, and, third, this being offered as a suggestion, that a limit be fixed on the number of players that any club should be permitted to hold on its reserve list.

The players' side having been presented, Col. Rogers made a speech in terms generally flattering to the players. He was followed by Mr. Brush, who opposed the players' organization, alleging that it was in the nature of a secret society. This Mr. Taylor denied vigorously. Mr. Taylor took advantage of the occasion to touch on "rowdy" baseball in this connection, and declared in positive terms that the owners of the clubs and not the players themselves were responsible for such outbreaks. The owners and managers of the clubs had the remedy in their hands, he said, and if they did not see fit to stop the abuse they alone were responsible. The managers present looked at each other, but did not reply. Players Zimmer and Jennings also spoke in defense of their alliance. The meeting ended with the promise of the League Committee to submit the players' propositions in writing to the League. The representatives of the players were very confident after the conference, and made the admission then that several of their number had been to Philadelphia the day before to talk with "Ban" Johnson, and make sure of the support he had pledged to them some time before. They took the ground that if the National League did not make the concessions they desired, they could fall back on Johnson and his new American League.

LEAGUE MANAGERS MEET.

A meeting of the National League was called a short time after the open conference, and until about 2 o'clock the League managers were in session. When an adjournment was reached, a meeting of the League's Circuit Committee followed immediately. Then it was that the announcement was made that the League meeting had refused to grant any one of the players' demands. None of the members would permit himself to be quoted on the subject, but it was stated that this action was decided upon after a written communication setting forth demands by the Protective Association, which had been presented at the League meeting and set forth the players' demands in a form utterly unlike those stated at the conference committees. The new form of the players' demands, it was said, contained five stipulations, which were as follows:

First—That club owoors are not to have the right to "reserve" players at a salary less than that provided for the ensuing year nor for more than three years.

Second—That clubs are not to buy, sell, assign, trade, lend, accept, select, or claim the services of any player without his written consent.

Third—That clubs are to pay the fees of physicians attending players who are injured in actual play in the clubs' service.

Fourth—That no player shall be suspended more than three times in a season without play, or for more than two weeks at a time.

Fifth—That an Arbitration Committee, one member to be chosen by the players, a second by the League, and a third by the first two, shall pass on all disputes.

The league managers declined to announce their decision on the contract offered by the players last night, but promised to give an answer some time to-day, probably this morning. One of the league officials said of the players' demands that the men could not expect to get all they asked. He declared his belief that they had asked much, but would be glad to accept a very little. The managers were particularly opposed to the change limiting the term of contracts.

The players asserted that the communication sent to the league meeting, which was an abstract of the contract they wish the league to accept, was virtually identical with the propositions made at the committee meeting in the forenoon. They refused to amend or change their terms in any way, and as the league, according to members, is as firm in the determination to reject the contract, it looks very much as if a deadlock will result. The players apparently were indifferent as to the action of the league, seeming to believe that they were secure with President Johnson and the American League. Nevertheless, they waited with some anxiety for the league to announce a decision.

In the matter of securing players for next season the New York Club has nominally obtained two men—Puisifer, outfielder, and Conroy, first baseman—from the Norfolk Club of the Virginia League, but whether it really has the men remains to be determined. The Norfolk Club holds that it controls Conroy, as he was assigned to that club by the league last Spring, but Conroy has refused to go near Norfolk since, and it is a question whether he will accept the new transfer. S. H. Cunningham, owner of the Norfolk Club, is in New York, with a claim of $2,000 for the sale of the pitcher Mathewson to Andrew Freedman for the New York Club, but the validity of the claim is doubtful, though Mathewson played a few games with the New York team last Summer.

The Brooklyn Club is to get Siever, the left-handed pitcher, and Elberfeld, the shortstop, from the Detroit Club, supposedly in exchange for Casey, the third baseman, who was loaned to Detroit last season, and who, it is now settled, is to remain with that club.

WORK ON CUP DEFENDER.

It Is Anticipated that New Yacht Will Be Ready by May.

BRISTOL, R. I., Dec. 12.—The work of collecting the material for the new cup defender is progressing satisfactorily, and there is little doubt but that she will be afloat and rigged by the first or middle of May, a month sooner than in the case of the Columbia. The 1899 champion will not be brought here until just before the new boat is ready for launching, as there is little to be done to her except scraping and painting. If the plans of those in charge of the two boats are carried out, both yachts will be sailing their first trial races off Newport before May 20, which will give the new boat nearly ten weeks' tuning up before the New York Yacht Club cruise, during the first week in August.

The nickel-steel frames for the new boat are being turned out in Steelton, Penn., and orders have been given to push the work if possible ahead of other contracts.

The Vanderbilt seventy-footer Rainbow will probably be put over the last of this week, so that the actual work of starting the new boat will be begun next week, with every prospect that Christmas will see her well under way.

The blocks for both the Belmont syndicate and the Lawson cup defenders will be made by Walter Soloman & Sons of Providence. This firm made the Columbia's blocks, and yesterday signed a contract for those in the Boston boat.

Every scrap of news regarding the Lawson boat is eagerly read in this city, and almost as much interest is taken in her as in the Herreshoff production.

Compass Explained to Yachtsmen.

Forty members of the Yachtsmen's Club gathered at the clubrooms, in West Forty-third Street, last night to hear an informal lecture by John L. Bliss on "The Compass and Its Adjustment." Mr. Bliss explained in an interesting manner the various types of compasses and the theory of the earth's polarization. He then gave a demonstration of the magnetizing of iron and steel vessels and its effect upon the action of the compass, ending his lecture by practical instruction in methods of adjusting the instruments. Among the yachtsmen present were Commodore Hazen L. Hoyt of the Manhasset Bay Yacht Club, C. T. Pierce, C. P. Tower, John Hyslop, C. D. Mower, F. B. Jones, E. M. MacLellan, and Ward Dixon.

Notes for Yachtsmen.

S. M. Jarvis's steam yacht Priscilla, which with her owner and a party aboard left New York Nov. 18 on a West Indian cruise, was reported at Havana Monday.

Dr. Lewis A. Stimson of the Century and University Clubs is the purchaser of Charles Smither's schooner yacht Fleur de Lys, the transfer of which was announced Tuesday. The yacht will continue to fly the burgee of the New York Yacht Club.

FAST HORSES IN HOT BRUSHES.

Tilts on the Speedway Were Few but Very Lively.

The light harness brigade had only a small representation on the Speedway yesterday afternoon, but those who did venture on the road included some of the most noted of New York's amateur reinsmen, and there were several sharp tilts of speed between fast and well-known horses.

The match arranged between the trotter Alice Barnes, (2:11½,) driven by E. Smathers, and The Monk, owned by Fred Gerkin, drew quite a crowd of spectators, who anticipated a hot race, but Alice Barnes was late in putting in her appearance and the race was postponed until 1:30 o'clock Saturday week. The Monk found another opponent in Azote, (2:04¾,) driven by David Lamar, and in a lively brush passed the winning post a half length before Azote.

C. K. G. Billings's strong stable of fast road horses was well represented by Hontas Crooke, 2:09; Rightwood, 2:16¾, and Ellert, 2:11. For want of others to measure speed against them, Ellert and Rightwood were sent on a smart spin, and Rightwood, holding his stable companion all the way, won by a length. Nathan Straus was out with Alves, 2:09½, and, challenging for a brush with Alice Barnes, who had just arrived, raced nip and tuck with her for a quarter of a mile, after which Alves drew out and won the trial by a length.

Mr. Smathers was not content with the beating his mare got, and seeking another test, had the consolation of finishing with Alice Barnes's nose at Alves's throatlatch, Alves again winning. Hontas Crooke, failing to find other game, was sent a rattling brush against Rightwood, and beat him even more easily that Rightwood beat Ellert. Hontas Crooke finishing three lengths before his stable mate.

BILLIARDS BY AMATEURS

Games in A. A. U. Tournament at Knickerbocker Athletic Club.

SCHMITT AND HENDRICKS WON

New York Player Made Same Average as in the Previous Game When He Won from Bostonian.

Charles G. Schmitt of Chicago, and John A. Hendrick of this city, were yesterday's winners in the two games of the National Class B billiard tournament now in progress under the sanction of the Amateur Athletic Union at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club. Both games were very closely contested, but neither was productive of sensational billiards.

The evening game, in which Mr. Hendrick met and defeated Frank Billiter, the Minneapolis player, was by far the more interesting of the two. Mr. Billiter fought hard up to the last few innings, and Mr. Hendrick played a beautifully steady game. His average was exactly that made in his previous game, 6 2-3 points, and considerable significance was attached to the coincidence by the spectators who had also seen his other match. They agreed with Mr. Hendrick when he said at the conclusion of the game last night:

"Well, I seemed to have reached my speed both times."

Mr. Billiter won the bank and opened the game with a break of three points, answered with two carroms by his opponent. Through the fifth inning the Minneapolis man continued his lead, but Mr. Hendrick wormed the balls together when he came to the table for the sixth time, and in best balk-line style ran up a string of 25 buttons before a slightly misjudged draw shot forced him to resign the cue ball. Successive runs of 17, 21, and 14 points in the eighth, ninth, and tenth innings put him still further in the lead, but the disadvantage only stirred his opponent to better efforts.

The tenth and eleventh innings brought Mr. Billiter an aggregate of 36 points, and left the score 93 to 75 in the New Yorker's favor, a margin which, with the game's pace was preserved until another run of 25 in the twenty-fifth inning sent Mr. Hendrick's score up to 176, and left his opponent 39 points behind. For the next eight innings Mr. Billiter's play outclassed that of his opponent. Two runs of 17 and one of 14 points brought his score up to 204 in the forty-third inning. When Mr. Hendrick came to the table for the forty-third time, he had a lead of only 3 points. From this stage to the end of the game, however, the Minneapolis man's game fell off badly, while that of Mr. Hendrick's gained in steadiness. He ran out the 300 points in the forty-fifth inning with an unfinished break of 6, leaving Mr. Billiter with a score of 242.

The style of the two players presented a marked contrast. Mr. Hendrick, who shares alone with Albert Cutler among the six contestants a mastery of the balk-line game, made his runs by the most delicate nursing and fine slow draws. His second run of 25 points, in the twenty-fifth inning, showed particularly his effective nurse, and rare execution in long draw shots. Only once did he resort to open-table play, and that only briefly. That experiment was made in the course of a break of 11 points in the twenty-third inning. Mr. Billiter, on the contrary, played habitually an open game, and only once tried nursing successfully. This once was in the twentieth inning, when he ran up 13 points. Mr. Billiter, however, played in better form than he has shown at any time in the tournament. His execution of difficult cushion shots was frequently brilliant, and a long massé in the twenty-second inning brought long applause from the gallery. The scores:

Hendrick—2 0 1 7 0 25 5 17 21 14 1 0 4 2 1 15 7 0 0 10 3 0 11 5 25 0 5 16 0 1 4 5 9 10 4 9 10 18 3 1 2 12 2 0 4. Total, 300; average, 6 30-45; high runs, 25, 25, and 21.

Billiter—3 0 0 1 11 4 10 1 3 14 22 1 9 13 0 9 1 2 13 0 7 4 12 0 9 0 5 14 17 0 5 17 4 4 2 0 3 0 5 4 2 1 13 0. Total, 242; average, 5 17-45; high run, 22.

Charles G. Schmitt, the Chicago Athletic Association champion, and William Paige of Boston, played the slowest game of the final round yesterday afternoon. It was redeemed in interest only by the closeness with which it was fought up to the very end. Mr. Paigue led narrowly up to the seventieth inning, when the score stood 284 to 282 against the Chicagoan. Mr. Schmitt then gained the lead by a break of 9 in the next inning, and ran out the game winner by a margin of 14 points. Considerable discussion between the players during the game also marred its interest. The scores:

Schmitt.—6 1 9 2 9 2 0 19 2 0 1 0 0 0 2 0 9 2 0 0 5 1 5 2 0 3 0 7 1 3 0 2 11 2 0 12 8 0 7 1 3 0 8 3 27 0 8 2 11 0 2 0 6 4 8 12 2 2 0 1 0 5 4 0 0 3 11 0 0 9 3 6. Total, 300; average, 4 8-73; high run, 27.

Paige.—3 10 1 10 4 5 9 0 2 17 3 0 1 24 31 0 1 2 17 3 6 9 0 0 1 0 1 3 1 0 0 0 1 2 0 2 1 0 1 15 6 6 2 6 0 5 6 0 0 7 0 8 3 0 1 9 8 0 0 0 1 0 17 1 0 0 8 0 3 1 2 0. Total, 288; average, 3 70-72; high runs, 24 and 31.

Eight games of the fifteen scheduled in the final round of the tournament have now been played. In number of games won, Messrs. Hendrick, Cutler, and Kellogg are tied for first place, each having won the two games which he has played so far. Mr. Cutler, however, leads in point of highest single average, and he is considered the most likely candidate for first prize in the tourney. The following table shows, in brief, the records of the six contestants in the final round:

Player.	Won.	Lost.	High Run.	High Sigle Average.
J. A. Hendrick	2	0	48	6 30-45
A. G. Cutler	2	0	41	6 21-30
W. W. Kellogg	2	0	41	5 30-54
C. G. Schmitt	2	1	30	5 45-51
Frank Billiter	0	3	25	5 17-45
William Paige	0	4	33	4 38-44

Frank Billiter, the Minneapolis champion, will play William Paige of Boston this afternoon at 3 o'clock, and Albert G. Cutler of Boston will meet Charles G. Schmitt of Chicago at 8:30 to-night.

Daly Beat Sloan at the Traps.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—Tod Sloan, the jockey, took part in the events of the opening day of the annual live-bird shoot at Burnside. Phil Daly, Jr., Sloan's rival in shooting events in the East, was also one of the field, and as between the two young Daly carried off the honors, making straight scores in two of the events. In point of attendance the shoot was the best ever held at the park. Heilkes, Daly, Daniels, Neal, Pelts, Linderman, Mackie, and O'Brien made the best scores.

In the first event, at seven birds, Daly shot a straight score, Sloan getting but three. In the next, at ten, each killed eight, and in the last event, at fifteen, Sloan bagged eleven, while Daly again had a clean slate.

ANOTHER EIGHT FOR EUROPE.

Dauntless Crew Will Be Sent Abroad If They Win National Regatta.

At the annual dinner of the Dauntless Rowing Club, which was held at the arena last night, it was decided to send the senior eight-oared crew of the club to England to compete in the Henley regatta in 1902. This crew, which accomplished the unusual feat of winning as juniors, intermediates, and seniors, during the past season, is still in training, and is confidently expected by the club to win the National championship in the senior class during the season of 1901.

It will then spend another year in training for the Henley event, and will attempt to capture that blue ribbon of the aquatic world in the following Spring. The junior eight will go into training on Jan. 1, and will be coached by "Davy" Roach. The announcement of this ambitious programme was received with great enthusiasm at the meeting last night.

Seventy-six of the eighty-eight active members of the club were present at the dinner last night. The following officers were unanimously elected to serve during 1901: President—H. W. Walter; Vice President—John J. Shea; Secretary—Frank C. Osmers; Treasurer—E. H. Anderson; Captain—James W. Trainer; First Lieutenant—Charles V. Warmuth; Second Lieutenant—Hans Siebeneicher; Trustees—H. E. Lippincott, A. Nelson, Charles P. Rogers, Edward C. Conlin, Charles H. Wilson, and A. B. Mamlok.

COLUMBIA'S ROWING CLUB.

Proposed Plans Promise the Maintenance of the Sport.

The committee composed of graduates and undergraduates appointed some time ago at Columbia University to organize a new rowing club on the plan of the Newell and Weld Clubs at Harvard has made its final report on the matter and submits a constitution for the proposed organization.

It is proposed to abolish the old rowing club, to which free membership was open to all students in the university, and form in its stead a club with an initiation fee and annual dues. In regard to the change, the following statement is made: "Unless the undergraduates, by combined effort and by themselves providing a reasonable amount of funds, give prompt evidence of their willingness to promote a form of sport which has always maintained the highest standard of the life of the university, rowing will surely fail."

Ten dollars has been fixed upon as the amount of the initiation fee, and it is hoped

WOMAN'S FURNITURE SEIZED.

The hearing in the case of Samuel G. Moore, President of the Moore Toilet Soap Company of 86 Broad Street, charged with obtaining through conspiracy with Dr. John Vories and Dr. John Wharton the furniture and chattels of Mrs. Louisa Lyman, a boarding-house keeper and a relative of the late Henry Ward Beecher, ended yesterday in the Yorkville Court, where Moore was held in $5,000 bail for trial. Vories and Wharton have not yet been apprehended.

Mrs. Lyman kept a boarding house in East Seventeenth Street, and had Vories as a boarder. She had borrowed $200 from a credit house, giving as security a chattel mortgage on her furniture, valued at about $8,000. Vories got this mortgage transferred to him, and then, with Moore and Wharton, it is alleged, induced Mrs. Lyman to move with them to a house in East Fifteenth Street. After she had moved to the house, the three alleged conspirators seized her furniture and ended by ejecting her from her house.

Miss A. C. Fiske of the Legal Aid Society became interested in the case and brought proceedings against Moore and the doctors.

Moore had a number of witnesses in court yesterday to show that the furniture was not worth any more than the face value of the mortgage upon it, and that he was justified in seizing it, but Magistrate Pool refused to listen to any of this testimony and held Moore for trial.

BREADSTUFFS.—WHEAT—A matter about which opinions were very much divided yesterday was the question as to whether export transactions actually reached 180 loads, as reported in some quarters, or did not exceed 50 to 60 loads, as conservative houses believed. A careful investigation of the export movement at the close led to the conclusion that anything over a hundred loads at seaboard and interior points might be regarded as extreme, and perhaps wide of the mark. Sentiment locally and throughout the country was noticeably stronger, and while due not only to the export news, but because of continued small Northwest receipts, another good flour inquiry, unusually large seaboard clearances, and anxiety among short interests. NEW SUPREME COURT RULES.

A Few Changes Which Will Interest Lawyers and Litigants.

The new rules governing the practice in the Supreme Court, which were formulated by the Justices of the Appellate Division, were filed in the County Court House yesterday. The rules will go into effect on Jan. 1 next.

Some of the marked changes are as follows: Under these rules the call calendars for the Trial Terms will be called in Parts III. and VIII., instead of III. and VII., as at present.

Under the present rules lawyers could have their cases retain their positions on the calendar for a considerable time, providing they had other court engagements. Under the new rules the Justices will not hold cases more than three days.

In Special Term the calendar will hereafter be called in Part III., instead of Part IV. It has been the custom for the Justice presiding in Part III. to hear all demurrers. In the future the Justice can send demurrers to any part of the Special Term. The Appellate Term of the Supreme Court has, under the old rules, sat every third Monday of each month to hear cases on appeal from the City and Municipal Courts. Under the new rules the Appellate Term will sit only on the first Monday of each alternate month, beginning with January.

The new assignment of Justices in the Supreme Court for 1901 will make some material changes. The new arrangement contemplates giving all the Justices opportunities in different parts of the court. The plan of assignments for several years past was such as to confine certain Justices almost entirely to either the Trial, Special Term, or Chambers. The new assignments give all an opportunity in the different branches of the court, and the matter of appointment of referees and receivers will in the future be more evenly divided among the different Justices.

MARKET MOVEMENT.

Buoyancy ruled in the stock market yesterday, and at the close of the day substantial advances appeared throughout the list. The buying, as on the previous day, was on a large scale, with prominent financial and banking interests conspicuous as purchasers. London, also, was a large buyer, taking in all, on balance, fully 45,000 shares of the internationals. Sentiment generally was much more hopeful than for some time, the continued assurances of prominent banking houses that no money stringency need be feared being in large measure responsible.

The strength of the market was not in specialties nor in spots, but was general to the list, the coalers, the Grangers, the Pacifics, the steel stocks, and nearly all the industrials advancing. Further evidences that the Western interests who recently were bearish on the market have changed their position appeared in the buying for Western account, principally in Atchison, Burlington, St. Paul, Rock Island, Southern Pacific, and the steel stocks.

STEEL STOCKS were, with the exception of Tennessee Coal, among the strongest on the list, Steel and Wire and Tin Plate leading in the advance. The buying of Steel and Wire was attributed to Mr. Keene, Mr. Gates, and Western operators. Tin Plate stock, it is declared, is to be put on a 5 per cent. dividend basis in a few days. A report also is that the price of tin plate has been advanced to $40 per ton and that the tin can combine is assured of success.

Tennessee Coal was depressed in the afternoon on a revival of the story, so often denied, that the dividend on the stock is to be reduced or passed.

GRANGERS were advanced under the leadership of Burlington, which was particularly strong on buying for Boston and Western account, the buying being understood to be in connection with the bond-refunding plan of the company. There was good buying also of St. Paul and Rock Island, but Northwest seemed to be under pressure in spite of the fact that the regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on the preferred stock and the regular semi-annual dividend of 3 per cent. on the common stock were declared.

ATCHISON, issues were bought both for Western and for home account. A much better feeling on the securities followed the publication of a dispatch from Vice President Barr, declaring that the strike of the telegraph operators was practically ended, and that the company had all the men it needed.

WHEELING AND LAKE ERIE shares were advanced by buying for leading inside interests, while at the same time there were purchases from a source which gave rise to much comment in the Street. Welles, Herrick & Hicks, who are now so prominent in the Steel and Wire Company dispute, bought the Wheeling stocks steadily all day, while they had been purchasers also the day previous. The buying is understood to be for Standard Oil interests, for whom Welles, Herrick & Hicks often act, and is said to be in connection with some Standard Oil plans relating to the Ohio coal trade.

COAL STOCKS were rather irregular, marked strength appearing at some times and a disposition to sag at others. This was attributable to profit taking and to the conflicting reports in respect to the Pennsylvania Coal Company deal, which, however, is generally regarded as finally completed.

NORTHERN PACIFIC Directors met yesterday and declared the regular quarterly dividend of 1 per cent. on the common stock, removing, by the insertion of the word "quarterly" the doubt of some skeptics that the stock was not on a 4 per cent. basis. Earnings were said to be more satisfactory than had been expected, in view of the crop shortage. The same interests who were heavy buyers of the stock when it was advanced from below 50, were in the market yesterday as purchasers.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY shares were steadily absorbed during the day by brokers usually acting for Morgan interests. In the first week of December total earnings amounted to $680,370, an increase of $37,160.

NORFOLK AND WESTERN'S decline was in the face of a statement showing for the first week of December earnings of $290,[illegible], an increase of $50,230 as compared with the same period last year.

AMERICAN CAR AND FOUNDRY held well on the report that Big Four had placed an order with the company for 1,500 cars, and Ontario and Western for 575 cars. Other small orders were also reported.

LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE was favorably influenced by the increase of $44,200 on the December earnings, as reported yesterday.

The Directors of Minneapolis and St. Paul treated the Street to a surprise yesterday by declaring the regular dividend on the preferred stock, and also a semi-annual dividend of 2 per cent. on the common stock, an increase of one-half of 1 per cent. over the last dividend.

The advance in Western Union followed the publication of the statement of earnings of the company for the quarter ending Dec. 31, the figures making a better showing than generally had been anticipated. The balance (estimated) for the quarter is $1,460,960, as compared with $1,355,360 a year ago; while after allowing for dividends a surplus (estimated) will be left of $243,960, as against $138,370 in 1899, and $17,930 in 1898. The actual net revenues for the quarter ended Sept. 30 were $1,705,755; bond interest took $239,040, and dividends $1,217,-001, leaving a surplus for the quarter of $249,714.

During the day the regular quarterly dividend of 1¼ per cent. was declared.

The buying of Wabash preferred by Gould brokers was responsible for a story in circulation that new traffic arrangements had been made with several important systems on a basis altogether satisfactory to the Wabash officials. These officials declined to discuss the report.

A concerted effort was made by room traders to break the market on the late trading, and in the endeavor to accomplish this a variety of disturbing rumors was put out. One was of serious foreign complications suddenly sprung up over the Chinese situation. But beyond a temporary reaction, the reports had no effect, and closing prices were not only strong, but generally the best for the day.

A meeting of the Directors of International Silver was held yesterday, but no action was taken on dividend matters.

Money continued easy yesterday, at one time falling as low as 4½ per cent. Most of the day's loans, however, were made at 6½ per cent.

DISCUSSING FOREIGN LOANS.

Wall Street was more or less interested in the reports from London and Berlin yesterday, telling in the one case that the British Chancellor of the Exchequer has been given power to borrow by means of Exchequer bonds or Treasury bills, and in the other that the German Government may shortly be in the market for a loan of $100,000,000. Bankers here, asked as to the probability of any of the loans being placed in this country, said that it was rather too early to discuss the matter, because not only of the money market conditions here, but because of lack of knowledge of the terms of the proposed loans.

EXCHANGES TO CLOSE DEC. 24.

The Governing Committee of the New York Stock Exchange yesterday, in response to a petition presented by the members, voted to close the Exchange on Monday, Dec. 24, thus giving a clear holiday from Saturday noon until Wednesday morning.
The Consolidated, Cotton, and other Exchanges will also close in like manner.

COTTON CROP ESTIMATE.

Latham, Alexander & Co. yesterday issued an estimate of the cotton crop of the United States for 1900-1901. To obtain the data 3,800 letters were on Dec. 1 mailed to selected and reliable correspondents—banks, bankers, cotton commission merchants, brokers, proprietors of public gins, railroad officials, and planters—covering every cotton-growing county in the South. Up to yesterday 2,285 replies of average date Dec. 6 were received. The circular says the letters show as follows:

The average of 218 letters makes the decrease in Alabama 13 per cent.; the average of 249 letters makes the increase in Arkansas 8 per cent.; the average of 16 letters makes the decrease in Florida 15 per cent.; the average of 419 letters makes the decrease in Georgia 4 per cent.; the average of 63 letters makes the decrease in Louisiana 8 per cent.; the average of 332 letters makes the decrease in Mississippi 20 per cent.; the average of 253 letters makes the decrease in North Carolina 4 per cent.; the average of 197 letters makes the decrease in South Carolina 6 per cent.; the average of 82 letters makes the decrease in Tennessee 10 per cent., and the average of 45 letters makes the increase in Texas, &c., 10 per cent.

The estimated figures, therefore, are:

	Crop 1900-1901.	Crop Last Year.
Alabama	960,420	1,044,000
Arkansas	810,000	750,000
Florida	43,500	50,000
Georgia	1,254,640	1,309,000
Louisiana	575,000	625,000
Mississippi	1,168,600	1,230,000
North Carolina	538,560	561,000
South Carolina	905,740	921,000
Tennessee	351,450	355,000
Texas	3,250,100	2,591,000
Total	9,766,910	9,436,000

Two thousand and three correspondents report that the crop has been more rapidly marketed, or shipped to market as quickly as in former years.
Two hundred and eighty-two correspondents report that a larger quantity than last year has been held on plantations and in towns and cities for higher prices.

IRON AND STEEL SITUATION.

According to the monthly blast furnace statistics of The Iron Age there has been, for the first time since June 1, an increase in the production of pig iron, the capacity of the coke furnaces at work on Dec. 1 being 222,067 tons weekly, as compared with 207,381 tons on Nov. 1 and 288,771 tons on June 1. Coke iron stocks have declined to 80,250 tons during November, so that the statistical position has grown much sounder during November.
On the general situation The Iron Age says:

Some contracts for next year's supply of coke have already been closed, but since they are at delivered prices, it is impossible to judge closely what the figure at oven will be. It is understood that the producers of the Connellsville region are holding for $1.80, while in the Pocahontas district $1.65 was done some time since. The price is now $1.75. The demand for coal is now so heavy in this district that the collieries are indifferent as to the coke business. In the New River district the asking price is $2.50.
It is understood that the ore interests of Lake Superior are to meet toward the end of January, so that probably nothing will be done until then.
Good news to makers of pig iron comes from one branch, where requirements have been very light this year, and that is the cast iron pipe industry. Authorities in the trade report that not for many years has the demand for large pipe, 24-inch to 60-inch, been so large so early in the season as now. New York and Brooklyn led off with 30,000 tons some time since. This week the Boston Water Board received bids for about 5,250 tons, and the Sewerage Board of the same city is in the market for 7,500 tons. While the prospects for tonnage are good, there is, however, a very sharp struggle for supremacy going on between the consolidation and the outside interests, and very low prices are being made.
The billet trade is very quiet, and while the export shipments on old orders continue very large, very little new business is being taken. As a matter of fact, that is true of the whole line of iron and steel products, with the possible exception of rails and of structural material. The European makers are thoroughly aroused, while the buyers show great timidity, in view of the sharp decline which has taken place. In some few cases exporters did, when placing orders, secure the option to sell in this country, and some tonnage is thus being resold here, but it is not important in any branch.
The general outlook does not encourage the belief that the export movement will be as heavy as it is now, unless very considerable sacrifices are made. The large interests know that what is absolutely necessary in this direction will be done to keep a footing.
In the rail trade further large sales have been made, the most notable, of 80,000 tons for the Vanderbilt lines, being distributed among four mills. The report that the Norwegian railroads had given an order for about 12,000 tons to Eastern manufacturers is confirmed.
No specially noteworthy transactions have taken place in structural material, but good inquiries continue to come forward and the outlook is excellent.
The plate makers have made a further advance of $1 per ton, while the leading sheet interests have established the price of 2.80 cents, Pittsburg, for No. 27 black sheets and 75 per cent. discount for galvanized sheets.
The makers of bars report continued activity from all sources, the requirements for car building being still heavy. The report of a larger cotton crop than expected is favorable to the cotton tie branch, which has been rather languishing.

STOCK EXCHANGE LISTINGS.

The following securities were yesterday listed by the Listing Committee of the New York Stock Exchange:
Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern Railway Company—$1,650,000 additional capital stock, making the total amount listed to date $7,150,000.
Kings County Electric

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Trading in a few outside stocks yesterday presented much life, but the market as a whole was little more active than on the earlier days of the week. Prices were irregular, but the general tendency of the market was upward, and net gains outnumbered the day's losses. The copper stocks held more prominent positions than on any recent day, but the most active issues were found among the industrials. The market was strongest at the close, when several sharp advances occurred, and most issues closed at about the best prices.

INTERNATIONAL PUMP was specially prominent by reason of sharp advances in both issues. The earnings of the company were reported to be very satisfactory, but in both the common and preferred stocks the sharp advances were followed by rather heavy reactions. The former sold as high as 29¾, but closed at 28⅜, while the preferred, after selling as high as 78, closed at 76½ bid. Trading in the preferred stock amounted to about one thousand shares, and the common stock sold to double this amount. Both issues were yesterday placed on the regular list of the Stock Exchange, and trading in them will to-day be transferred to that market.

ELECTRIC BOAT was active and strong. The advance in the preferred stock was particularly notable, this issue selling up to 47, and closing at 47 bid, a net gain of 5 points. The common stock sold up to 25¼, and closed with a net gain of 1¼ points.

BRITISH COLUMBIA COPPER, on transactions in about 2,500 shares, sold up to 20¼, and closed with a net gain of half a point at 20 bid. Similar advances occurred in most of the other copper stocks.

CALIFORNIA COPPER, which has not been actively traded in for some time, showed a total for the day of about 2,000 shares. On these transactions the quotation advanced from 1⅜ to 2.

UNION COPPER, which has been somewhat weak for several days, recovered to 5, on transactions in about 1,000 shares. The Treasurer of the company stated yesterday that the company's concentrating plant will probably be put in operation next Monday. A considerable amount of ore is ready for the concentrator, the capacity of which is 150 tons a day.

UNITED RAILWAYS OF ST. LOUIS preferred continued its upward course, and after fairly active trading, closed at 67½ bid, a net gain of 1¼ points. The bonds were also strong, and although not as active as on Tuesday, made a larger net gain than on that day. St. Louis Transit also enjoyed a large advance, selling up to 20¼, and closing there, with a net gain of 1½ points. The amount of stock offered for sale seemed relatively small.

GENERAL CARRIAGE was active, and recovered the loss made during the last two or three days. It sold up to 5⅛ and closed at 5 bid, a net gain of three-fourths of a point.

Closing quotations yesterday, compared with those of the previous day, were as follows:

SAVINGS BANKS' INTEREST

Comments on the Bowery Institution's Recent Increase.

AIDED BY ITS GREAT SURPLUS

Other Banks Find It Difficult to Earn Four Per Cent.—The Tendency Downward.

Presidents of savings banks interviewed yesterday were all of the opinion that the action of the Bowery Savings Bank in raising its rate of interest from 3½ per cent. to 4 per cent. was not indicative of a general tendency to increase the interest rate on savings deposits. On the contrary, they all agreed that the tendency was to a lower rate of interest. It was freely predicted that some of the newer savings banks which are now paying 3½ per cent. would before long be compelled to reduce their interest rate to 3 per cent. The action of the Bowery Savings Bank, it was said, was purely individual, and was due to the fact that this bank was abnormally prosperous.

The Bowery Savings Bank formerly paid 4 per cent. Two years ago the bank officials decided that prudent management demanded a reduction to 3½ per cent. Interest. At this rate the surplus of the bank grew steadily until now it amounts to $7,000,000. This is said to be as large if not a larger surplus than that carried by any other savings institution in the city. There are a number of savings banks of the first rank which do not carry a larger surplus than $2,500,000 to $3,000,000. With a surplus of $7,000,000, with securities such as cannot easily be acquired by the newer banks, with increased earnings for the past six months, and with a prospect of four years of stable financial conditions, the Bowery Bank was undoubtedly justified in making the increase, other bankers say, and they will not be surprised if that bank is able to keep its rate of interest at 4 per cent. for several years to come.

But, notwithstanding the Bowery Bank's action, the other savings banks, which have not heretofore been paying 4 per cent., are not thinking of increasing their rate, as far as was learned. The savings banks, which have heretofore paid 4 per cent. and which will continue to do so, are the Bank for Savings, the Seamen's, the East River, the Irving, and the Metropolitan.

The interest in savings banks is declared every six months, and the rate made is on the deposits for the six months preceding. There is no obligation upon a savings bank to maintain a rate of interest larger than six months. The rate paid is, of course, influenced by the earnings.

When President William C. Sturges of the Emigrants' Savings Bank was seen and asked whether the action of the Bowery Bank indicated a general tendency, he said:

"The tendency is rather downward than upward. Banks cannot pay more interest than they earn, and the earnings of banks are steadily growing less. Prosperity increases the number of depositors in savings banks, because when the country is prosperous there are more people working at better wages, and consequently more people who have a chance to save. But when there is no stringency of money the earning power of money decreases. Securities which pay 3½ and 3½ per cent. are now considered desirable securities, while formerly securities which paid 4½ and 5 per cent. could be obtained. We have paid 4 per cent. for many years, but that fact is not binding on the future."

"Has there been a very large increase in the number of depositors in savings banks in the past few months?"

"Well, not remarkably large as compared with a year ago, but there has been an increase. Our deposits over drafts for this year are greater than last year's. The real fact for this increase is that the wage-earning class is earning more money than formerly."

Joseph Bird, President of the Manhattan Savings Bank, said: "Our bank pays 3½ per cent., and we find no warrant for increasing this rate. A bank cannot pay out more than it earns, and it is difficult for a savings bank to earn 4 per cent. on its money at the present time. Take United States 4 per cent. bonds to get them you have to pay from 12 to 15 per cent. premium, so that they net much less than 4 per cent. Formerly we were able to get bonds which paid as high as 7 per cent. Such bonds are now out of date. Then, too, every savings bank is obliged to keep a large fund on deposit in banks and with trust companies in order to meet daily demands. Upon such deposits we earn only 2 per cent. So you can readily see how difficult it is for a savings bank to pay more than 3½ per cent. to depositors. It can't do it unless it has a large surplus and an unusual line of securities."

President Andrew Mills of the Dry Dock Savings Bank said:

"The action of the Bowery Bank cannot be taken as marking a probable tendency in the near future. The payment of larger rates by the Bowery Bank is probably based upon a very successful year. I can only speak for our own bank, and I will say that our earnings do not justify us in increasing our rate of interest. There has undoubtedly been a considerable increase of depositors in savings banks, but the last report of the State Bank Examiner showed that there were 1,980,000 depositors in savings banks in New York State. I guess the number will now reach 2,000,000."

James McMahon, President of the Emigrants' Industrial Savings Bank, was quite emphatic in his opinion that the tendency was to a lower instead of a higher rate of interest. He said:

"Banks now find great difficulty in getting hold of securities of the kind they are restricted to by law, which will pay them 4 per cent. If they can't earn 4 per cent. they can't pay 4 per cent. to their depositors. Take Government bonds. The new Government bonds pay 1.74 per cent. and par. Municipal bonds pay from 3.40 and 3.67 per cent.; State bonds, 2.75 per cent.; or, at the most 3.20, which is on the bonds of States which defaulted on their interest some years ago; railway bonds, 3 and 3.25 per cent., unless you can get hold of old issues, which pay 3.50 per cent., and you have to pay a premium for those, and then we invest mortgages and loans at 4 per cent., which is a good rate. We have $32,000,000 out on mortgage.

"Our bank, which has been paying 3½ per cent., will be enabled to continue that rate because we have been able to get hold of a good paying line of securities. But the newer banks are finding it harder than ever to pay 3½ per cent., and, in my judgment, many of them will have to come down to 3 per cent. before long."

FIDO'S FALL INTERRUPTS COURT

Dog Picked Up with Slight Injuries at Bottom of Ventilator Shaft.

Fido, the little skye terrier belonging to Thomas C. Wisker, janitor of the County Court House, succeeded in thoroughly upsetting the dignity of the courts yesterday afternoon. It was about 3 o'clock, and every person in the courtroom was getting sleepy. Three of the court attendants sat inside the rail.

The case of Lawrence against Lawrence was on, and Mr. Lawrence had just started to tell how his wife had eloped with another man, when there was a crash, a rattle and bang, then clouds of dust came flying out of the ventilator shaft. "Ki-yi! Ki-yi!" came in plaintive tones from the interior of the shaft. Then there was a long-drawn-out wail, followed by complete silence.

Justice Lawrence sprang from his seat, and the witness jumped from the stand and started for the door.

The three court officers did not stop until they had reached the corridor. The noise had been heard outside and three policemen ran into the courtroom crying, "Where is he? Is he killed?"

Meanwhile word had been carried into other parts of the courts that a man had fallen down the ventilator shaft and had been killed.

Justice Lawrence ordered the case resumed, and for about twenty minutes the witness continued to give his testimony. Just as he was about to answer a question, the "ki-yi-ing" started up again, and this soon turned to howls.

Rap! rap! came the Justice's gavel, as he said to one of the attendants:

"I wish you would go and find the janitor. Unless he comes forthwith, I will be compelled to adjourn the court."

The janitor and his assistant came in, each armed with screw drivers, and they soon had the iron grating over the opening in the ventilator shaft removed. Lying at the bottom of the shaft was little Fido, the pet of the janitor's children.

"Is the dog any the worse for wear?" asked the Justice, as the janitor carried his pet outside.

"I guess not," was the reply.

Fido lives up near the roof of the court house along with the janitor's family. Another inhabitant of the court house is "Paddy," the cat. Fido and Paddy are not on friendly terms, so when the cat wandered up to Fido's precinct, which is the roof, the dog gave chase. The ventilator shaft opens almost flush with the roof, and the cat ran toward it. Fido followed. The cat leaped over the opening, but Fido miscalculated the distance, so he fell sixty feet straight down to the courtroom below.

The Auction Room.

The bidding for the property, 812 Broadway, between Tenth and Twelfth Streets, sold at action yesterday by William M. Ryan, for the executors of the estate of Max Well, was the best that has been heard in the salesroom in many months. The opening bid of $50,000 was advanced rapidly to $100,000, at which point the competition narrowed down to Brokers M. H. Beringer and B. M. Strauss. By raises of $100 and $250 these two carried the price to $110,000, at which figure Mr. Strauss retired, and Mr. Beringer took the property for $110,100. After the sale Mr. Beringer said that he had made the purchase for Joseph and Alexander Graf, who are now tenants of the building.

Other properties belonging to the Well estates, 64 to 68½ Bowery, and 147 West Tenth Street, were disposed of at good figures. It was necessary, however, to withdraw the property, 112 Franklin Street, for lack of a sufficient bid.

Complete results of yesterday's auction dealings are given below:

LEGAL NOTES.

CONTROVERSY BETWEEN BANKS.—In April, 1896, the members of the firm of William MacFarlane & Co., engaged in manufacturing "gum silk," and relatives of the members, organized in New Jersey the National Silk Label Company. On April 25 the silk company made a bill of sale of its property to MacFarlane & Co. in consideration of $1 and the assumption of all the debts of the corporation. On April 27 MacFarlane & Co. made a general assignment to one Richardson, who took possession of the property assigned, which included personal property at 81 Grand Street, in this city, on July 29, following. The Garfield National Bank got judgment against the firm for $14,760, and levy under execution was made on goods which the silk company on the 25th of April had at 81 Grand Street, and which by bill of sale it had sold to MacFarlane & Co. The proceeds of the sale of these goods on Sept. 29, amounting to $12,875, were paid to the Garfield National Bank to apply on its judgment. On Sept. 22, 1896, the National Broadway Bank brought suit to set aside the assignment because fraudulent as to the creditors, and on the 20th of July, 1897, got judgment in its favor, but nothing was realized. On Nov. 6, 1896, the Broadway Bank sued the Garfield National Bank and others to set aside the bill of sale as being fraudulent, and to compel the Garfield National Bank to account for the proceeds derived from the sale. Judgment was granted in plaintiff's favor. The Appellate Division, in this city, has now reversed that judgment, holding, by Justice McLaughlin, that as the Garfield Bank held a valid judgment against MacFarlane & Co. when the levy was made upon the property, both the title and possession of which was at that time in the company, a legal lien was acquired upon such property, which ripened into a legal title when the sale was made. The silk company then had neither title nor possession, but at most the right to reclaim possession by rescinding the bill of sale upon the ground that there was either no adequate consideration for it or that it was made with intent to hinder, delay, and defraud creditors. The creditors or stockholders might also rescind upon the same ground, but as long as it remained in full force and effect MacFarlane & Co. had a revocable interest not only as against the silk company, but its creditors, stockholders, and others. The bank, after the proceeds of the sale had been delivered to it, was substantially in the same position as it would have been had MacFarlane & Co. made no assignment, but instead had sold the property itself, and after receiving the proceeds of the sale, paid it to the bank in satisfaction of the debt.

STOCK BROKERS SUED FOR FRAUD.—W. T. Foote, Jr., secured an attachment against property of Charles M. and Horace C. Ffoulke, in an action by him to recover $8,200, stated in the attachment orders to be "as damages for breach of contract." The plaintiff claimed the return of moneys which he alleged the defendants obtained on their representations that they had certain dealings in stocks for him, which resulted in an indebtedness to them, as shown by accounts rendered, which he paid. These transactions, Mr. Foote now asserts, never occurred, but were feigned by defendants for the purpose of wrongfully obtaining the moneys which he seeks to recover. The Appellate Division, in an opinion by Justice O'Brien, has affirmed the attachment order, holding that the action was properly brought for money had and received, and not for conversion. Presiding Justice Van Brunt dissented, saying there was no evidence of a waiver of the tort. He holds that, on the contrary, an execution against the person could issue as matter of right upon any judgment obtained under the complaint.

LEASE OF HOTEL SAN REMO.—Michael Brennan, who seven years ago leased the San Remo Hotel to Thomas B. Gale, recovered judgment in a suit in the Supreme Court against the latter for an accounting. Mr. Gale claimed that by the agreement between them Brennan and himself were to submit their difficulties to arbitration, and that the matter was being investigated by arbitrators when the action was begun. By the agreement, Gale was to rent the hotel for ten months, at a rental of $3,000 a month, the amount subject to be increased. The surplus, upon a statement to be rendered of the receipts, after paying expenses, was to go to Mr. Brennan, up to $4,000, monthly. The Appellate Division has affirmed the judgment, in an opinion by Justice Ingraham. The agreement was held to be in the nature of a joint venture, and Gale acted and could be held to have acted well within its discretion in refusing to examine the accounts, to determine whether there were any profits to go to the plaintiff; and the plaintiff was entitled to an interlocutory judgment.

THE CANAL TREATY AMENDED

Senate Votes to Change Hay-Pauncefote Agreement.

Defense Clause Adopted by 65 to 17—Many Amendments Offered—To Proceed with Treaty.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—In accordance with previous agreement, the Senate in executive session took a vote at 3 o'clock to-day on the amendment to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty authorizing the United States to defend its interests in the canal. The Senate did not close its doors until 2 o'clock, and there was then left only one hour's time for discussion of the provisions of the amendment. The vote was taken by yeas and nays, 65 votes being cast in favor of the amendment and 17 against it. The negative votes were as follows:

Bard, (Rep., Cal.)	McEnery, (Dem., La.)
Beveridge, (Rep., Ind.)	McBride, (Rep., Ore.)
Frye, (Rep., Me.)	Morgan, (Dem., Ala.)
Foster, (Rep., Wash.)	Money, (Dem., Miss.)
Hansbrough, (Rep., N. D.)	Stewart, (Rep., Nev.)
Lindsay, (Dem., Ky.)	Tillman, (Dem., S. C.)
Mason, (Rep., Ill.)	Wellington, (Rep., Md.)
McCumber, (Rep., N. D.)	Wolcott, (Rep., Col.)
	Gallinger, (Rep., N. H.)

After the amendment offered by the committee was passed upon various other amendments received the attention of the Senate for a brief time, but none of them was acted upon.

The committee amendment which was adopted is a provision to be inserted after Section 5 of Article 2 of the treaty, and is as follows:

It is agreed, however, that none of the immediately foregoing conditions and stipulations in sections numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 of this article shall apply to measures which the United States may find it necessary to take for securing by its own forces the defense of the United States and the maintenance of public order.

OTHER AMENDMENTS OFFERED.

The committee amendment no sooner had been adopted than various Senators took the floor to suggest further amendments. The one which probably attracted most attention was offered by Senator Elkins, (Rep., West Va.,) and is as follows:

Nothing in this treaty shall be construed to prevent the United States from acquiring sufficient security and sovereignty, or to prevent it from building, operating, maintaining, controlling, and defending the said canal, (referring to the proposed Nicaraguan Canal,) or for any other purpose that the United States may deem for its best interests.

Other amendments were suggested by Senators Tillman, (Dem., S. C.,) Allen, (Pop., Neb.,) Money, (Dem., Miss.,) and Thurston, (Rep., Neb.) Senator Thurston's suggestion provides that the United States may defend the canal, and Senator Tillman's makes the committee amendment adopted by to-day's vote apply to all the provisions of Article 2. This would have the effect, it is believed, of nullifying the provision of Section 7 of the article providing against the fortification of the canal. Other amendments were offered striking out Sections 3 and 7 of Article 2.

Senator Teller, (Sil. Rep., Colo.,) said that if Senator Elkins's amendment should be adopted he would not press his amendment for the modification of Section 7 so as to omit provision against the fortification of the canal.

Senator Lodge, (Rep., Mass.,) in charge of the bill, was not slow to recognize the futility of trying to secure further consideration for the treaty, as amended, during to-day's session, and as soon as the amendments were all submitted he moved an adjournment until to-morrow, which motion prevailed.

SENATOR ELKINS'S SPEECH.

Previous to taking the vote on the committee amendments Senator Elkins occupied the greater portion of the Senate's time with a speech advocating radical alteration of the treaty. He announced himself as favorable to the committee amendment, but said that to his mind that amendment did not go far enough to meet the wishes of the American people. He believed, he said, that if the canal was to be constructed by the Government of the United States, the people would demand complete and absolute control over the canal itself, and also the right to exercise their judgment as a nation not only in acquiring property in connection with the canal, but, if need be, in securing sovereignty over it.

He contended that to pursue this course involved no violation of international rights, and in defense of this position said the United States had made an offensive and defensive treaty with France in 1778, and soon afterward had repudiated that obligation. He also cited other precedents and authorities, some of them being from English sources, in support of this position. He argued, in short, that changed conditions warrant a change in conduct and in position.

The speech was listened to with much interest, and at its conclusion a motion was made to have it made public. Objection, however, was raised, and the order was not made.

After the Senate adjourned for the day the Republican Committee on Order of Business held a session to decide upon the future line of action with reference to the treaty as amended. After this committee had concluded its conference Senator Lodge, who was with the committee, stated that the Senate would proceed with the treaty, and that he would continue his efforts to have it ratified.

CHANCES OF THE TREATY.

The amendment was adopted by a majority so decisive as to insure the ratification of the convention if the supporters of the amendment stand for the treaty in its changed form. Among those Senators who voted for the amendment there is not discovered any feeling of triumph, except as to the mere vote. As the treaty is still under consideration it is impossible to quote any Senator as to its chances for ratification, although in private they sometimes discuss the importance and necessity of asserting military control over the canal in a way that indicates a lack of familiarity with arguments heard outside of the Senate.

"We have gone so far as to adopt the Davis amendment," said a Senator who was opposed to that amendment, "and to-morrow we may go further and approve the Teller amendment. There are still other amendments, and I see no reason, if the United States wishes to undertake to assure the neutrality of the canal alone, instead of securing it with the approval of the powers, why we should not adopt other troublesome amendments."

The Teller amendment may not prove to be so strong as the Davis amendment, and it is possible that all the others to be voted on will be defeated. The Teller proposition breathes defiance to British opinion and to treaty stipulations made by the United States with Great Britain, and treaties in force, as between Nicaragua and Costa Rica and other European powers touching transit privileges across Nicaragua. It does not appear that much time has been spent in the Senate in discussion of the obligations resting on Nicaragua and Costa Rica under treaties made by those countries with France, Spain, and Italy. That they must be considered before the way is clear for the United States to go into Nicaragua is admitted by conservative Senators, while with others the suggestion to first decide to build the canal and then to get rid of the obstacles of this kind has had a good deal of force.

Some of the Senators are disposed to entertain the belief that the Davis amendment was favored by the people who are interested in the completion of the Panama Canal because they fancied that the passage of any amendment would impair the prospects of the Nicaragua Canal bill. If the Panama Canal interest has been at work, it has conducted its campaign with a good deal of discretion, and if the adoption of the Davis amendment was important to their success, they have won a great victory.

While the Department of State is disappointed with the action of the Senate, and the President is understood to have agreed absolutely with his Secretary of State in desiring the adoption of the treaty without amendment, it may also be asserted that the treaty, in its amended form, will be accepted if Great Britain is content to exchange ratifications with the Davis amendment incorporated. While that is conceived to be possible, it is regarded as impossible that Great Britain should assent to the Teller amendment or to any amendment that seeks to abrogate the Clayton-Bulwer convention by methods unusual in diplomacy.

TO ABROGATE THE OLD TREATY.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Senator Money (Dem., Miss.) to-day introduced a resolution in the Senate providing authority for the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty by diplomatic negotiation. Following is the text of it:

Resolved, That the President of the United States be respectfully requested to consider the expediency of opening negotiations with the Government of Great Britain for the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty, with assurance that such action on his part will meet with the hearty consent and support of the Senate.

BRITISH PAPERS' COMMENT.

Most of Them Postpone Discussion—Some Show Disappointment and Bad Feeling.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The adoption by the United States Senate of the Davis amendment to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty yesterday is evidently regarded as far too weighty a matter for hurried comment by the London morning journals. Accordingly The Times and most of the other papers will postpone until to-morrow their editorial treatment of the question in its present phase. The Daily Chronicle, however, publishes a short note, in which it says:

"The news is very serious, indeed. It means, in a word, that the jingoes and Anglophobes of the United States Senate have triumphed, and that we are back again to-day where we were at the time of the Venezuelan imbroglio and President Cleveland's insolent and provocative speech. The better feeling manifested during the Spanish-American war has been shaken by pro-Boer sympathies, and it is now swamped by self-interest.

"The American's intend to fortify the canal in spite of the treaty engagement to the contrary. We cannot possibly stand by and allow the Clayton-Bulwer treaty to be thus imperiously set aside. The good relations between the two countries must of necessity be gravely menaced. This is the outcome of Mr. McKinley's re-election. Worse could hardly have happened if Mr. Bryan had been returned."

The Daily Graphic remarks: "We have no doubts as to the result. Anglo-American statesmanship will find an amicable solution of the difficulty created by American jingoes. We fail to see, however, how the Clayton-Bulwer treaty can be got rid of without the Mosquito territories reverting to Great Britain."

The Standard observes: "It is more of a retouff for President McKinley's executive than for Great Britain. England cannot possibly accept the Hay-Pauncefote treaty thus amended, and it would be insulting to the people and Government of the United States to assume that they would either denounce the Clayton-Bulwer treaty without offering an equitable equivalent or contemplate the gross illegality of disregarding it.

"There will be time enough to consider the abrogation of the treaty when Washington formally tenders a suggestion, which would certainly be approached by Great Britain with every desire to assist the United States to carry out a project highly beneficial to American commerce, but it cannot be supposed that we would abandon our treaty rights without solid consideration in return."

The Morning Post, after contending that England, in negotiating the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, was acting virtually as the representative of all the maritime powers of the world, says:

Should the United States denounce the treaty, there is no means known to international law of upholding it. The only known method of inducing a State to accept an obligation of which it is tired is the method of compulsion. That method is out of the question and will hardly be proposed; but it will be open to Great Britain alone, or in conjunction with other maritime States, to consider whether another canal, not under the control of the United States, may be worth the making. In this matter British interests are identical with the interests of all the maritime powers save the United States."

In the House of Commons to-day Mr. Henry Norman, Liberal, member for South Wolverhampton, will ask a series of questions with a view of extracting the views of the Government on the Nicaragua Canal and cognate matters.

WOULD LIKE TO BE SENATOR.

Congressman Hitt of Illinois Is a Candidate for Mr. Cullom's Seat in the Upper House.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Representative R. R. Hitt of Illinois, who is Chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House, and who has been a member of the House of Representatives since the Forty-seventh Congress, has announced himself as a candidate for the Senate. This is accepted here as an indication that the chances of Senator Cullom for a re-election are not so assuring as to exclude other candidates from participation in the contest without appearing to unfairly crowd the Senator.

Many offers of support have come to Mr. Hitt from members of the Legislature, who are inclined to find a new candidate, and his letters and telegrams sent out to-day are in response to such offers. Mr. Hitt has been a popular man in his own district, which is largely Republican, and he has met with success in various public capacities in which he has been employed. Should he reach the Senate, his experience as a careful, diplomatic officer would be highly appreciated, and unquestionably would secure for him a place on the Committee on Foreign Relations, in which he undoubtedly would reflect credit upon his State.

Illinoisans say that there is some probability that Mr. Hitt's personal popularity will serve to unite the factions in the State. The opposition of Gov. Tanner to Mr. Cullom is said to be telling against him, although that gentleman is confident that he will be able to unify the Republican forces and secure his own re-election. It is not likely that Mr. Hitt will make a strenuous fight for the Senatorship, and his friends say little more will be necessary than for him to announce himself, as he has done to-day, to quickly develop his strength as a compromise candidate.

SUGAR TRUST OPPOSITION

Arbuckles to Build Another Big Plant in Brooklyn.

Present Capacity Has Also Been Increased—Philadelphia Capitalists Preparing to Enter the Field.

New opposition to the American Sugar Refining Company—the Sugar Trust—has developed and is developing. It comes from two sources, and if what the financial district now hears is right, it was fear of this opposition and a realization of the effect it might have upon the trust's revenues that induced the Directors of the company, at their meeting in President Havemeyer's residence, the other day, to declare only the regular quarterly dividend and not to increase it, as generally had been understood would be done.

The twofold opposition comes first from the Arbuckles, and second from Philadelphia interests; and the seriousness of both is admitted by Herman Sielcken, who is at the head of the Sugar Trust's coffee business, and who is generally credited with being closer to President Havemeyer than any other man in the trade, and by an official of the National Sugar Company. Briefly outlined, it may be said that the plan of the Arbuckles, who recently have increased their capacity from 3,000 to 4,500 barrels per day, is to build a new refinery equal in capacity and every other respect to and adjoining the present one in Brooklyn. The plans have all been decided upon, conferences to discuss the matter having been held almost every day for a week past.

So far as the Philadelphia opposition is concerned, not so much of a definite nature is known, but what Wall Street hears is that the new opposition will be headed by the Harrisons, formerly of Harrison & Frazer, and that among the interests in the company will be Samuel R. Shipley, W. W. Gibbs, and the Provident Life and Trust Company of Philadelphia.

Herman Sielcken, discussing the matter, said yesterday:

"I have heard it stated that the Arbuckles propose to build a new refinery, and, from what information I can obtain, I believe it to be a fact. They recently increased the capacity of their present plant to about 4,500 or 5,000 barrels a day, and, emboldened by their success, it seems they propose to go into the business further. Of course, they are good, strong people, and, having plenty of money, can do as they want.

"I have heard the story of Philadelphia opposition, also, but I think you are wrong if you say it is Philadelphia people who will direct the company. My information is that New York and Baltimore capitalists are also in and that the company is to be incorporated in New Jersey in a day or two. However, I don't fear that company so much as I do the Arbuckles, who are practical sugar people.

"As to what Mr. Havemeyer knows of the matter, I don't know, as he doesn't do much talking."

On the same subject an officer of the National Sugar Company says:

"I have heard the story of Arbuckles intending to build a new refinery for two or three days, and, according to my information, they will carry out their project, for they have unlimited capital to do whatever they choose in the matter. It will be bad for all of us, for already there is too much sugar made. A new refinery will mean increased competition, and probably, therefore, a reduction in prices and a renewal of the trade war. As for the report of Philadelphia opposition, I don't know anything about it."

At the office of Arbuckle Brothers, James N. Jarvie, told of the story, said:

"I won't listen to it any more; I won't talk about it. We will increase our capacity if we want to without consulting any one else or without parading our affairs before the public. I refuse absolutely to talk on the matter."

President Havemeyer, who was at his office for about an hour only, would not discuss the report.

On the Stock Exchange yesterday Sugar Trust stock declined 1½ points on trading in 25,000 shares.

WANTS OIL COMPANY PUNISHED

Texas Court Is Asked to Adjudge Waters-Pierce Concern in Contempt—Congressman Bailey Involved.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Texas, Dec. 13.—Judge David A. McFall, Democratic member-elect of the State Legislature, to-day filed a motion in the District Court here asking that the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, which is the Southern branch of the Standard Oil Company, be declared in contempt of court for continuing to do business in Texas after it had been found guilty of being a trust and enjoined by the United States Supreme Court from doing business in this State. He also asks for the appointment of a receiver for the company pending a settlement of this new phase of the case.

It is asserted that J. W. Bailey was largely instrumental in securing the readmission of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company to the State after it had reorganized, and Judge McFall announced to-day that, in addition to the proceedings in court, he would ask for a legislative investigation of Mr. Bailey's alleged connection with the readmission of the corporation to Texas, and if it should be found that he was guilty of improper conduct, he will urge that he be defeated for United States Senator.

This reopening of the controversy over the readmission of this company to Texas has stirred up the State Democratic leaders.

$1,300 FOR CONSCIENCE FUND.

Amount Represents 30 Years' Interest on $2,400 Out of Which the Government Was Defrauded.

Special to The New York Times.

LOUISVILLE, Dec. 13.—C. E. Sapp, Collector of Internal Revenue for the Louisville district has just received $1,300 as interest on $2,400 out of which the Government was defrauded about thirty years ago. The principal was paid to Mr. Sapp last year by a man who appeared to be a minister. He said he lived in another State, but would not give his name. He represented that he was acting for certain persons who had defrauded the Government out of $2,400 in whisky tax matters and that they wanted to make restitution. Mr. Sapp suggested the conscience fund, whereupon the stranger paid him over the money in five and ten dollar bills.

Last week the same man reappeared and said his friends had concluded to pay interest on the principal, as they felt so good over that transaction. Mr. Sapp said he would accept any rate the man would pay, and $1,300 was turned over to him, for which he receipted. This was about 2 per cent. per annum, but Mr. Sapp thought it was so much money found for the Government.

NEWPORT, Dec. 13. — The torpedo boat Bailey has made the fastest trip on record between New York and Newport. Her time was 5 hours and 32 minutes. She made the run between Sands Point and Bartlett's Reef in fifty-six minutes, which beat the record made by the steam yacht Kanawha, which held it until the Bailey wrested it from her Wednesday. PANIC ON ELEVATED TRAIN.

Detective Arrests Two Men at Point of a Pistol—Are ex-Convicts, and Had a Bag of Loot.

The arrest of two well-known characters at the point of a pistol by a Central Office detective on a crowded car of a Sixth Avenue elevated train as it neared the Thirty-third Street station yesterday afternoon created great excitement among the passengers of the train, who thought that the officer was a highwayman. The prisoners were marched from the station with a large bag of loot, through a crowd of hundreds of spectators who had been attracted to the scene by the commotion in the train.

Detective Sergeant John T. Reith, who was coming down town on a Harlem train, saw two men whom he recognized board the train at Fifty-third Street. One of the men had a bundle, which he placed under the seat between himself and his companion. At the Forty-second Street station the detective noticed that they were preparing to leave the train and determined to arrest them. He went out to the platform of the car and disclosed his identity to the guard and told him he was about to arrest the two men. He asked the guard to delay the departure of the train at the Thirty-third Street station and to summon policemen from the Thirtieth Street Station or anywhere he could.

Reith then returned to the car, and as the two men arose to leave, he confronted them with a drawn revolver and ordered them to sit down again, as they were prisoners. The men were so nonplused that they just sat and stared at their captor, who stood over them with his revolver leveled at them. The passengers, many of whom had arisen to leave the car, thought Reith was a highwayman, and then ensued the wildest confusion. Women began to scream and men to scramble over each other to get out of the car. The passengers in the other car of the train became panic-stricken in turn, and when the train came to a standstill with a warning whistle from the locomotive scores of persons fled from the cars to the platform. This collected a big crowd at the foot of the station stairs. The arrival on the scene of a detachment of police from the Thirtieth Street Police Station increased the excitement. The police reached the platform just as Reith was marching out his two prisoners at the end of his revolver.

The men were taken to the Thirtieth Street Police Station, where they gave their names as Harry Weller, twenty-two years old, a cloth cutter, and George Walters, twenty-seven years old, who gave no occupation. Both refused to give their addresses.

They were later taken to Police Headquarters, where they were recognized as men with long records, who have served several terms in prison, and whose pictures are in the Rogues' Gallery. In the bundle were found two gold watches, a pair of gold and a pair of silver bracelets, two gold chains, gold cuff buttons and earrings, a silver box, a satin-lined Prince Albert coat and vest, gold pens and pencils, and a miscellaneous assortment of clothing.

THE MAJESTIC'S ROUGH TRIP.

Big Liner Encountered Gales and Heavy Seas Throughout.

The arrival of the White Star Liner Majestic last night marked the end of the roughest passage that vessel has experienced in years. From port to port, gales and storms of varying strength, accompanied by heavy seas, united to make the voyage as unpleasant and as disagreeable as possible. The seas were of tremendous strength, sometimes mountainous in size, staggering the great vessel with the fury of their onslaught; at other times being of the short, choppy kind that make ocean travel the most disagreeable. Capt. Smith readily corroborated the stories of the seasick passengers when asked about the trip.

"It was the worst possible," he said. "We had variable, unsettled weather all the way across, abating only for short intervals on one or two occasions. For four days we made less than 400 knots, which is very poor speed for the Majestic. From 1:30 o'clock P. M. of the 7th to 8 o'clock P. M. the following day we had to run at half speed. It was the roughest, and also the longest, passage the Majestic has made in six years."

Rumors were current of a panic on board the liner on the night of the 11th. According to A. Wishart, a cabin passenger, at 11:30 o'clock a shock and a rolling of the vessel occurred which startled the passengers. Many of them left their cabins to ascertain what the matter was, but he added that no excitement resulted. Capt. Smith said that he remembered no unusual shock on that night. The vessel was plowing through heavy seas, he said, but she was not in danger, and he had heard of no alarm on the part of the passengers.

Most of the passengers, of whom 354 were in the cabin, were compelled to remain below practically the entire trip.

Among those on board was Sir Martin Conway, the explorer and mountain climber. "I have just returned from Bolivia," he said, "and after a fortnight in England, ran over here for a short friendly call. I've quit exploring and climbing mountains. I am getting too old. It's time for younger men than I to do that kind of work now." He will remain in this country only for a week or so, returning either on the Majestic or the Oceanic.

Others on the Majestic were Burton Alexander of the British Embassy at Washington, W. Bayard Cutting, Jr., W. H. Cortelyou, S. R. Lippincott, Jr., Ian Malcom, M. P.; Capt. De Moleyns, Miss Edna G. Della-Torre, Dr. C. W. Niles, Sir Charles Ross, Claude Stanhope, and Mrs. John C. Westervelt.

TROUBLE IN NEW HEBRIDES.

Missionaries and Converts in Danger of Massacre—Request for American Warship.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The Rev. James F. Hill of Cannonsburg, Penn., visited the White House and the State and Navy Departments to-day and asked the President and Secretaries Hay and Long to have a warship sent to the New Hebrides.

Mr. Hill is a member of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions. He was accompanied by Representative Ernest F. Acheson of Pennsylvania. According to Mr. Hill's statement of the case, an uprising of the heathen natives against the Christian natives is threatened. He says that the unconverted savages number 60,000 and the converts are not over 20,000 strong. The former have avowed their intention to wipe out Christianity from the islands. Mr. Hill asserts that the lives and property of the American missionaries in the Islands are in danger.

The President advised Mr. Hill to draw up a statement of the case in writing, and promised that it would be submitted to the Cabinet meeting to-morrow.

DR. MACDONALD WANTS OFFICE.

Is a Candidate for President of State Commission in Lunacy.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Dec. 13.—Friends of Dr. Carlos F. MacDonald are urging his appointment by Gov. Odell as President of the State Commission in Lunacy, to succeed Dr. Wise, resigned. His backers say he is well qualified to fill the place, as he was President of the commission from 1894 till he resigned, Feb. 17, 1897, with his term uncompleted.

Dr. MacDonald is a recognized authority on the treatment of the insane, and his previous experience in the care of the insane renders him by far the most conspicuous candidate for the place. Dr. Frederick Peterson has also been suggested as a prominent candidate for the place. The salary is $7,500 and $1,200 a year for traveling expenses.

TRAIN ROBBED IN A NEW ORLEANS SUBURB

Masked Men Attack Chicago Limited on the Illinois Central.

PASSENGERS NOT MOLESTED

Conductor Shot in the Back—Mail and Express Cars Blown Open with Dynamite.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 13.—The Chicago Limited on the Illinois Central, due to arrive here at 7:15 o'clock to-night, was robbed at Carrollton Avenue, on the outskirts of the city, by masked men. The mail and express cars were blown open with dynamite and the former was rifled of its contents. Conductor Kennebreu was badly wounded. He was shot in the back because he did not obey orders to uncouple the train. None of the passengers was disturbed, and they knew nothing of the robbery until the heavy charge of dynamite was fired. Then they pulled down the blinds and kept quiet. A large squad of police and detectives arrived at the scene in a few minutes and succeeded in arresting six men, who are held at headquarters. Four of them are negroes.

It is not known just how many men took a part in the robbery. They all wore short, black masks, and are supposed to have boarded the train at Kenner, the last stop before New Orleans. The leader of the gang evidently got on in front of the mail car, next the tender. The plan was well laid, and when a point near the railroad crossing at Carrollton Avenue was reached the leader crawled up over the coal tender to the engine, and, covering the engineer and fireman, ordered them to stop the train. They complied. The other men jumped from the train.

Conductor Kennebreu also left one of the rear coaches and was immediately covered by several revolvers. He was ordered to uncouple the train. He did not step quick enough, and a bullet was fired in his back. The robbers then uncoupled the train back of the tender, and the leader, who was still on the engine, ordered the engineer to "pull out." The engineer complied, and kept "pulling out" until ordered to stop, half a mile away. Here the leader of the gang jumped off and hurried away in the darkness.

Meantime the rest of the gang was hurrying matters, and, after a demand on the express messenger and mail clerks to open up, which was not complied with, big charges of dynamite were placed under the cars and touched off. The express car was badly shattered, but the express officials claim the robbers got nothing there. The mail car was not badly injured, but an entrance was effected, and all the mail pouches were cut open. Some seventy-five or one hundred pieces of registered mail were carried away.

While this was going on the flagman of the train escaped and went down the track to flag another train. He was met by the robbers and relieved of his watch. Railroad and city detectives and United States Secret Service men by the score are working on the case.

BARON LEHMANN IN BALTIMORE

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 13.—Baron Lehmann of Holland, to whom it was rumored that Miss May Brown, the daughter of ex-Gov. Frank Brown of Maryland was engaged to be married, arrived in Baltimore to-night and dined with Mr. Brown at the latter's residence. Later Mr. Brown took his guest to the Maryland Club and introduced him to the members. It is probable that the Baron will remain in Baltimore several days. He met Miss Brown while she was traveling with her father last Summer in Europe, and entertained them on his yacht.

Upon the return of the Browns a month ago the ex-Governor denied the rumors of an engagement, but admitted that he and his daughter had met the Baron while abroad.

Miss Brown inherited a fortune from her mother. She and her father own considerable real estate in Chicago. Baron Lehmann is also wealthy.

PACKERS BUY A SALT MINE.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—Armour & Co have decided to be independent of the National Salt Company, and with that end in view have bought a salt mine of their own and will proceed immediately to work it.

The mine is in the great salt beds, near the St. Clair Flats, north of Detroit, where the trust itself operates large properties. The mine yields about 400 barrels a day, or about 112,000 pounds, an amount equal to the packing firm's consumption each day. In the vicinity a refinery will be erected, where the salt will be prepared for packing uses and put up in parcels for delivery at the Armour plant in Chicago.

Armour & Co. will be able to bring the salt to the top of the mine for 15 cents a barrel. The empty package costs 30 cents, and the freight to Chicago amounts to 5 cents a barrel.

WINSTON CHURCHILL AT YALE.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 13.—Winston Spencer Churchill, M. P., the young English war correspondent, received an enthusiastic welcome here to-night. Mr. Churchill arrived in this city at 4 o'clock and was immediately taken in charge by the Yale undergraduates, a committee of whom, headed by Capt. Gordon Brown of the Yale football team, showed the visitor about the college. Mr. Churchill was later entertained at the University Club, where hundreds of undergraduates met him.

This evening Mr. Churchill lectured before the university set at the Hyperion, among whom was Lieut. Gov. Woodruff of New York, and was received with much applause, Dean Francis Wayland of the Yale Law School, whose guest Mr. Churchill is, introducing him. Mr. Churchill's talk was mostly of his own experiences in escaping from Pretoria a year ago yesterday, and of his flight to Delagoa Bay. Mr. Churchill spoke feelingly of the bonds between England and America.

He was given a reception at the graduates' club later in the evening.

BURNS FIGURE OF MR. McKINLEY.

Italian in London Takes Vengeance on Pin-Studded Wax Effigy.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The Daily Express publishes the following statement:

"An Italian from Soho (a district in the heart of London) burned a pin-studded wax effigy of President McKinley on the doorstep of the United States Embassy last evening.

"He said he was a brother of Guido Mazaro, who was lynched in Louisiana, and was avenging the death of his kinsman. On the approach of the police he bolted."

Freed and Arrested the Same Day.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, Dec. 13.—Homer L. Sarvis arrived here to-night from the Western Penitentiary, at Allegheny, Penn., where he this morning completed four and one-half years for burglary and was known as Woodruff. He is charged with the murder of Frank L. Henderson, a grocer, in this city, in April, 1893, while Sarvis and his gang were burglarizing his store. The Sheriff made the arrest on Woodruff's discharge. In waiving technicalities Sarvis signed his own name to the legal document. A reward of $1,000 was offered by the city for his capture.

NEW MUSEUM FOR BOSTON.

Mrs. "Jack" Gardner Contemplates Giving Her Splendid Art Collection to the City.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 13.—The announcement is made in The Transcript to-night that Mrs. John L. Gardner contemplates giving to the City of Boston for a free public museum the Italian palace which she is building and all its contents. This means that one of the finest private collections of paintings, statuary, bronzes, and metal work in America may be the property of this community.

Among the paintings are many which would of themselves give distinction to a museum, but the pictures form only a relatively small part of the extraordinary collection of works of art which Mrs. Gardner has accumulated. A museum of considerable size is necessary to hold her treasures in the line of sculpture, bronzes, gold, silver, iron, and other metal work, wood carving, arms and armor, furniture, tapestries, and embroideries. In its comprehensiveness the collection, when publicly exhibited, will be a revelation to American art lovers.

TWO BIG RAILROAD DEALS.

Vanderbilts Declared to be Seeking Control of Wabash.

According to all the reports in Wall Street important developments are pending in the affairs of the Erie and the Wabash Railway, though their exact nature has not yet been disclosed.

What is currently reported, however, and what in well-informed quarters of the Street is regarded as reasonable, is that new and powerful interests are buying into both systems, with a view, if not to change of control, at least to closer working relations with other companies. According to the reports Pennsylvania Railroad interests on the one hand and Vanderbilt interests on the other have bought each 100,000 shares of Erie stock within the past ten days. While this would by no means give control, it is said that with former holdings it would give the new interests a large voice in the affairs of the Erie Company, and would assure harmonious working relations among the Morgan-Vanderbilt-Pennsylvania interests.

In respect to Wabash, it is declared that the present buying of the stock is by the Vanderbilts, who are anxious to obtain control of the property, or, failing that, to have a determining voice in its affairs. For some time Wall Street has heard of some such purpose on the part of the Vanderbilt interests, and it has been remarked that the shares of the Wabash were much more active than in ordinary times. Yesterday, for instance, on the Stock Exchange, more than 24,000 shares of the preferred and over 13,000 shares of the common were traded in, the former at a net advance of 1½, and the latter at a net gain of ⅞.

In like manner the Erie issues were the leaders of the market, the first preferred rising 3¾ points, the second preferred 3⅝, and the common 2¾, total transactions in the three amounting to over 170,000 shares.

At a meeting of the Erie Directors yesterday James J. Hill, President of Great Northern and a Director of Baltimore and Ohio; Norman B. Ream of Chicago, also a Director of Baltimore and Ohio, and Robert Bacon of J. P. Morgan & Co., were elected Directors to succeed Messrs. Quintard, Goodwin, and Williamson. Pennsylvania interests, it will be recalled, are now a factor in the Baltimore and Ohio.

Official information of the above reports is not forthcoming, but it is pointed out that the exigencies of the case may be responsible for this, just as it was for the early denial of the transfer of the Pennsylvania Coal Company. Premature publication of the story has more than once affected final plans in Wall Street.

PROF. J. J. ABEL INJURED.

May Lose Sight Through Accident at Johns Hopkins University.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 13.—Dr. John J. Abel, Professor of Pharmacology in the Johns Hopkins University, was seriously injured last night by an explosion. He is now confined to the Johns Hopkins Hospital with very discomforting facial injuries, and is threatened with blindness.

While Dr. Abel was working with a diminished pressure apparatus, used for the purpose of securing a partial vacuum, it is thought that a sudden influx of gas into the chamber caused a sufficiently heavy pressure to burst it, and the flying fragments struck Dr. Abel in the face.

Dr. Abel is the associate editor of The Journal of Experimental Medicine, and is regarded as one of the leading American authorities in the field of physiological chemistry and pharmacology.

DINNER TO GOV.-ELECT ODELL.

Entertained at Washington by Former Associates in Congress.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Representative Lucius N. Littauer gave a dinner at Harvey's to-night in honor of Gov.-elect Odell. The plan was to give Mr. Odell's former associates in Congress an opportunity to congratulate him on his election and extend their good wishes for his administration. Secretary Root and Senator Platt, who were invited, sent regrets, but Senator Depew was present and made the first speech of the evening after Mr. Odell.

Nearly the whole New York delegation in Congress was present, and, in addition, Representative Joseph G. Cannon of Illinois, Representative David H. Mercer of Nebraska, Appraiser Israel F. Fischer, Judge Hooker, Representative-elect George N. Southwick, Shipping Commissioner Joseph M. Dickey, and Charles G. Bennett, Clerk of the Senate. Mr. Littauer presided. Representative Cannon spoke for Mr. Odell's former associates in Congress, recalling reminiscences of their service and wishing Mr. Odell success in his administration. Similar speeches were made by a number of others.

TWO RECEIVERS FOR LOAN ASSOCIATION

Banking Department's Action Against the Anglo-American.

GRAVE CHARGES OF COLLUSION

Counsel for the Pennsylvania Shareholders Accuse the Department and Criticise Supt. Kilburn.

A second application for the appointment of a receiver for the Anglo-American Savings and Loan Association was presented yesterday before Justice Maddox in Brooklyn. The application was made by Deputy Attorney General W. E. Kisselburg on behalf of the people at the instance of the State Banking Department.

Justice Maddox decided last night to grant the application, and announced at his home in Brooklyn the appointment of Capt. Joseph M. Dickey and Edward R. Dickinson as receivers. The appointment of two receivers was a surprise, and the failure of Col. W. J. Youngs, Gov. Roosevelt's private secretary, to be named was another surprise. It was understood that Col. Youngs was slated for the place.

Capt. Joseph M. Dickey is a resident of Newburg. He is a brother of Justice William D. Dickey and is said to be a close personal friend of Governor-elect Odell. Mr. Dickinson is a resident of New York City.

A CHARGE OF COLLUSION

The attorneys for Pennsylvania shareholders who made the first application for a receiver in the Federal Court about ten days ago express their belief that the proceedings yesterday were the result of collusion between the State Banking Department and the officers and Directors of the Anglo-American Association, and they will so represent at the hearing before Judge Lacombe to-day to determine the Federal Court's jurisdiction.

They base their belief of collusion on the following points: First—That State Superintendent of Banks Kilburn only within a few days has in print expressed his confidence in the solvency of the association and the ability of the Directors to get it safely out of present difficulties. Second—That the Banking Department instigated the proceedings for a receiver begun yesterday, and Clarence W. Francis, one of Mr. Kilburn's assistants, in an affidavit supporting the application, declared his belief that the association was insolvent. Third—That the association's attorneys, who have fought the application for a receiver in the Federal court, appeared in the proceedings yesterday and gave their assent to the appointment of a receiver under the Banking Department's application.

The Anglo-American Savings and Loan Association is probably the largest association of its kind in the United States. It has shareholders in many of the States, and its liabilities are over $2,000,000. The officers of the association are: President—Thomas L. James; Vice President—John D. Vermeule; Treasurer—George M. Hard; Secretary and General Manager—A. H. Gilbert. The Directors are combe to call to the attention of this court the situation in the Federal Court. We have no desire on our part to delay or to obstruct either the Federal Court or the State Court in the exercise of its jurisdiction to appoint a receiver, and leave this court to act in the premises us it may think its duty."

SHAREHOLDERS' COUNSEL'S PLEA.

Mr. Winslow, of the firm of Russell & Winslow, came into the Court House as Mr. Hornblower was finishing his statement, and when opportunity offered, asked the Court for permission to make a statement, saying that his firm was solicitors for those stockholders who had filed the bill in the Federal Court.

Mr. Kisselburg and Mr. Hornblower both objected to this, but Justice Maddox asked Mr. Winslow to proceed.

Mr. Winslow stated that his clients had filed their bill in the Federal Court on Dec. 4, and that an order to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed had been set for hearing on Dec. 7, but that, at the defendant's request, the hearing had been postponed until to-day. He said there was no contention that the Federal Court did not have jurisdiction of the parties, but that the defendant's attorneys claimed that it had no jurisdiction of the subject matter of the suit.

He said that the proceedings in the Federal Court were not brought for the purpose of dissolving the corporation under the statutes of New York, but was for the purpose of taking possession of its property, marshaling its assets, and distributing them pro rata among all its stockholders, no matter whether they were residents of New York or of other States—this to be done as soon as creditors, if any, are paid. This proceeding, he said, was not under any statute of New York, but pursuant to the general equity jurisdiction of the United States Circuit Courts, which is the same in all States.

He read from the case of Towle vs. the American Building Association, (61 Federal Report,) a decision by United States Judge Grosscup holding that the Federal Court, and not a State court, was the proper forum for such a proceeding. He also cited the case of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, (Vol. 177, United States Reports, Page 51,) as showing that the Federal Court had exclusive jurisdiction to appoint a receiver for the association if a bill for that purpose were filed in that court before any similar bill was filed in the State court. He also said that from an examination of the authorities he was satisfied that the United States Court had jurisdiction of the subject matter of the suit, and that his clients, being residents of a State other than New York, had the right under the Constitution and laws of the United States to have the association's affairs settled in the United States Court.

Justice Maddox took the matter under advisement, and did not announce his decision to grant the application and name the receivers until late in the evening.

William Hepburn Russell, the senior counsel for the shareholders who began proceedings in the Federal court for the appointment of a receiver, when asked his opinion of the proceedings begun before Justice Maddox by the State Superintendent of Banks, said:

BANKING DEPARTMENT ACCUSED.

"I think those proceedings show collusion between the officers and Directors of the Anglo-American Association and the Banking Department. The object sought is to keep the matter under the control of the State courts, in the hope that the officers and Directors can be saved from their liabilities on the second mortgages which they accepted and also on the fictitious dividends which they ordered paid. If there was no collusion, how else can the change of front made by the State Superintendent of Banks be reasonably explained? He has declared in interviews, and in a letter of his to a shareholder of the company, printed in a Buffalo paper, his belief in the association's solvency. Now the Banking Department asks for a receiver on the ground that the company is insolvent. In his letter, which bore the date of Dec. 6, Mr. Kilburn said:

"'An investigation was at once instituted for the purpose of ascertaining the value of the real estate, and an appraisal of the property in Buffalo and other places showed that the real estate was worth at least the amount at which the company carried it, and I am confident that most of the real estate is good property, and that, with careful handling, it will pay out the amount at which the company carries it upon its books.'

"In the same letter, further on, he says:

"'I am informed that certain shareholders have begun an action for the appointment of receivers for the corporation. I regret that this action has been taken, because I was of the opinion that the carrying out of the plan proposed by the Directors would prevent the sacrifice of the property of the corporation.'

"Now the Deputy Attorney General, upon the request of the Banking Department, begins proceedings for the appointment of a receiver, and one of the grounds upon which a receiver is asked is that the company is insolvent. Furthermore, the attorneys for the association who have heretofore been opposing the appointment of a receiver give their assent to the proceedings.

"The papers filed with Justice Maddox yesterday are a clear admission of the necessity for a receiver, and we shall use them to-morrow before Judge Lacombe in the United States Federal court to sustain our claim that a receiver ought to be appointed. If Judge Lacombe decides that the Federal court has jurisdiction, which we do not think admits of serious question, we will get a receiver from the Federal court, because the Federal court will be the court of prior jurisdiction, the first action having been begun in that court."

Russell & Winslow have received a number of letters from shareholders in the Anglo-American Association since the proceedings for the appointment of a receiver were instituted in which the writers express their amazement at some of the allegations made in the bill of complaint. The most surprising revelation seems to have been the showing that several of the prominent men who were officers in the association, and whose names were used to float it, did not own any stock in it, or only a small amount.

OFFICERS OWNED LITTLE STOCK.

In a statement which the Anglo-American Association made to the Banking Department of Connecticut about two years ago it appears that Thomas L. James, the President of the association, did not own a share of the association's stock; J. D. Vermeule, the Vice President, held only 26 shares; George M. Hard, Treasurer, 26; A. H. Gilbert, Secretary and general manager 81, and P. C. Lounsbury and Charles Gerding, who are in the Board of Directors, none. Since that time Mr. James bought ten shares of the company's stock, and Messrs. Gerding and Lounsbury also acquired small amounts. The largest shareholder in the association is Edward Thompson, the law book publisher, who resides at Northport, L. I. Mr. Thompson holds stock to the amount of $50,000. President James has been receiving a salary of $2,000 a year from the association.

Charles A. Dyson, attorney for the association, when seen last evening and informed of the statement made by Attorney Russell that he believed the proceedings begun before Justice Maddox bore the marks of collusion between the association and the Banking Department, said:

"Of course we deny that, absolutely."

"How then is it that the association now consents to the appointment of a receiver?"

"The statement of Mr. Hornblower to the court explained that. We still maintain that the association is solvent, but of course now that actions against the association are being started in various places we believe the best interests of the association and of its shareholders will be subserved by the appointment of a temporary receiver."

"In what other cities have actions against the association been instituted?"

"An action has been begun in Buffalo, and I understand one has been brought in Pennsylvania. I have not as yet received a copy of the papers in the Pennsylvania case."

"Will you contest the jurisdiction of the Federal court before Judge Lacombe to-morrow?"

"I can't say. I have prepared myself very carefully on that point, but in view of what has happened since we raised the point of jurisdiction I don't know what position we will take on the subject. We will file with Judge Lacombe a memorandum exactly similar to that we filed to-day with Justice Maddox."

The proceedings before Judge Lacombe in the Federal court to-day will commence at 2 o'clock.

Agricultural Commissioner Appeals.

ALBANY, Dec. 13.—An appeal has been taken by Commissioner Welting of the State Agriculture Department from the decision of Justice Bischoff, declaring unconstitutional the law prohibiting the use of preservatives in cream, butter, milk, and cheese other than salt in butter, spirits in cheese, and sugar in condensed milk. The decision was rendered in an action brought against John S. Bleserker of New York City. Justice Bischoff held that the law was unconstitutional because it not only prohibited the use of deleterious, but also of wholesome and healthful preservatives.

SIX TEAMS LEFT IN RACE

Two Six-Day Riders in the Hospital for Treatment.

OLD RECORDS NOT IN DANGER

Madison Square Garden Thronged with Crowds Who Cheered the Cyclists on Their Weary Way.

The Score at 2 A. M.

	Miles.	Laps.
Pierce and McEachern	1,865	3
Elkes and McFarland	1,865	3
Gougoltz and Simar	1,865	2
Fisher and Frederick	1,864	7
Ryser and Kaser	1,864	7
Waller and Stinson	1,864	4
Babcock, riding singly	1,466	5
Gimm, riding singly	1,456	8

Old team record, 1,901 miles.

Six teams continued the whirl of excitement and sport for several thousand enthusiasts and loud-mouthed rooters yesterday in the fourth day of the six-day bicycle race at the Madison Square Garden. The spectacular interest in the contest, even if last year's records are further and further away every hour, and with the procession of riders curtailed to a half dozen, continues to increase as the limit of endurance is approaching, and for the first time since the start the upper galleries were crowded to standing room last night, and a number of women were noticeable in that upper region.

The chief feature of the twenty-four hours closing at midnight was the transfer of Aronson and Turville from bicycle competitors to the less exciting position of hospital patients. The former now lies in the New York Hospital with a bad contusion of the spine, while Turville is at Bellevue with a badly cut thigh and other body lacerations. Neither man is severely injured, however, but each will need careful treatment for a few days.

The six men left on the track rode at a slower, more measured, pace than on any previous day. The slowest hour of the race was between 3 and 4 o'clock yesterday morning, when the leaders covered but 16½ miles. This was increased to about 18 miles later in the day, but it never rose much above that figure.

The record established by Miller and Waller last year is becoming further and further away. At 6 o'clock in the morning the leading teams, Pierce and McEachern, and Elkes and McFarland, were 16 miles and 3 laps behind the record, and at 11 o'clock last night the record was 34 miles and 9 laps in the van, their score being 1,810 miles and 1 lap.

OLD RECORD STILL STANDS.

All hope of equalling the old figures has been abandoned, and the riding of the twelve survivors was characteristic of the fact. The physician who examines the men several times a day said last night that every man on the track is in suitable condition to finish, and he denied the rumors that had been circulated to the effect that Fischer, McFarland, Waller and one or two others had shown temporary aberrations of mind. The men's faces all looked tired and pinched, their eyes were bloodshot, and Elkes' features were badly drawn.

The disaster of Wednesday night was responsible for the dropping of Turville and Aronson. There was fear at one time that Aronson had sustained a bad fracture of the spine, but the physicians at the New York Hospital last night said that no serious results were likely to ensue, and with rest and proper treatment Aronson would be all right within a week or ten days.

Turville, although his thigh was badly cut and he was generally shaken up, came out in the early morning hours and made a painful effort to wheel around the track, but his injured muscles kept him in agony at every revolution of the pedals, and he had to be carried off, and at 5 o'clock in the morning it was announced that he had left the race. Shortly after that he was removed to Bellevue Hospital, where he will remain for two or three days.

The management decided to allow Babcock, Aronson's partner, and Gimm, the companion of the injured Turville, to continue the race individually, neither man to ride more than twelve miles an hour, for seventh place, which gets $150. Babcock rode a few miles during the day, but as he was ten miles ahead of Gimm, he acted the part of spectator for the rest of the day, ready to go on if Gimm showed a desire to contest the position. Babcock's score ended yesterday with 1,466 miles and 5 laps, while Gimm's record was 1,456 miles and 8 laps.

McFARLAND'S BAD PLIGHT.

McFarland's right leg, which has been badly cut in the different falls, in which he has always had the misfortune to be one of the victims, pained him severely yesterday, and when the men were satisfied with an easy pace, he rode mile after mile pedalling only with his left leg. Elkes, who looked nearly as fresh at the forty-eighth hour as the first, showed the strain very perceptibly yesterday, his face having a pinched careworn look. McEachern and Pierce occasionally shot out with little dashes of speed, and with the exception of inflamed eyes, appeared to have plenty of enduring power in reserve. Simar and Gougoltz were both riding strong and made a few spasmodic efforts to pick up their lost lap. Elkes and McEachern adopted the policy of blanketing the Frenchmen, which they really fear. The former usually kept the lead, holding either Simar or Gougoltz to third place and blocking every effort of either to force a spurt.

Waller, who shared with "Charley" Miller last year the position of bicycle hero among the gallery watchers, continued to drop behind more and more during the day, and the 9 o'clock score found him, for the first time, relegated to end place. Early in the day he was but three laps behind the leaders. At 7 o'clock in the morning one of his tires burst with a loud report, and, as is always the case when such accidents occur, the others dashed forward to gain what they could. Waller lost a few seconds before he could get on Stinson's machine, and meanwhile the leaders were two laps ahead. Only one lap was counted against Waller.

The special races were the only really fast features of the evening and they elicited spontaneous enthusiasm. "Major" Taylor rode an unpaced half mile in 0:55 2-5, and it was stated afterward that he had been engaged to go to Australia and efforts are being made to have him go to Paris. "Jimmy" Michael rode five miles, paced by his motor tandem cycle. As usual, he stuck to the rear wheel at every lap and finished in 9:46 3-5, doing the last mile in 1:46 3-5. Rudolph Muller and Hugh McLean, two of the six-day racers who had to retire on account of the disability of their partners, rode a five-mile pursuit race. Notwithstanding Muller's reputation, which he feared would be disgraced when Aucoutrier, his partner, left the contest, McLean caught him in two miles and nine laps, the time being 7:03 1-5.

An amateur race was a novelty, being run between P. G. Van Cott of the Nassau Wheelmen and George T. Schrieber of the Harlem Wheelmen. The race was three miles, run in heats. Van Cott won the first, Schrieber the second, and Van Cott took the third in 2:25 3-5. Similar events will be held to-day.

LOOKING AFTER ARMY CLOTHING.

Inspectors Sent to Philadelphia to Examine Goods Made There.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Quartermaster General Ludington has sent three additional Inspectors to the Schuylkill Station, at Philadelphia, to investigate the kind of supplies that are furnished to his department there. Supplies accepted at this station are distributed to posts in different sections of the country, and in Cuba and Porto Rico.

Gen. Ludington's actions led to reports that a scandal of large proportions had been unearthed, and that the clothing furnished to the soldiers was practically worthless. Gen. Ludington, however, says that these reports are exaggerated. Some of the clothing made at Philadelphia has been found to be in poor condition, but it is not known whether it is the fault of the contractors or whether the clothing complained of is old stuff that was bought some time ago and not used. It is to find out the facts that the Inspectors have been sent.

The clothing was made by a large Philadelphia firm, but its name has not been made public. Secretary Root says that he knows nothing about the matter.

UNION COLLEGE ALUMNI MEET.

Hold Their Annual Banquet and Elect Officers—The College's Opportunity.

The alumni of Union College held their thirteenth annual reunion and banquet last night at the Hotel Savoy. The dinner was largely attended, and many of the old alumni were present. Of these the oldest was George W. Clarke of the class of 1840, and some of the members of every other class were also at the table down to a number of undergraduates who made the air ring with the college yells and college songs.

Daniel M. Stimson, the President of the Alumni Association, presided, and there were many toasts on varied topics, the glory of Alma Mater being the chief consideration in all of them.

Andrew V. V. Raymond, President of the college, spoke to "Alma Mater." He called particular attention to the fact that Schenectady, the town in which the college is located, has become in recent years one of the greatest manufacturing cities, especially in the line of electricity, in the United States, and that therefore the college faces a magnificent opportunity for the development of a School of Engineering, especially electrical engineering.

In this connection President Raymond called attention to the fact that Union was the first of all the colleges to introduce an engineering course. Mr. Raymond also spoke strongly for the establishment of a civil service school in the college, where men could be trained to meet the requirements of growing conditions in the country that, he said, must now be numbered among the great world powers.

Edward Cary spoke to the toast "What Shall We Do with It?" and said, to his understnnding, "It" meant the education which Alma Mater gave and the far wider reaching education which this fitted college men to obtain. Its real worth, he said, was as a preparation, and as such it was precious in any walk of life. It would not only aid in making a man successful, but, what was more important, would help him to make better use of his success.

Amasa J. Parker, President of the Albany Law School, now a part of Union, spoke to "Law," sketching a history of the law school. J. Newton Fiero spoke to "Brother Alumni," Prof. William Wells, whom the undergraduates cheered as "Billy," responded to "The Faculty," Dr. Joseph D. Craig to "Medicine," Edward P. White to "A More Perfect Union," and William H. McElroy spoke on "The Influence of Patent Office Reports Upon Contemporaneous Longevity." Mr. McElroy, whose speech was a humorous one, said his topic was no more germane to the occasion than a song and dance at a funeral. Referring to a letter of regret from Russell Sage that had been read by President Stimson, he said he has missed this postscript: "P. S.—inclosed please find my check for $50,000 for Union College."

At the business meeting preceding the banquet the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President—Frederick W. Seward, '49; First Vice President—The Rev. Dr. Charles E. Nott, '54; Second Vice President—Gen. J. Rufus Tryon, '58; Secretary—Edgar S. Barney, '84; Treasurer—Bayard Whitehorne, '82.

JEWELS IN LOST TRUNK.

Police Trying to Solve Mystery of Its Disappearance—Belonged to Mrs. Norman Whitehouse's Mother.

The police are investigating the loss of a trunk containing property valued at many thousands of dollars, which disappeared in transit from the Long Island ferry to West Twenty-third Street on Dec. 4. It was the property of Mrs. C. Terrell, mother of Mrs. Norman Whitehouse of 10 West Thirtieth Street.

On the day named Mr. and Mrs. Whitehouse and Mrs. Terrell left their country home at Westbury, L. I. They had three trunks, one of which was marked "C. Terrell." In it were many valuable jewels, and Mrs. Terrell intended taking them to her home at Richmond, Va.

At Long Island City the trunk was placed with other baggage on one of Gaffney's express wagons and at the Twenty-third Street Ferry it had disappeared. When the driver's attention was called to the matter he at first declared that he had not received it. Then he said that it had been stolen or had fallen from the wagon en route.

Mr. Whitehouse, who is a brother of Worthington Whitehouse, thinks the property was stolen by some one who had knowledge of its valuable contents. He has offered a liberal reward for its recovery.

AGAINST THE MORMON CHURCH.

Utah Democrats Are Trying to Force It Out of Politics.

Special to The New York Times.

SALT LAKE CITY, Dec. 13.—Letters are being sent to prominent Democrats all over the State asking them to attend a convention to organize a fight on the Mormon Church influence in politics. The proposition is to reorganize the Democratic Party as a straight anti-Church party and fight until the Church keeps its finger out of politics. The convention will be held here between Jan. 1 and 15.

The Salt Lake County Committee and prominent Mormons are incensed at the way the leaders have sold out the State. Evidence of how this was done is being collected and will be disclosed later.

THE ALABAMA GOES TO SEA.

Battleship Off on a Trial Trip—Will Come to New York.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 13.—The United States battleship Alabama sailed to-day from the League Island Navy Yard for New York, where she will await further orders. She will make a trial trip on the run, which will begin as soon as she passes out to sea.

After the sea trial is completed the vessel's course will be shaped further out to sea to avoid shipping, as all of her guns and turrets are to be tested and report made to the Navy Department as soon as the vessel reaches New York. If the report is satisfactory, it is probable that the battleship will be ordered to Hampton Roads to join the North Atlantic Squadron.

BRYAN DENIES ALLEGED DEAL.

Has No Trade with D. E. Thompson as to the Senatorship.

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 13.—Both William J. Bryan and D. E. Thompson make unqualified denials of the truth of the story printed in New York wherein they are alleged to have arranged a Republican fusion deal whereby they could be elected to the United States Senate from Nebraska.

Mr. Bryan said: "There is not a word of truth in it. I have other plans."

Mr. Thompson, who is a Republican and a candidate for the Senate, said: "This story is not true. I am making combinations with no one; certainly not with a Democrat. You cannot make my denial too strong."

To Consider Clark Case To-day.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Senator Chandler, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, has called a meeting of that committee for to-morrow, to take up the Montana Senatorial case. Mr. Clark, who was appointed Senator by the Acting Governor of the State while the Governor was absent, and Mr. Maginnis, who was appointed by the Governor upon his return, are both in Washington awaiting the decision of the Senate.

Mr. Cutting to be Re-elected.

It is said that at the meeting of the Central City Committee of the Citizens' Union next Monday several members at large will be chosen. It was stated yesterday that R. Fulton Cutting will be re-elected President of the Union.

Will of James Roosevelt Filed.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Dec. 13.—The will of James Roosevelt was filed in the Surrogate's office in this city to-day. It was sealed, and its contents are unknown, but the affidavit relating to the transfer tax shows that the entire estate is given to the widow and two sons of the deceased, with the exception of a legacy of $1,000, which is given to Elsifie McEachan, a servant. It is generally believed that the property will exceed $500,000 in value. The citation is returnable Dec. 22. The will was filed by Lawyer John Hackett, attorney for the estate.

Mrs. Elizabeth T. Daly Dead.

Elizabeth Therese Daly, widow of Denis Daly and mother of ex-Justice Joseph F. Daly and of the late Augustin Daly, died on Wednesday at the residence of the ex-Justice, 19 East Sixty-second Street. She was in her eighty-ninth year. The funeral will take place at the Church of the Sacred Heart, Yonkers, this morning.

NEW CENTURY WELCOME

Plans Perfected and Resolutions Drawn by Mr. Guggenheimer.

Open House and Receptions at the City Hall—The Greeting to the New Year.

Plans for a novel new-century celebration, to be held at the City Hall, were perfected yesterday. President Guggenheimer of the Municipal Council has taken up the matter and is preparing resolutions asking the Municipal Assembly to appropriate $2,000 for the affair.

The plans so far perfected are to have the front of the City Hall decorated with flags and bunting and thousands of electric lights, formed in stars, with bunches of red, white, and blue lights. At midnight the electric display will be held, and on the stoop of the City Hall several thousand singers will congregate to sing out the old and welcome the new century.

An attempt will be made to have Mayor Van Wyck present, and he will be asked to break his rule of refusing to take part in celebrations unless of an official character.

All New Year's Day there will be "open house" at the City Hall. Receptions will be held in the meeting rooms of the Board of Aldermen and the Council. Mayor Van Wyck will also be asked to receive all visitors in his office from 9 o'clock to noon.

The resolutions prepared by President Guggenheimer call for a joint committee of the Municipal Assembly to take charge of the affair. At the meetings of the Municipal Assembly on Tuesday next efforts will be made to have all the members present. The charter requires that four-fifths of all the members of both branches of the local legislature must vote for appropriations for celebrations. The votes of twenty-four members will be needed in the Council, President Guggenheimer said yesterday:

"The new century should be ushered in fittingly, and I trust that the Municipal Assembly will make the small appropriation necessary for the expenses. Mayor Van Wyck will be requested to take an active part in the ceremonies and to receive all visitors in his office on New Year's morning."

Controller Coler said yesterday that he favored the suggestion for a new century celebration, but that he would not favor an appropriation for that purpose. He said the celebration could be arranged without calling on the Municipal Assembly for money.

MARY L. McLEAN'S WILL.

Estate of Dewey's Mother-in-Law Is Devised to Her Children.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The will of Mary L. McLean was filed to-day for probate. The will is dated Dec. 17, 1896. To John R. McLean, son of the testatrix, a special silver tea service, marked "Washington McLean," is bequeathed. All household furniture and personal effects, with the exception of a certain watch and ring, are left in equal shares to Mary McLean Bugher (now Ludlow) and Mildred McLean Hazen (now Dewey.) A gold watch studded with diamonds and a solitaire diamond ring are left to Emily Beale McLean, daughter-in-law of the testatrix.

The remainder of the estate, it is provided, shall be divided equally among the three children, John R. McLean, Mary McLean Ludlow, and Mildred McLean Dewey.

WOMAN DETERMINED TO DIE.

Mrs. Smith Took Paris Green, Laudanum, and Carbolic Acid.

ROCHESTER, Dec. 13.—Mrs. Gordon Smith, aged fifty years, living in Macedonia, committed suicide yesterday in a sensational manner. She had been secretly for some days past preparing the clothing needed for her burial, and when all was ready first took paris green, then a quantity of laudunum, and ended with swallowing a quantity of carbolic acid. It was evident that she took all three poisons so closely together that the fatal effects of one had not an opportunity to be felt before she took the others.

A note left to the family explained that she had committed suicide and telling where her grave clothes could be found. Mrs. Smith was held in the highest esteem, and no explanation for the act can be given except that her mind had become deranged over thinking about death.

$50,000 FIRE IN WEBSTER.

Women Leap from Second-Story Window of Burning Building.

WEBSTER, Mass., Dec. 13.—The worst fire Webster has known in twenty-five years occurred to-day, when the Tracy Block, a three-story structure, and the largest business building in town, was burned, entailing a loss estimated at $50,000. Several young women, who were in the building, had narrow escapes, and two of them, one with hair and clothing ablaze, leaped from a second-story window. An awning over the first floor windows broke their fall, so that they could be caught as they descended, by those who were assisting in putting out the fire. Neither of them was seriously hurt by the leap, but one, Mabel Highlands, was severely burned.

The principal losers were John W. Dobis, proprietor of the Boston Dry Goods Store, and D. B. Murdock & Co., shoe dealers. Lucien Mansfield, who occupied the third floor, also was burned out. All who suffered damage, including George Tracy, owner of the block, were insured.

BANK ROBBERY IN OHIO.

Thieves Hold Off Citizens with Guns and Get Away on a Handcar.

SHANESVILLE, Ohio, Dec. 13.—Four masked men, discovered in the act of dynamiting the vaults of John Doerschuck's private bank early to-day, drove off all who attempted to interfere, and got away with between $3,000 and $4,000.

An explosion of nitro-glycerine about 3 o'clock A. M. awakened John Rhodes, who lives opposite the Doerschuck bank. Rhodes saw two men working at the vault doors, while two others stood guard at the main entrance of the bank building. Rhodes, revolver in hand, rushed into the street and was met by a volley from the sentinels. He held his ground, however, until his weapon was empty. Mary Knowles, a relative of Banker Doerschuck, heard the shooting and raised a window of her room, only to draw the fire of the robbers.

Dozens of the inhabitants appeared by this time, but most of them were unarmed and were forced to conceal themselves by the shower of bullets which greeted every newcomer. In the course of half an hour the robbers managed to remove the doors of the vault and pried open the money drawers. They hastily dumped all the specie into bags and, leaving the bank, backed through the streets to the tracks of the Wheeling and Lake Erie Road. A hand car was secured, and the men disappeared toward Baltic.

A trace of blood was found leading from the bank. Alarms were sent out in all directions by telephone. A few hours later it was announced that the hand car had been found abandoned between here and Baltic. Bloodhounds were secured and a large posse at once started on the trail. It is believed the gang is the same one which recently looted a bank in Seville.

A BREEZE OF SPRING IN WINTER.

I'm going to sing a little song
About a great Perfumer,
He knows full best of all the throng
To please the good consumer.

From north to south, from east to west,
Wherever you may go,
Those perfumes that are very best
Are made by ED. PINAUD.

Rare Violette de Parme I sing,
The queen of all, remember,
A violet-laden breath of Spring
Borne into chill December!

KNELT AS IN PRAYER, DEAD

Woman Found at Her Bedside with Bullet in Her Heart.

Had Taken Her Life in Hotel Where She Registered as Pauline Foster—May Be Pauline Feste.

A young woman, supposed by the police to be Pauline Feste, killed herself at the Grand Union Hotel, Forty-second Street and Fourth Avenue, some time yesterday afternoon by shooting herself in the left breast. Just who the woman is will not be learned until the various letters and will left by her are opened. Her name is guessed at by the police from the fact that she had an insurance policy in her possession made out on the life of Pauline Feste and calling for $1,500.

The suicide went to the Grand Union Hotel on Tuesday last and registered as "Pauline Foster, Hartford, Conn." She wae assigned to Room 307, on the third floor, and as she had no baggage, except a small hand bag, she was asked to pay for her room each day. The woman attracted notice by her particularly sad countenance.

On several occasions she looked as if she had been weeping, as her eyes were red and bloodshot. She was in and out of the hotel yesterday morning, and about 10 o'clock she obtained a quantity of letter paper and envelopes and went to her room. That was the last seen of her alive.

At 8 o'clock last night, as usual, one of the bellboys went to her room with her daily bill. The room was dark and no response came in answer to his rap. Using his pass key, he went into the room and turned on the electric light. Then he saw the woman kneeling by the side of the bed as if in prayer, with a large revolver lying by her side.

The boy gave the alarm, and the hotel detective, H. J. Shendin, and Dr. Richardson, the surgeon, came to the room. They found that the woman was dead. Before doing the shooting she had removed part of her clothing, so as to give the bullet a free path to her heart. The weapon used was old and rusty. The Coroner's office and the police of the East Thirty-fifth Street Station were notified and took charge of the body.

In the hand satchel were found a number of sealed envelopes. One was addressed to "Ernest Feste, 800 Baronne Street, New Orleans;" another was addressed "Paul Feste, Crystal City, Mo." Both of these were stamped ready for mailing. An unstamped letter was marked "Ernest Feste, Present." The insurance policy was also in the satchel. This policy may disclose more particulars about the young woman, but under the new law the police who had it in charge would not give out all of its contents last night. They said the policy showed that the holder was twenty-seven years old.

An assignment, presumably that of the policy, and dated Dec. 3, 1900, was found, by which "Pauline Feste of the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York," makes a transfer to Augustine Pollock. From these papers the police believe the woman to be Pauline Feste, although the suicide may really be the assignee of the policy, Augustine Pollock.

Another letter in the small bag, the police said, was addressed to "Miss Lucy Pollock, 11 Rue Daunaier, Point du Jour, Paris, France." This letter was properly stamped, ready for mailing. A very bulky envelope is marked, "My will." The only other thing in the bag was a small bottle partly filled with a dark, thick liquid with a very pungent odor. In her purse was $1.15.

The body was removed to the Morgue late last night.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 13.—Ernest Feste laughed to-night when a telegram announcing the suicide of Pauline Feste was shown to him. He would say nothing. He is a decorator and came here from Missouri a few days ago. The woman is not known here. Ernest Feste had heard of the affair by private telegram, and is in telegraphic communication with another brother, either in New York or St. Louis. He refuses all information.

THINK THEY LODGED CHANLER.

Police of Mount Vernon Believe He Slept in the Station.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Dec. 13.—The police of this city are confident that a well-dressed stranger to whom they gave lodging on Dec. 11 was John Armstrong Chanler, who escaped from Bloomingdale Asylum on Nov. 28. The stranger put in his appearance at about 9 o'clock. He approached the desk where Sergt. Beckwith was on duty and asked politely for a place to sleep over night. Sergt. Beckwith took his name and address, which he gave as James Burns of Newark, N. J., and escorted him down stairs. The Sergeant had noticed from his manner that the lodger was a man of culture, and instead of locking him in the room with the common tramps put him in the woman's cell, where there were clean beds and linen for him to sleep on. For this the man thanked the Sergeant fervently. He arose early the next morning and departed without saying anything more about himself, except that he was going to New York.

The authorities now believe that Chanler is roaming about the country under an assumed name, and in order to escape scrutiny sleeps at Police Headquarters each night. There is a belief among some people that the missing millionaire's relatives know where Chanler is, but this they deny.

On the day Chanler boarded the train for New York at Mamaroneck he gave the agent a letter to mail. The agent remembers that it was addressed to 18 Wall Street, New York.

Jewelry Notes

Some of our most recent productions are set with opal or turquoise matrix. These beautiful stones readily adapt themselves to the designer's fancy, and the results achieved are most satisfactory.

Baroque pearls have in the past been unappreciated, but the "new art" has brought them into use, and visitors to our establishment will find these odd pearls, set in a variety of artistic designs.

One of the interesting developments of the present revival of art in jewelry, is the use of the long-neglected cameo. The present indications seem to warrant the belief, that this fine product of the stone carver's skill will soon come into deserved favor. We display a few choice examples.

HARLEM SAVINGS BANK PANIC CONTINUES

Speculators Take Advantage and Bargain for Deposit Books.

Some Secured at Big Discount—Second Day's Withdrawals, $128,677—Support Offered to the Bank.

The run on the Harlem Savings Bank continued all day yesterday from the moment the doors were thrown open up to the time the policemen in charge of the crowd announced that no more money would be paid out for the day, and that the sidewalks must be cleared. All day long two paying tellers pushed huge wads of bills at the frightened depositors, and as fast as the heap of greenbacks inside of the cages melted down, as fast armfuls of packages of bills of all denominations were brought up from the vaults and stacked up around the tellers. Before the bank closed its doors at 3 o'clock $128,677 had been paid out in addition to the $150,000 of the day before, and 362 accounts had been added to those closed.

Despite the fact that Bank Examiner Kilburn and all the officers of the institution declared the bank sound, the depositors refused to be assured. Many of them had taken their place in the line at 6:30 o'clock in the morning. Made up of all nationalities, it was also a suspicious crowd. None trusted another, and if by chance an outsider offered a word of encouragement for the bank, word went along the line that the bank had sent decoy gates to mingle with the people to try to instil false hopes. Fanned by the general spirit of unrest the excitement amounted almost to a panic.

The earlier arrivals fought with each other for vantage points along the line. That was before the police arrived. By the time eight officers under a Roundsman appeared on the scene from the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street Station the line extended five to six men thick from the entrance of the bank on Third Avenue to 100 feet east on One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Street. There were many pinched and anxious faces and the policemen, realizing the strain, treated the crowd as gently as possible. In many cases, however, men crowded so savagely that they were hauled out of the line and sent back to the foot. A number of women carrying babies, and not a few feeble, old women, were noticeable. One woman with a baby remained on her post for five hours, when owing to exhaustion and excitement she began to weep. A man at the head of the line sent word that he would trade places with her, and she was happy.

Promptly on the opening hour the officers of the bank appeared, ready to pay all who came. Payments were made at two windows instead of at three, as on the day before, because the officers decided that the more readily people could draw their money the more would pile up outside to remove their deposit, causing extra work and annoyance, only to bring it back in the next few days, when it would dawn on people that the bank could not be broken. In the meantime, the heaps of money displayed on the tellers' desks was intended to convey an object lesson. It was announced early in the day that the bank had $650,000 in cash in its vaults ready to pay out and that if necessary the Trustees would meet at a moment's notice to sell securities or to negotiate a loan.

On the sidewalk, curiously watching the excited line, were a number of depositors who had come to gaze on the scene.

"I've got $3,000 in there now, and if I had $5,000 more I'd go in there and soak it this minute," said one of these depositors. "Why, a man went in there this morning and negotiated a loan for $5,500. That does not look as if the bank had not money enough, does it?"

"Dat's vat I say. But you see der peoples is all a ignorant lot of foreigners, vat can't even speak der Enklish lancquach, und dey don't know er pank from a hole in der ground," said a stalwart naturalized citizen.

Another class of men who had full confidence in the soundness of the bank were a gang of speculators who went about shouting that they would buy any account for spot cash. At first these men marched up and down the line, engaging people in conversation and driving bargains to take away the accounts for a 10 per cent. discount. Later, when competition waxed keen, they openly shouted their offers. While the speculators were driving their end of the game, individuals who may or may not have been in league with them, circulated reports that the bank might close its doors at any minute. The word quickly passed along the line, and excitement rose to fever heat. A number of sales of this kind were made. One depositor sold his bankbook, credited with $500, for $450. Another sold his account of $200 for $180. In each case the principals in the transaction refused to give their names to the reporter, fearing he was some bank spy who might spoil the bargain. A number of heavier depositors who watched the sales of the bankbooks tried to interfere. In several cases they beat the sharks, but in others they were mistaken for bank delegates, and their interference served the wrong way.

Only once was a ray of hope cast to the waiters. How the rumor was started is not known, but it was afterward in part verified by President Tooker. The bank, it was said, had ready on election day $500,000 to handle a run which it was expected would follow in case Bryan had been elected.

Nearly all the Trustees of the bank had assembled in President Tooker's office at the opening hour. It was decided at the conference to continue paying off every depositor who wished to withdraw. When President Tooker arrived he found a stack of mail two feet high awaiting him. Many of the letters were communications from other banking concerns and business houses expressing sympathy, confidence, or offers of assistance. Others were letters from depositors expressing confidence in the affairs of the bank, and still others were letters from cranks, most of which were anonymous.

President Tooker, commenting on the situation, said:

"After the statement of the State Bank Examiner I did not expect there would be anything like a run to-day. We are in a position, however, to satisfy every demand. We have had offers of assistance from dozens of the most solid institutions in the city, and we could realize on our securities practically 100 per cent. We are still investigating the source of the rumors that led to the run, but up to now have not been very successful."

Mr. Tooker characterized as ridiculous the report that one of the reasons for the run was the withdrawal of money by the Chester A. Arthur League. "Four ladies of the League were in here this morning," said he, "and to show their confidence in the bank brought $300 to deposit."

Vice President Michael Duff said:

"What worries me now is this new thing of book selling. We take an interest in our depositors and don't care to have them lose their money foolishly."

AN ERROR HELPS GOSLIN.

Saved from Arrest and Judgment by Change of a Letter.

The use of the letter "J" for "G" has proved a lucky thing for Alfred R. Goslin, the promoter, who has had more or less prominence in the courts for several years. By the striking of the wrong key on a typewriter, Goslin was saved from arrest and from the payment of a judgment.

George W. Holman, May 16 last, obtained an order of the Supreme Court for the arrest of Goslin on a claim for $1,630. Holman alleging that he had been defrauded out of that amount. Goslin was arrested on June 1 and taken to the Sheriff's office. His counsel, House, Grossman & Vorhaus, discovered that one of the court papers which had been served on Goslin read, "George W. Holman vs. Alfred R. Joslin." They at once went before Justice Bischoff and had the order of arrest vacated, the Justice deciding that there was really no warrant issued for Goslin.

Nothing further was done in the case until Nov. 27, when Noah & Seeley, counsel for the plaintiff, took judgment by default against Gosnin for $1,957.88. When this was done, Goslin's attorney went into court again and asked that the judgment be vacated. Yesterday an order was handed down vacating the judgment and declaring it null and void. Counsel for Holman propose to appeal from the order.

Bishop Littlejohn's Birthday.

GARDEN CITY, L. I., Dec. 13.—Bishop A. N. Littlejohn, the head of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Long Island, celebrated the seventy-seventh anniversary of his birth to-day at the See house. Owing to his somewhat feeble health there was no reception or formal observance. The only persons in the house to-day were the Bishop's daughter, Mrs. Bird, and Bishop Worthington of Nebraska, who is the guest of Bishop Littlejohn.

PRISONER'S RUDE AWAKENING.

Lone Vagrant in a Prison Van Jarred by Collision with a Trolley Car.

John Hubbard, no home, who had been sentenced to the Island as a vagrant, was the sole occupant of the big prison van which left the Harlem Prison early yesterday morning on its way to the Yorkville Prison gathering up the morning crop of human derelicts for the workhouse. The lone passenger had settled himself comfortably and had dropped into a gentle slumber when he was rudely awakened.

The prison van, while bowling down Third Avenue, had been run into from behind by a rapidly moving trolley car at Fifty-sixth Street. The van was thrown with great force over against an elevated railroad pillar. One of the hind wheels of the vehicle was smashed to pieces and the sides were badly battered.

The driver, James McGrath, who had been thrown to the street, but was not hurt, hurriedly pulled open the door of the shattered van expecting to find his prisoner badly hurt.

"Are you hurt?" inquired McGrath.

"Nop," responded the prisoner; "but wouldn't it jar you?"

Hubbard was escorted to the Yorkville Prison on foot, while the motorman of the car which did the damage put on speed and escaped.

FALLING WALL WRECKS STUDIO

Many Statues and Models Belonging to W. O. Partridge Damaged.

The studio of Walter O. Partridge, a well-known sculptor, noted for his work on the Dewey Arch, was partly demolished early this morning and a number of valuable models and statues were destroyed. Mr. Partridge's studio is at 150 West Thirty-eighth Street. In the rear of that building excavations have been made for a new building about to be erected. Shortly after midnight it was noticed that the walls of the studio were cracking and beginning to sag. It is thought that the walls must have been partially undermined, for they gave way steadily until they crashed into a heap, sending tons of debris into the studio.

Mr. Partridge had been at work on a valuable marble statue of Christ and St. John, an order from a seminary. The figures were struck a glancing blow, but, as near as could be judged in the wreckage, they escaped serious damage. A bust of Lieut. Peary, the Arctic explorer, was demolished, and a bust of Abraham Lincoln and many valuable models were buried in the ruins.

The adjoining studio of G. Moretti, the Italian sculptor, was also damaged, but, as the owner was not on the scene, the extent of the damage could not be learned.

THE COMMITTEE OF FIFTEEN.

Two Representatives of Organized Labor Appointed to Fill Vacancies.

The announcement that the sub-committee of the Committee of Fifteen, originally appointed by Charles Stewart Smith, had selected four men to fill four of the five vacancies created by the retirement of Messrs. Tappen, Carter, Iselin, White, and De Forest, was made yesterday by W. H. Baldwin, Jr., who was designated as the spokesman of the full committee.

"The four men to fill the vacancies," said Mr. Baldwin, "have been chosen, and I expect a meeting of the Committee of Fifteen will be held to-morrow afternoon at Mr. George Foster Peabody's office, in Pine Street. Then the names of the new committeemen will be made public. I can say that two of the men will be representatives of organized labor."

"Will one of them be James B. Reynolds?"

"Effort to discover the names of the new committeemen by a process of elimination will not be successful. I will, however, say that Mr. Reynolds has not been selected and will say no more."

Bourke Cockran said that he was not one of the new committeemen. Jacob H. Schiff, Chairman of the committee at its first meeting, would not discuss the selections in any way.

Guesses in regard to the two labor representatives were many, but those which selected W. J. O'Brien, President of the Granite Cutters' Association, and A. J. Smith, President of the Central Federated Union, were regarded as having basis of probability.

A DUTCH PROTEST OF 1664.

Petition to Suppress Kissing Games and "Pulling the Goose."

Special to The New York Times.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Dec. 13.—Among the ancient Dutch records of Ulster County which have been translated by the official translator of the Holland Society, under the supervision of Judge Clearwater of this city, is one especially interesting, entitled, "The Supplication of the Consistory of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church to the Magistrates at Wildwyck." The document is dated Feb. 12, 1664, and is signed by Dominie Harmanus Blom.

It states that the consistory, moved by their consciences, petition the Magistrates of Wildwyck with all proper humility that the public, sinful and scandalous Bacchanalian festivities of the days of Shrovetide, ("descended from the heathen from their idol Bacchus, the god of wine and dunkenness,") which are near at hand, may be prohibited. That they fear "if the people still indulge in such scandalous sins as those of Shrovetide, they will more and more provoke God and bring his wrath on the settlement," which had been destroyed by the Esopus savages during the previous year.

The Magistrates referred the supplication to Gov. Stuyvesant, who issued an order forbidding the festivities. The festivities consisted of a great variety of kissing games, and of a game called "Pulling the Goose." On such occasions the goose, whose neck and head had been perviously smeared with grease or soap, was fastened by a rope between two poles. Horsemen then entered the lists, and riding at full gallop, made an attempt to seize the prize. They would often miss their mark and fall to the ground. He who succeeded in bearing off the prize was declared King of the Festival, and all present drank at his expense at the tavern.

DOODY CRITICISED ACTRESSES.

The Contractor's Counsel Tries to Prove that He Is Insane.

The trial of Daniel Doody, contractor, for perjury growing out of the case of Robert W. Fielding, who, as a public official, was indicted for conniving to defraud the old City of Brooklyn, was continued in the County Court yesterday. Jere Wernberg, counsel for Mr. Doody, said that he would show that the defendant was of unsound mind.

After reviewing the alleged corruption that existed in the Brooklyn City Works Department in 1897 Mr. Wernberg attacked District Attorney Clarke for the methods he had pursued in getting information from Doody. Mr. Wernberg said that he would show that his client really lost his memory and was indicted because of an impaired mind. Doody, he said, went home one night and took an infant from its bed; when discovered by the family he was trying to teach it to play checkers.

Mrs. Mary A. Doody, wife of the defendant, described the happiness that had existed in their home until about ten years ago, when one of her sons was drowned; the accident, she said, marked the beginning of Doody's mental troubles. He became moody and has been melancholy for ten years. The witness said that on one occasion her husband took her and several children out driving. After throwing them out of the carriage by his recklessness he left them without a cent, to get home as best they could.

Then Mrs. Doody told of her husband's peculiar actions at the theatre. On one occasion he insisted on going out during the performance.

"He said the actress had a big mouth," said Mrs. Doody.

"Who was the actress?"

"Blanche Walsh, I think."

"On another occasion," said Mrs. Doody, "he insisted on leaving the theatre while an act was in progress because he objected to Ada Rehan's appearance."

The trial will be continued to-day.

New Defendant in Aqueduct Suit.

Justice Andrews yesterday granted permission to Irving T. Bush, acting for Controller Coler in the taxpayers' suit to recover the $700,000 paid by the city on Aqueduct contract claims, to bring in Walston H. Brown, receiver for Brown, Howard & Co., as a party defendant. A motion to make the law firm of Kellog, Rose & Smith, who obtained the judgment against the city, also defendants, was denied. Controller Coler filed an affidavit that the law firm received as a fee 20 per cent. of the $700,000.

G. A. BALLANTINE'S DEBTS

Entry of the Jacquin Judgment May Cause Complications.

The Debtor Had a Written Agreement with Creditors Concerning All His Obligations.

The entry of the judgment for $7,788 against George A. Ballantine, noted in yesterday's NEW YORK TIMES, may result in making a very great legal mixup, as far as Mr. Ballantine's creditors are concerned. They had all entered into an agreement by which they were to receive their money in three annual instalments, the first to be paid next month. There was general surprise yesterday when the fact became known that Lawyer Emile Schultze, Jr., had taken judgment on the claim of Jacquin & Co. of Paris. At the same time this judgment was entered another in favor of Benjamin Altman for $522 was entered against Minnie H. Ballantine, the wife of George A. Ballantine.

Mr. Ballantine is a son of the late Peter Ballantine, a Newark brewer, who left a very large fortune. When Peter Ballantine died he created a trust fund from which George A. draws a substantial annual income. The young man has been twice married. His first wife was Mabel Lothrop of Boston. He took her abroad to live, and the Paris judgment is a reminder of this trip. It was while abroad that Mr. Ballantine created somewhat of a sensation by applying in the French courts for a divorce from his wife, naming an attaché of the United States Embassy. He obtained his divorce and then returned to this country. It was in 1896 that he announced his intention to marry Mrs. Minnie Howe Parry, the widow of a Baltimore business man and a daughter of James S. Chambers of Germantown, Penn. The announcement of this engagement led to a quarrel between Mr. Ballantine and Grace Henderson, an actress, in which a revolver played a prominent part. Mr. Ballantine and Mrs. Parry were married on Aug. 28, 1896, at the Waldorf.

For some time they have been living quietly at 10 East Seventy-seventh Street, and it was their removal from there that precipitated the present judgments. For some months Mr. Ballantine realized that the debts he had created during his life abroad and the early period of his second marriage here were such that he could not conveniently meet them. His counsel, Gould & Wilkie, accordingly prepared and had printed an agreement between Mr. Ballantine and his creditors. This agreement provided, among other things, that on Jan. 25, 1900, when he received his allowance from the trust fund, he was to get a certain portion of their claims. Another payment was to be made in January, 1902, and the entire indebtedness wiped out in 1903. Just how much this indebtedness amounted to the lawyers concerned decline to say, but it is known that a bond for $70,000 was executed and placed in the hands of a law firm representing the creditors and that this bond was to guarantee the first payment.

This agreement was in a fair way to be carried to the end, when Mr. and Mrs. Ballantine gave up their home in East Seventy-seventh Street and sent their furniture to the Manhattan Storage Warehouse Company. This was about ten days ago. Inquirers at the house ever since then have been informed that Mr. and Mrs. Ballantine had sailed for Europe. As a matter of fact they are staying at the Holland House.

The first to discover their change of address was Benjamin Altman, who had a bill against Mrs. Ballantine. This bill was for $169.71 for goods purchased by Mrs. Ballantine from May 3 last to June 5. Shipman, Larocque & Choate, counsel for Mr. Altman, at once began an action in the City Court to recover the money. The papers were served on Mrs. Ballantine at the hotel and judgment, including costs, was taken by default.

Mrs. Ballantine has considerable money in her own name, receiving a large income from a fund with the Girard Trust Company of Philadelphia, and she is also said to have a large deposit at the Plaza Bank in this city, and orders were issued to attach that fund. Meanwhile Mr. Schultze heard of this proceeding, and as he had a confession of judgment from Mr. Ballantine on the Pacquin & Co. claim, he immediately entered this and issued on it.

Mr. Ballantine's counsel declined to talk about the situation, but a lawyer who knows the facts said: "The situation now is that Mr. Ballantine may take advantage of the bankruptcy law and thus clear himself of the debts. The trust fund from which he gets his income is so tied up that his creditors could not reach it, and all he would have to do would be to turn over his jewelry and a few other small items and be free. Instead of doing this in the first place, he tried to be fair with his creditors and give up a very large portion of his income each year for three years for their benefit."

[illegible] may cause other creditors to take the same course and as a result break the agreement made only a short time ago."

Mr. Schultze, counsel for Pacquin & Co., declined to talk about the case only to say that he had obeyed the instructions of his clients.

HENRY ZEIMER'S TRIAL.

Employes of the Alleged Divorce Will Testify for State.

Testimony detailing the methods pursued by Lawyer Henry Zeimer in obtaining for Mrs. Byrde G. Herrick a divorce from her husband, William C. Herrick, by means of the admittedly false testimony of May Thompson, was given by both women during Zeimer's trial for subornation of perjury in General Sessions yesterday. Mrs. Herrick and Miss Thompson had previously made exhaustive statements of their knowledge of the case to the District Attorney, the substance of which has already been made public. Their testimony yesterday was but a repetition of these statements.

Zeimer's counsel, Amasa Evans, attacked the credibility of the Thompson woman's testimony and moved the dismissal of the case on the ground that guilt had not been proved. Should the Recorder deny this motion, he asked that the jury be directed to return a verdict of acquittal. Recorder Goff took both motions under advisement.

MOTHER-IN-LAW DEFEATED.

John Sullivan's Appeal for Protection to Magistrate Cornell Produces Results.

"Your Honor," said John Sullivan, an electrician of 16 Clark Street, as he stood at the bar of the Essex Market Police Court, behind two policemen and shook his fist defiantly at his mother-in-law, Mrs. Annie Griffiths, who stood glowering at him, "if you don't protect me from that woman, there's going to be trouble. She's been assaulting me long enough. I won't stand for it."

"Look at that eye, your Honor," went on the enraged husband, displaying an optic with a dark blue halo around it. "Jest look at that eye, will you? She did it. And it's got to stop," and Sullivan took a determined step behind one of the big policemen as his mother-in-law advanced toward him.

"This man Sullivan is no good," she said to Magistrate Cornell. "He married my daughter simply to get the insurance on the life of her first husband. Every thing he gets he blows."

"I want protection, yer Honor," interrupted Sullivan again. "She came to my house with a knife and fork in her hands and threatened to do me up. She beats me whenever she sees me, and if it is not stopped there's going to be serious trouble."

Again Mrs. Griffiths assailed her son-in-law's character, until finally the daughter, who was in court, took her husband's part. Sullivan, with renewed courage, came from cover and for a time a family fight was imminent. The Magistrate quelled the disturbance and put the mother-in-law under verbal bonds to keep her hands off Sullivan for six months.

THE MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE.

Senate Votes to Adjourn To-day—Little Chance for Tax Bills.

LANSING, Mich., Dec. 13—At 2:45 this afternoon the Senate, by a vote of 17 to 11, adopted a concurrent resolution providing for final adjournment of the special session to-morrow.

While it is thought that the House will refuse to concur, the Senate's action is considered as showing that the taxation bills cannot pass that body, if they do the House.

LAWYER PINCUS ON THE RACK.

Judge Newburger Questions His Right to Practice Here.

Lawyer Abraham Pincus, whose name was mentioned by Isaac Blumberg in connection with the disappearance from the District Attorney's office of a two-thousand-dollar note, was subjected to a rigid examination by Judge Newburger yesterday concerning his license to practice law in this county.

Pincus was sent to England by Blumberg, who had been swindled, he claims, to the extent of $70,000 by Musher, to fix matters up with the latter. Pincus returned as Musher's counsel.

Pincus, on the stand yesterday, was asked by Judge Newburger when and where he was admitted to the bar. He replied that he was admitted in Brooklyn in 1895. He did not remember if any certificate had ever been filed, and was unable to find his name in a list handed him by the Judge.

The Judge asked him if he thought his conduct in assisting Musher was proper, in view of the fact that he represented Blumberg.

He replied that Judge Goldfogle knew what he was doing. He further testified that he did not know that it was common rumor that he was implicated in the disappearance of the note, and that he was never so informed by the District Attorney.

"Did you call upon Musher alone in the Tombs?" the Judge asked.

"Yes; and Judge Goldfogle knew I was there."

Assistant District Attorney Cowan asked Pincus if he did not remember being accused by him of knowing where the note was. Pincus said he did not.

Judge Newburger directed that a copy of Pincus's testimony be sent to the Bar Association for action.

ROENTGEN SOCIETY MEETS.

Scientific Men Discuss the Value of the X-Ray.

The first regular meeting of the Roentgen Society of the United States opened yesterday in the Grand Central Palace. Besides the members in New York, about two hundred delegates were present from other States. The meeting discussed the value of the X-ray as a therapeutic and pathological agent. In connection with the meeting was the most perfect exhibit yet placed before the public. It embraces static machinery of the most recent make, coils for generating and Crook's tubes of recent invention.

Dr. Heber Robarts of St. Louis and Dr. J. Rudis-Jicinsky of Cedar Rapids were re-elected as President and Secretary Treasurer, respectively. Other officers elected were: First Vice President—Dr. G. P. Girdwood of Montreal; Second Vice President—Dr. Bender; Assistant Secretary—Dr. Price.

PENNSYLVANIA WINS DEBATE.

Its Representatives Defeat Those of Columbia In First Annual Contest.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 13.—The University of Pennsylvania won the first annual debating contest with Columbia University at the Academy of Music to-night. The question discussed was, "Resolved, That the United States should establish a system of graded subsidies, based upon mileage traveled by registered American vessels while engaged in foreign trade. According to the agreement, the question this year was submitted to Columbia by Pennsylvania, and Columbia, having the choice of sides, elected to defend the negative. The contestants were Horace Stern, 1902, Law; Judson C. Rosebush, Department of Philosophy, and Lester B. Johnson, 1901, Pennsylvania, and J. W. Parks, 1902, Law; C. C. Tuttle, 1902, Law, and L. M. Wood, 1902, Law, for Columbia.

The Columbia team presented a strong and logical case, while Rosebush and Johnson, for Pennsylvania, showed a slight tendency to wander from the subject under discussion. Stern, the other Pennsylvanian, however, presented a magnificent argument. His conclusions were exceptionally strong, bringing together in a masterly manner all the threads of the discussion. The judges, after a short consultation, awarded the contest to the Pennsylvanians. The judges of the debate were Judge George Gray of the Circuit Court of the United States; James P. Sterrett, ex-Chief Justice of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, and James M. Beck, Assistant United States Attorney General.

SLAIN BY CRAZY SHOPMATE

George Schaeffer Fatally Shot at the Sohmer Piano Factory.

The Homicide, After Wounding Another Man, Flees to East River and Plunges In.

David Schrenk, a cabinetmaker in the Sohmer piano factory, Astoria, went insane yesterday at noon, and without the slightest warning shot and killed a fellow-workman and seriously wounded another. He then ran at top speed to the East River, snapping his revolver at a policeman who tried to oppose him, and plunged into the water. He was rescued and locked up, after which he again appeared perfectly calm and rational.

The dead man is George Schaeffer, while the wounded workman is George Becker, who is now in St. John's Hospital, Long Island City.

Schrenk, Schaeffer, Becker, and ten other men worked together on the fourth floor of the Sohmer factory. When the noon whistle blew, these, with four others, sat down on their benches to eat their luncheons. The men had just gotten their luncheons spread out when, according to Becker, who tells the clearest story of the tragedy, there was the sound of steps on the side of the room where Schrenk and Schaeffer were, but which was hidden from Becker by some machinery. A moment later there was a shot, followed by the sound of a heavy body falling. A second later Schrenk came into view around the machinery. He had a revolver in his hand and his lips were moving, but no sound came from there. He caught sight of Becker, and raising his revolver, fired two shots at him, both of which missed. Becker jumped up and held his bench in front of him as a shield. Schrenk tried to wrench the bench from his fellow-workman, and, failing, fired around it at short range. The bullet entered Becker's left arm. Becker fell to the floor, and as he did so Schrenk exclaimed, "I have just one shot more," and fired at the prostrate man, but missed. Then, with the pistol still in his hand, he ran down to the street and headed for the river. He met Patrolman Gerrity on the way, and the officer, noticing the revolver, tried to stop him. Schrenk snapped the revolver at him and passed on, while the officer gave chase. Reaching the river, the man plunged in and struck out for the centre of the stream, but the current carried him down stream and back toward a pier. Gerrity and a boatman, who had rowed out into the stream, rescued him.

Meanwhile the terrified employes in the factory found Schaeffer lying on the floor dead, with a bullet hole in his temple. Becker was lying on the floor groaning. The dead man was taken to Tallou's morgue.

As soon as Becker had identified him, Schrenk was taken to the Seventy-fourth Precinct Station, where he drew a pipe out of his pocket and began to smoke. He said nothing and did not appear greatly interested in the proceedings. He is fifty-one years old, married, and lives at 411 East Sixty-fifth Street, Manhattan. Schaeffer lived with his wife and children on Wilber Street, Dutch Kills.

It is said that Schrenk had not spoken for some months, but the cause is not known.

At Schrenk's residence, 411 East Sixty-fifth Street, it was said last night that Mrs. Schrenk had gone to Astoria to see her husband. Neighbors said that recently they noticed that Schrenk was acting strangely. They said that frequently he would walk through the hallways singing and talking to himself.

NEW CASES OF SMALLPOX.

Health Board Reports Four Persons Stricken—Italian Scares Clerks of the Department.

Four new cases of smallpox were reported yesterday to the Board of Health. Besides these cases, two suspected cases, which were discovered on Wednesday and isolated in the Reception Hospital at the foot of East Sixteenth Street, developed unmistakable symptoms of the disease, and were immediately sent to the pesthouse.

Three of the smallpox victims who were discovered yesterday had been residents of houses from which smallpox patients have been previously taken. One of them gave the officials in the offices of the Board of Health a scare yesterday morning. He is an Italian named Mazzia, and is able to speak very little English. He entered the offices of the Health Board and wandered all through the rooms before he met any one who would listen to him. From what he said it was supposed that he wished to report a case which he thought might be smallpox, and he was sent to Dr. Blauvelt. As soon as the doctor saw him he seized him by the arm and hurried him into his private office. He examined him for a few moments, and then declared that he had a well-defined case of smallpox.

This announcement caused considerable alarm among the clerks, although they had all been vaccinated. The offices were at once fumigated and sprinkled with disinfectants. When an interpreter was found it was learned that Mazzia had boarded for several days at 306 West Sixty-ninth Street with an Italian family, in which several cases of smallpox were discovered ten days ago. When the Health Board officials examined the place they did not learn that any such person as Mazzia had ever lived there.

The wife and brother-in-law of John Mitchell, who was taken to North Brother Island suffering with the smallpox on Thanksgiving Day from 258 West Sixty-eighth Street, developed unmistakable symptoms of the disease yesterday and were removed. They are Edith Mitchell and George Menler. When Mitchell was found to have smallpox the members of the family would not allow themselves to be vaccinated.

The other case of smallpox which was reported yesterday was that of Mary Bratton of 37 West Seventieth Street. Her case was reported to the Board of Health early in the afternoon, and as she showed unmistakable symptoms of the disease she was immediately removed to North Brother Island.

James Nelson of 517 West Forty-second Street, and Mrs. Carter of 137 West Sixtieth Street, who were removed to the Reception Hospital on Wednesday, were found to be suffering from the disease yesterday, and were also sent to North Brother Island.

Cause of Typhoid at Sing Sing Found.

ALBANY, Dec. 13.—Dr. Robert T. Irvine, resident physician at Sing Sing Prison, has notified the State Board of Health that he has discovered the cause of typhoid fever among the prisoners. He found that the water supply pipe for the prison was broken. This pipe runs through and around some old-fashioned buildings that have outside closets. The doctor says that the drain is an old-fashioned covered one instead of being a hermetically sealed iron pipe.

STRIKERS WANT TO ARBITRATE.

Enlist Aid of Colorado's Acting Governor—Santa Fe Officials Say There Is Nothing to Arbitrate.

DENVER, Dec. 13.—Lieut. Gov. Carney, who is acting Governor in the absence of Gov. Thomas, was waited upon at the Capitol by a committee of telegraphers, who desired to discuss at length the existing strike on the Santa Fé Railway and to ask Mr. Carney to lend his assistance in bringing about an early settlement. After the subject had been carefully gone over, Mr. Carney signified his willingness to request the officers of the railway to arbitrate the difference. A telegram was sent by Mr. Carney to Chairman Walker of the Board of Directors of the Santa Fé and President Ripley as follows:

"In behalf of the people of the State of Colorado, after due investigation, the locked-out telegraphers of your railroad are absolved from any complicity in recent outrages upon certain employes who have taken the places of the men of this State. The interests of the people of the State and the patrons of your road would be materially subserved were the differences existing between the management and the telegraphers submitted to arbitration and settled as speedily as possible."

TOPEKA, Kan., Dec. 13.—President Ripley of the Santa Fé, who is here, replied to the message of Acting Gov. Carney as follows:

"Have given your suggestion most careful consideration, and regret that circumstances preclude compliance. The striking telegraphers hitherto employed on our lines in Colorado did not strike because of any grievance against the company. On the contrary, by the course they pursued they violated their obligations, technical and moral, obligations which on our part have been fully lived up to in every respect.

"The compsny has not charged strikers with committing outrages on employes. The public and the authorities of law must judge as to who is guilty. Under all the circumstances it is manifest that the time for arbitration has passed."

In speaking of the matter Mr. Ripley said: "As far as the Santa Fé road is concerned the strike is a closed incident. The time for argument or arbitration is past. The places of the strikers have about all been filled, and the strike has ceased to give the officers of the road any serious concern."

Aldace F. Walker, Chairman of the Board of Directors, expressed similar views.

GETTING OPERATORS HERE.

Eleven Out of One Hundred Applicants Ready to Replace Strikers.

About 100 telegraph operators appeared at the United States Hotel, at Fulton and Pearl Streets, yesterday morning in answer to the advertisement published in the morning papers asking for telegraphers for out-of-town work. Each applicant was ushered into the presence of J. W. Williams, before whom he was required to demonstrate his ability by manipulating a telegraph key. An agreement was then submitted stating that the applicant was to take the place of a striker. The agreement went on to say that the salary would be from $45 to $70, according to the ability of the operator.

Of the 100 applicants who called, only 11 signed the agreement. It was said that they only signed to learn the exact state of affairs. It is the general opinion among the operators that the men are wanted to be sent to take the places of the operators who struck recently on the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé Railroad.

ARCHITECTS IN SESSION.

American Institute Will Make Efforts to Beautify Washington.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The American Institute of Architects began its thirty-fourth annual convention to-day in the banquet room of the Arlington Hotel. About seventy-five members were present, including the President, Robert S. Peabody, and the Secretary, Glenn Brown. Mr. McFarland, President of the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia, delivered an address of welcome. In his annual address President Peabody, speaking of the architecture of the National capital, said that no city was more full of architectural warnings, and none better exemplifies in its buildings what is and what is not architecture. "One," he said, "does not need a professional education to feel mortified at the sight of certain buildings that have been thrust upon these beautiful highways in comparatively recent years."

The Board of Directors in their annual report censured certain members of the institute for alleged unprofessional conduct in connection with the competition for the selection of an architect for the Pennsylvania State Capitol. On motion a committee was appointed consisting of Messrs. Boring and Post of New York, Coolidge of Boston, Eames of St. Louis, and Glenn Brown of Washington, to formulate and present to Congress for passage a bill providing for the appointment of a committee to consider and recommend a comprehensive plan for the architectural improvement of the National Capitol. The remainder of the session was largely devoted to routine business.

The main feature of the day's proceedings was the consideration of resolutions offered by W. S. Eames of St. Louis relating to the proposed construction of an addition to the Executive Mansion. These resolutions ask Congress that before any alterations or additions to the mansion are undertaken that body call to its aid architects whose education and experience have been of such character as will give assurance that the changes proposed will neither mar the present beauties of the house nor fail to obtain satisfactory results from the work undertaken.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

LEXINGTON, Va., Dec. 13.—The Buena Vista Fire Clay Brick Plant was destroyed by fire to-day. A roof was being put on a new kiln, and it caught fire. The flames soon spread to the entire plant, and the machinery works, the valuable part of the plant, are a total loss. The plant is owned by the Southern Clay Product Company. The loss is $30,000; insurance, $15,000.

Not so at Wanamaker's. Not only are thousands of ideal gifts for men displayed here, but they are of such proper and refined character, selected with such expert care, that no woman—even if doubtful of a man's likes and dislikes—can go wrong, in the selecting. No exclusive store anywhere has a better showing of Men's House Coats, Neckwear, Suspenders, Gloves, and other wearables. Same is true of Watches, Jewelry, articles for the Toilet, Smoking Requisites, Golf Goods, Musical Instruments, or Easy Chairs. Some special news is told below:

We had our list with the Jules Monard watches—the most perfect in the world. Jules Monard is the only watchmaker of the old school that still gives his personal touch to the final adjustment of every watch that bears his name.

Men's Overcoats

Yesterday's word was of the high-grade top-coats, our assortment of which is unexcelled. But we feel hardly less pride in this broad variety of excellent, inexpensive coats. Some coats at $8.50—that's a little enough price for almost any use, and it buys an overcoat that would ordinarily be considered unusually good value at $10. It's of all-wool frieze; Oxford mixed; neat plaid lining; good looking and good wearing Handsome, durable coats at $10 and $12. And at $15 the most popular overcoat we ever knew—rough-faced cheviot Raglans. Some also of excellent frieze. A splendid Raglan, too, at $20. It's of rough cheviot in Oxford mixed herringbone pattern.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Men's Umbrellas

Here are three groups. All comprising handsome umbrellas suitable for holiday gifts—all specially good values. This one is $2. It's of Union taffeta. Choice of various natural wood handles—some silver trimmed. Here's an all-silk umbrella that's marked $3. It's usually marked much higher elsewhere. Equally true of this third group. They're of extra quality silk, with handles of silver-trimmed natural wood, staghorn and ivory. Fine stylish umbrellas, that are decidedly cheap at $3.75 and $5.

The Picture Store

No more interesting corner of the big establishment just now than the picture store. There have been exceptionally successful efforts in the gathering of holiday pictures. This is a sort of headquarters each season for seekers of water colors for Christmas gifts. The collection of them is finer than ever—$20 to $275. Broad assortments, too, of etchings, plain and colored photogravures, carbon and platinum photographs. A very interesting new feature in the latter is first placed on view this morning.

These are genuine platinum photographs, shown in twelve good subjects. The frames are dead black with rims of bright silver. The lights and shadows of the picture, however, are carried out on the frames they enclose, producing a unique and very pleasing effect. The smallest—8 x 13 in., inside of 2-inch frame—is $7. Various other sizes up to 18 x 28 in. inside of 3-in. frame, at $22.50.

Holiday Offering of Men's HOUSE COATS

More than a thousand of these luxurious House Coats or Smoking Jackets go on sale this morning at little above half price. And there are few more showy or satisfying gifts for men. We count it rare good fortune to be able to offer them just when you want them most.

The manufacturers who are the largest producers of House Coats in this country were shrewd enough to want to sell all they had before Christmas, and so the offer came. The loss they were willing to take brings these splendid gains to the holiday buyers who share these handsome coats.

They are made from all-wool reversible cloths, in plain and fancy styles. Priced as follows:

560 Coats Reduced from $6 to $3.50
258 Coats Reduced from $8.50 to $5
212 Coats Reduced from $11 to $6.50

No other equally cheap offering of House Coats has been made in this city for many years.

Gift Suggestions in MEN'S WEAR

If all furnishings for men were alike you could buy them anywhere that it was most convenient. But they are not. Primarily designed for protection against the cold. But there's another important element—that of proper style, without which the costliest of fur garments would be undesirable for wear. Besides that, every piece is fairly priced. You pay only for the furs themselves—nothing added for name:

Women were quick to recognize the artistic possibilities of these rich, effective wraps, and bought them by the hundreds. That's the reason for this opportunity—a lot of about thirty-five, mostly one or two each of styles which we don't intend to renew, but all in the latest and best designs of Europe and America. Two Glove Stores

Two mighty good stores, too, as many men and women hereabout are ready at any time to testify. This was a great glove centre a generation ago, and we're doing our best to sustain that greatness.

The Women's Glove Store should have the first word. There's been frequent inquiry for the new Victoria, unfortunately delayed. They're here now in pique and round seam, all shades, and black and white. $1.85 for this perfection in kid-glove-making.

The Royale, glace and suede, pique and round seam, is a very excellent glove at $1.50.

And the Princess May—most everybody knows how good a glove it is—the best we know of in a kid glove at $1.

Women's Kimonos

Americans find much to admire and commend in the skill and cleverness and originality of the Japanese. Their fashions, however, don't awaken much enthusiasm here. The Kimono is the exception. Whatever coziness and comfort and convenience generally the Kimono affords is due the Japanese—with some help from manufacturers here at home.

Some very effective styles here of flannelette, neatly striped in pink and white, with broad borders of contrasting color, at $1.50 each. Some also in solid color flannelette, with plaid borders, at $1.75 each.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Women's Warm Robes

There's a feeling of comfort imparted through just a mere viewing of these luxurious bath or negligee robes of eiderdown. That feeling is not at all disturbed on learning how they're priced. A splendid robe may be had for $3.25. Various solid colors; neatly bound with satin; 2 silk frogs and girdle. At $4.50, some attractive robes of striped eiderdown—a particularly good value. HANNA DEFENDS SUBSIDIES

Makes Long Speech in Senate on the Shipping Bill.

A MERE QUESTION OF BUSINESS

Denies American Liners Would Receive $304,090 Each—Questions by Senators Vest and Clay.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—For nearly three hours to-day Mr. Hanna of Ohio addressed the Senate upon the pending Ship Subsidy bill. While he has spoken heretofore on the floor of the Senate, his effort to-day really was his first formal speech to the body since he became a member of it.

Since coming to the Senate Mr. Hanna has devoted much time and labor to the preparation of the Ship Subsidy bill, and as he is regarded by his colleagues as one of the best informed public men on the question, his speech was given unusually close attention. Senators on both sides of the chamber remained in their seats throughout the delivery of the address. He spoke without manuscript, and his delivery at all times was forcible and intense. At the conclusion of the speech he received the cordial congratulations of many of his colleagues.

Mr. Hanna's speech was in a sense a reply to that delivered a few days ago by Mr. Clay (Dem., Ga.). Like Mr. Clay, Mr. Hanna is a member of the Committee on Commerce, from which the measure now pending was reported to the Senate.

In opening his address, Mr. Hanna said that in his remarks Mr. Clay had brought into question the motives of those who had assisted in the preparation of the pending measure. As a member of the Maritime Committee, as well as a member of the Committee on Commerce, Mr. Hanna said he felt it his right and duty to explain the work of those committees.

"For myself," he declared, "I resent the imputation that any other motive than those of interest in our country and good public policy actuated the committees."

Mr. Clay interrupted Mr. Hanna to disclaim any such imputation.

Taking up the bill Mr. Hanna said the pending measure was believed to be the most practical legislation that could be enacted upon the subject. He then sketched rapidly the rise of the shipping industry of the Great Lakes. He had, he said, been connected with that industry for nearly forty years, and had seen it grow from a comparatively insignificant beginning to its present condition of unparalleled greatness. He recalled the time nearly a third of a century ago when the ship Escanaba carried 600 tons of iron ore from Escanaba to Cleveland. To-day, he said, there were steamers on the Great Lakes which were carrying 6,000 gross tons in one cargo.

He maintained that this great shipping industry on the lakes had been fostered and protected by salutary and wise navigation laws. To the advantage of these laws was added the liberal appropriations made by Congress for the improvement of the harbors of the Great Lakes.

Continuing, he declared that in order to build up the American merchant marine it was necessary to have not only capital and experience, but it was necessary likewise "to afford our foreign carrying trade protection—some kind of inducement—by law." If this protection should be afforded, the growth of the American merchant marine would be on a par with the growth of the shipping industry on the Great Lakes.

DECLINE IN AMERICAN SHIPPING.

Discussing the rise and fall of the American merchant marine, Mr. Hanna declared that the beginning of the decline in the industry was coincident with the outbreak of the civil war.

Mr. Vest, (Dem., Mo.,) interrupted the Ohio Senator to challenge his statement that the civil war caused the decline of shipping. He declared the decline had begun as far back as 1855. In reply, Mr. Hanna reviewed the history of the American merchant marine from the establishment of the Nation until the present time. He maintained that the decadence in American shipping had begun in 1860, and not in 1855, as the Missouri Senator had asserted. He declared that, in the circumstances, there was not to-day a question so important to the maritime nations of the Old World as the prevention of American competition on the high seas.

"This marine industry," Mr. Hanna said, "is promotive of our National prosperity and at the same time is one of the bulwarks of our National defense. The foreign commerce of the United States is four times larger to-day than it was in 1860, and yet the proportion of the foreign carrying trade is now less than one-third what it was in 1860. This is a most humiliating decline in a great National industry."

After paying a high tribute to Senator Frye for the work he had done during his public career in the interest of American shipping Mr. Hanna said of the pending subject: "There is no popular question which appeals so strongly to the American people as does this one of building up the sea power of the Nation. It is a simple question of business as affecting the investment of capital, although there is a phase of it that appeals to the patriotism of the American people."

Adverting to the amount of the subsidy which would be drawn by the vessels of the American International Navigation Company, Mr. Hanna said he did not propose to evade any of the slanders or calumnious assertions of anybody in connection with this matter. He declared that the four ships of the American Line, which are carriers of mail had not made a net dollar since they came under the American flag. He challenged the assertion of Mr. Clay that each of the fast vessels of the American Line would draw $304,090 annually from the proposed subsidy.

Mr. Clay directed the Ohio Senator's attention to the testimony of Mr. Clyde, a steamship owner, before the Commerce Committee, in the course of which he stated the American Line vessels would receive that amount of subsidy.

"I am not using Mr. Clyde's figures," replied Mr. Hanna, "but my own." Thereupon Mr. Vest called attention to the fact that Mr. Chamberlain, the Commissioner of Navigation, and one of the strongest advocates of the pending measure, also had said the American Line vessels would receive $304,090 annually from the subsidy.

After asserting that his figures showed that the American Line would receive less than $280,000 a year each, Mr. Hanna declared that with the subsidy the vessels of that line would not earn as much as was earned by the vessels of the Cunard and White Star lines under the mail subsidies received from Great Britain.

"There is no profit in that line," declared Mr. Hanna, "and there never will be a profit under present conditions."

Mr. Lindsay (Dem., Ky.,) inquired if it was true that even with the subsidy the American Line vessels would not earn as much as the vessels of the Cunard and White Star lines. Mr. Hanna replied that he believed it was. "Then I'd like to know," said Mr. Lindsay, "what good policy there can be in passing this bill if the subsidy is insufficient?"

Mr. Hanna's reply was contained in a long argument, in which he explained the fundamental principles of the pending measure.

AUXILIARY SHIPS IN WAR.

Mr. Hanna dwelt at length upon the desirability of having a large merchant marine to draw upon for auxiliary ships in case of war.

"Will all ships auxiliary to the naval power of the United States," inquired Mr. Vest, "such vessels as transports and supply ships, participate in this proposed subsidy?"

"I do not think so," replied Mr. Hanna.

"Then," retorted Mr. Vest, "the language of the bill ought to be changed."

Referring to what he termed the newspaper attacks upon the pending measure, Mr. Hanna declared that the men who took the responsibility of the bill before the people were entitled to as much courtesy and consideration as were the critics of the proposed legislation. "Where will you look for the accomplishment of the desire to re-establish the American merchant marine?" inquired Mr. Hanna, "but to the men who have given their lives to the consideration of the question?"

After dwelling at length upon the efforts of the maritime nations of Europe to prevent the investment by Americans of capital in the upbuilding of an American marine and urging that the proposed construction of the Nicaragua Canal was, together with the rehabilitation of this country's marine power, only a part of the great problem of transportation, Mr. Hanna said that no plainer proposition than that contained in the pending bill ever was presented. It would attract capital and lay the foundation for a great industry. The enactment of the measure into law, he urged, would benefit materially the shipbuilding industry and increase the demand for labor in every department of business and commerce.

"We must either find foreign markets for our surplus products," Mr. Hanna declared, "or we must curtail our productions of agriculture and manufactures one-third. Think what that would mean. It would mean the throwing out of employment of thousands and tens of thousands of men and the consequent increased competition for employment."

Continuing Mr. Hanna maintained that the recent achievements of the United States had placed this country in the front line of nations and all citizens were proud to know that it was respected everywhere. "In this position as a world power," he demanded, "shall we shrink from responsibility on questions that are defensible from every standpoint of reason and business? When we see this opportunity open to us to possess ourselves of our share of the foreign markets, (or more than our share, for when the American people start in any direction they generally get what they go for,) why should we not avail ourselves of it?"

Mr. Hanna, as he brought his speech to a conclusion, maintained that the question involved in the discussion was much broader than the lines of the bill wrote it. The measure was not designed to benefit any particular class or industry, but to advance the interests of the whole country. The passage of the measure would enable the United States to avail itself of the trade advantages offered in the Orient, and he declared that if it did not seize those advantages other powers would. In the event of war among any of the great maritime powers, which now were carrying 94 per cent. of American foreign commerce, Mr. Hanna asserted, the interests of this country would be paralyzed and the situation would be deplorable and ruinous.

"But," said he, in conclusion, "in my appeal to the American people for the reestablishment of the great shipbuilding industry I want to put it on higher grounds than mere dollars and cents. It is away and beyond that point in patriotism and pride in our National life. As to the popularity or unpopularity of this measure, I stand here to say that every line of it is in the interest of the American people. Upon that basis I make my appeal for its passage, and leave the question in your hands."

NEW EXTRADITION TREATY.

Existing Agreement with Great Britain Amended.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—A treaty has been concluded between the United States and Great Britain amendatory of the existing extradition treaty and intended to correct certain imperfections in that instrument developed by recent experience.

The changes do not materially affect the scope or principles of the existing treaty, the chief item in the list being a provision classifying as a crime subject to extradition the obtaining of money under false pretenses. At present the treaty makes extraditionable the reception of money obtained under false pretenses, and as the omission of the principal in the crime is a manifest absurdity, the amendment is made.

GEN. LEE'S NAME APPROVED.

New York University Senate Acts on Veterans' Protest—University Appointments.

The New York University Senate recently received a protest from the Association of the Survivors of the Sixth Army Corps in Washington, D. C., against the placing of Gen. Robert E. Lee's name in the Hall of Fame. Gen. Lee's name was among those selected by the judges, among whom were included university Presidents, jurists, and publicists. The protest of the Sixth Army Corps Survivors was that Gen. Lee, who was an officer in the United States Army, deserted his Government in the face of the enemy, and was not, therefore, an example worthy of emulation.

The University Senate, after considering the protest, announces that it is too late to make any change in the list; and, moreover, that the Senate agrees with the decision to give Gen. Lee a place among the American immortals.

Dr. John E. Weeks, who for ten years has occupied the position of Lecturer on Ophthalmology, has been appointed to a professorship in the same department. Dr. Maltby Babcock and Andrew H. Green have accepted seats in the University Council.

RUNAWAY ON FIFTH AVENUE.

Frightened Horse Takes to the Sidewalk—Children In Danger.

A horse attached to a light carriage owned by George A. Sipp of the Harlem Stables and driven by John McTiernan of 208 East One Hundred and Seventeenth Street, became frightened by the bell of a motor vehicle at Sixty-first Street and Fifth Avenue yesterday afternoon and ran away. The horse took to the west sidewalk and ran to Sixtieth Street, throwing McTiernan out. At Fifty-ninth Street the animal narrowly missed crashing into a cross-town car and was caught by Patrolman Kiernan of the East Fifty-first Street Station.

McTiernan escaped injury. After brushing his clothing he drove the horse back to the stables. Several nurses who were out on the avenue with their charges narrowly escaped being run down.

EDITH VAN BIEL'S ESTATE.

Dispute of Auctioneer and Lawyer Over Her Furniture.

Surrogate Thomas will hear a motion this morning to vacate a restraining order served on Samuel Kreiser, the auctioneer, which prevents him from disposing of a quantity of furniture he purchased.

After the death of Edith Van Biel, who was injured while driving with Newton Stachelberg, a lawyer, Joseph D. Hart, applied to the Surrogate for letters of administration on her estate, claiming that he was the principal creditor and that she owed him for two years' legal services. The woman had considerable valuable furniture in a flat on upper Broadway, and, as Hart says, jewelry worth about $10,000. The jewelry was in a safe deposit vault.

The woman's father, Benjamin Boycott of Altoona, Penn., came here and arranged with Mr. Kreiser to take the furniture, he agreeing to pay Mr. Boycott $1,125. Hart found this out and obtained the restraining order

ARRESTED FOR BEING BLIND.

Magistrate Rebukes Complaining Witness Against Cabot.

Because Dominick Cabot, totally blind, who earns his living selling lead pencils, rolls his sightless eyes in an unpleasant manner, Mrs. Alice Peters of 27 Irving Place had him arrested yesterday and haled to the West Side Court on a charge of being a public nuisance. Mrs. Peters explained to the Court that her daughter, who was in ill-health, was much annoyed at the way the blind man rolled his eyes, and she thought it wrong that he should be allowed in the public streets to annoy people that way.

The blind man, when asked what he had to say, replied that he did not know what he had been arrested for. He said he was selling pencils at Fourteenth Street and Irving Place, as he was compelled to do in order to support his mother and sister. Magistrate Zeller then turned to the woman.

"Madam," he said, "that man is totally blind, and he cannot help it that he has a vacant stare. It is a great misfortune, and I am surprised that you should come into court with such a complaint. The man is discharged."

MOOSE FOR THE ADIRONDACKS.

Association for Restoring the Big Animal Elects Officers.

The Association for Restoring Moose to the Adirondacks held its first meeting yesterday afternoon at the rooms of the Board of Trade. The purpose of the association is to restore and try to obtain such legislation as will protect the moose in the Adirondack Mountain Preserve. The following officers were elected: President—Warren Higley; Treasurer—Frank S. Gardner; Secretary—Harry V. Radford; Vice Presidents—John L. Hill, Gen. C. W. Tillinghast, Lieut. Gov. Timothy L. Woodruff, Dr. W. Seward Webb, Col. W. F. Fox, William C. Whitney, E. J. Chase, W. West Durant, William T. Hornady, A. M. Church, David Banks, Jr., William K. Boardman, Henry S. Harper, Frank S. Black, Adelbert K. Steel, J. F. Alds, George Stevens, and Leslie Kernan.

It was stated that Dr. Webb has offered to turn loose in the Adirondacks a herd of moose which he keeps in a ten-thousand-acre park there if the association procures protective legislation. For the purpose of securing such legislation a committee of three was appointed, with Assemblyman Frank J. Price as Chairman.

REDUCTION OF WAR TAXES

Discussion of the Matter Closes in the House To-day.

Bartholdt of Missouri Will Ask to Have the Tax on Beer Made $1.50 Per Barrel.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The debate upon the War Revenue Reduction bill continued in the House to-day. It was dull and featureless. Those who spoke were Messrs. Grosvenor, (Rep., Ohio,) Bartholdt, (Rep., Mo.,) Hill, (Rep., Conn.,) Boutell, (Rep., Ill.,) McClellan, (Dem., N. Y.,) Newlands, (Sil., Nev.,) Levy, (Dem., N. Y.,) and Underwood, (Dem., Ala.) Mr. Bartholdt criticised the action of the Ways and Means Committee in not making a deeper cut in the tax on beer, and gave notice that he would offer an amendment to reduce it to $1.50 per barrel.

General debate upon the bill will close at 2 o'clock to-morrow, and Mr. Payne, (Rep., N. Y.,) the floor leader of the majority, expects the bill to pass before adjournment to-morrow.

Mr. McClellan, member of the Ways and Means Committee, was the first speaker. He said he regretted that the majority had not taken advantage of the present opportunity to reform our whole scheme of internal taxation. He thought there was a general agreement among gentlemen of all parties that internal taxation should be levied for revenue purposes only. This bill, he said, was necessarily patchwork, as all internal revenue bills must be until the whole internal revenue system is recast. Our present internal revenue system was really the outgrowth of the civil war.

Mr. McClellan spoke of the history of modern tax reform in Great Britain, Prussia, Holland, and New Zealand to show how in these four widely separated countries the same problem was solved in substantially the same way. From this he inferred that the solution must be applicable to existing conditions in the United States. He argued that there should be a balance in the budget. There was no necessity for a surplus; that with a scientific system of taxation the rates could either be lowered or raised to very nearly meet the appropriations.

A correct scheme of taxation, he contended, would include a progressive legacy tax and a progressive excise tax on certain occupations, and an indirect tax on distilled spirits, beer, and tobacco at a rate somewhat below the maximum revenue-raising point. With such a scheme it would be possible by a slight increase or decrease of the rate of one or more of these taxes to greatly increase or decrease the revenues, and that, for emergency purposes, Congress always could fall back upon the stamp duties.

Mr. Grosvenor followed. He recalled the statement of ex-President Cleveland that unnecessary taxation was unjust taxation. He planted himself, he said, upon that doctrine and proceeded to argue that the pending bill was framed upon it. The Republican Party, throughout its history, he said, always had acted upon this theory. He called the attention of the Democrats who were criticising the inequalities of the present measure to the fact that after the civil war they had resisted the abolition of the duties on tea and coffee.

The Republican Party, he said, while in power, had never shown a deficit of the Treasury. When questioned about the old story that ex-Secretary of the Treasury Foster was preparing to issue bonds just before the Cleveland Administration came into power, Mr. Grosvenor said that the bonds were ordered prepared after consultation with Senator, afterward Secretary, Carlisle. Subsequently Senator Carlisle changed his mind and the preparations were discontinued.

Mr. Wheeler (Dem., Ky.,) asked for Mr. Grosvenor's authority for this statement.

"Mr. Foster," replied Mr. Grosvenor, "has made the statement over and over again, and Mr. Carlisle has never denied it."

"Mr. Carlisle," retorted Mr. Wheeler, "has repeatedly stated that he knew nothing about the proposition to issue bonds."

Mr. Newlands, who at this point got the floor, said that justification of the retention of any features of the War Revenue act rested upon the fact that another war had followed—the Spanish war. The Spanish war had been fought in vindication of the rights of man, for free government, and to free a people from oppression. The present war was for the purpose of suppressing the aspiration of a people for independence. While the minority protests against this war, it realized that as the result of the recent election the present policy of the Administration would continue with its train of extraordinary expenses. While it protested, it would not harass. Mr. Newlands then proceeded to argue that the proposed reduction in taxation was not sufficient, that even with the estimated extraordinary expenses a much deeper cut could be made.

Speaking of the general principles of taxation, Mr. Newlands argued that the taxes now levied on bank capital and stock should be extended to all great industrial combinations, and that such corporations should be required to make complete statements regarding their capital, earnings, gross and net; salaries, &c.

Mr. Levy, in a short speech, argued that the pending bill did not go far enough. He was in favor of wiping out surplus revenues.

Mr. Hill, taking advantage of the latitude allowed in debate, discussed at length some proposed amendments to the present currency law. He called attention to the reference in the President's message to the desirability of further legislation to insure the parity of gold and silver. The result of the late election, Mr. Hill said, he construed as an imperative order to Congress to further amend the law so as to insure the maintenance of the gold standard and place it beyond the power of any man or Administration to break it down.

Mr. Underwood said that the present was an opportune time for an equitable adjustment of the burdens of taxation so that one interest should not be unduly oppressed. Had he the power, he said, he would discriminate, if there was to be discrimination, against the idle holders of idle wealth, not against productive wealth and enterprise. In the pending bill unproductive wealth was absolutely untaxed.

Mr. Bartholdt then proceeded to assail the proposed reduction on beer, which, he contended, was not sufficient. He gave notice that at the proper time he would offer an amendment to reduce the tax on beer to $1.50 per barrel. He argued that the result of the oppressive tax on beer had seriously depressed not only the brewing industry, but all allied interests.

Mr. Boutell also criticised the bill. He disliked it, he said, not so much for what it did as for what it failed to do. He recalled the words of the Republican leaders when the War Revenue act was passed to the effect that it was strictly a war measure and would be repealed when the war was over. To keep faith with the people, he declared, the pledge then made should be redeemed. He thought this could be done by abolishing the taxes one-third now, one-third July 1, 1901, and one-third Jan. 1, 1902. Mr. Boutell said, however, that even if his views did not prevail, he would vote for the bill.

PENSION BILL COMPLETED.

Carries About $145,250,000—To be Reported Saturday.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The Pension Appropriation bill was completed to-day by the House Sub-Committee on Appropriations having it in charge, after a hearing from Commissioner of Pensions Evans.

It carries about $145,250,000, of which about $144,000,000 is for pensions and the balance for administration. It will be reported to the full committee to-morrow and get before the House probably Saturday.

CONGRESSIONAL NOTES.

When the House met it adopted a resolution on motion of Mr. Payne, (Rep., N. Y.,) the floor leader of the majority, for a holiday recess from Friday, Dec. 21, to Thursday, Jan. 3.

Representative Burleigh, (Rep., Me.,) introduced a reapportionment bill fixing the membership of the House at 387 and providing that in redistricting members shall be elected as far as possible from contiguous territory.

Representative Barham, (Rep., Cal.,) introduced by request a series of bills for public improvements in Hawaii. They include bills for a site for a Government building at Honolulu to cost $125,000, for a Post Office at Hilo costing $16,000, a customs office costing $6,000, and for the establishment of a lighthouse service in Hawaii.

In the Senate yesterday Mr. Fairbanks (Rep., Ind., offered a joint resolution from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds directing the appointment by the President of the Senate of three members of that committee and by the Speaker of the House of five members of the same committee of the House to constitute a joint commission to ascertain a feasible location for and the probable cost of a Hall of Records to be located in the District of Columbia. The resolution was adopted.

OFFICE FOR JOHN W. YERKES.

President Names Defeated Candidate for Governor of Kentucky to be Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The President to-day nominated John W. Yerkes of Kentucky to be Commissioner of Internal Revenue. Mr. Yerkes had previously been nominated to be Collector of Internal Revenue for the Eighth District of Kentucky, which nomination was to-day withdrawn.

In the late election Mr. Yerkes was the Republican candidate for Governor of Kentucky and was defeated by Gov. Beckham. At the time of his nomination Mr. Yerkes was Collector of Internal Revenue for the Eighth Kentucky District. He held this office until some days before the election, when, feeling certain of victory at the polls, he resigned. A few days after the election Mr. McKinley tendered to Mr. Yerkes his old position, but the nomination had not been acted upon by the Senate when the new nomination was made to-day.

Mr. Yerkes is a native of Kentucky, born in Lexington, April 1, 1854. After graduating from Centra College he studied law at the University of Michigan, received his degree in 1877 and immediately began the practice of law in Danville, Ky. He entered politics early in his career, but never held an elective office. As Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee from 1891 to 1896 he did much to place his party in a strong position and aided materially in one of the hottest campaigns in the State, which resulted in the defeat of P. Watt Hardin by William O. Bradley, who was Governor from 1895 to 1899.

Mr. Yerkes has been professor in the law department of Centra College since 1894, and since 1892 has acted as attorney for the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific Railway.

REBELS SWEARING ALLEGIANCE.

In Panay 1,000 a Day Coming In—Aggressive Movement Planned.

MANILA, Dec. 13.—Gen. Kobbe, with the Twenty-eighth Volunteer Regiment, Col. Birkheimer commanding, landed at Kagayan, on the northern coast of Mindanao, Monday, and reinforced the six companies of the Fortieth Volunteer Regiment stationed in the town. An aggressive movement had been planned.

From Iloilo it is unofficially reported that the insurgents in that part of the Island of Panay are swearing allegiance at the rate of 1,000 a day. The arrests of many prominent insurgents started the movement, which seems to be becoming universal at Jaro, Molo, Mandurriao, Arevela, and Iloilo.

Considerable sums of money and large quantities of supplies have been captured by the Americans.

NEW CABLES IN PHILIPPINES.

The Burnside to Begin Laying 600 Miles Next Week.

MANILA, Dec. 13.—The United States cable ship Burnside next week will proceed to Damuguete, Island of Negros, to begin the laying of 600 miles of Government cable to connect Negros, Mindanao, and Jolo. Negros and Cebu already have cable connection with Iloilo and Manila.

The new line will extend from Damuguete to Oromaueta, Misamis, Iligata, and Tagoloan, all on the north coast of Mindanao. A land line will connect Misamis and Tigum and the main portion of the cable will extend from Tigum to Zamboanga and thence to Jolo.

At present there is scarcely any telegraphic communication with Southeastern Luzon, owing to the persistent wire cutting. It is proposed eventually to connect that section and the larger islands adjacent by cable with Manila.

FOR A PHILIPPINE POLICE.

Commission Appropriates $150,000—Other Measures Passed.

MANILA, Dec. 13.—The Taft commission has passed an act authorizing Gen. MacArthur to establish police in the cities and towns and appropriating $150,000 for their maintenance.

Commissioner Wright (who is assigned to supervise the establishment of a constabulary, among other duties) said the establishment of a local police force was a necessary feature of civil government and was approved by the military government.

An act was also passed providing for the retention in office of the Municipal Councilors elected under order of the Military Governor, until a general municipal law was passed. The terms of some of the Councilors expire in January. The elections for one year are suspended.

Finally a bill was passed directing the Civil Service Board to examine and report on the readjustment of the salaries of civil employes.

The commission discussed also the schedules of the Tariff bill, the rates being generally unchanged from the present figures inherited from the Spanish régime.

PRELATE ARGUES FOR THE ARMY CANTEENS

Archbishop Ireland Appears Before a Senate Committee.

Says Post Exchanges Aid the Cause of Temperance and Good Morals in the Army.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—In the Senate Committee on Military Affairs to-day the hearing on the Army Reorganization bill was continued, and in addition to a number of army officers, Archbishop Ireland and Bishop McGoldrick were heard. The two prelates spoke only on the provision of the bill prohibiting the establishment of canteens or post exchanges. Both pronounced the provision unwise, and expressed the opinion that the canteen is conducive to the interests of temperance and good morals in the army.

Archbishop Ireland based his remarks especially upon his observations of affairs at Fort Snelling, near his home, at St. Paul. He said that he was sure from all that he had seen and heard among the soldiers that the canteen is a powerful factor in the protection of the soldiers from outside temptations of all kinds, and he did not accept the theory that the canteen brings to the troops temptation that otherwise would not come to them.

The Archbishop said further that, judging from his observations and experience at Fort Snelling, "it is useless to try to prohibit absolutely the use of liquor. If you try to be too severe and do away with it altogether in the army, the men will find it in ways that are illegal and more harmful."

He added that since the canteen had been established at Fort Snelling fewer men are found drinking outside the reservation than formerly. In other words, after paying day at the fort, many of the men would be found in St. Paul, and the next day many of them would turn up in the police courts. He also spoke of what he designated "miserable saloons along the border of the military reservation, which furnish the soldiers not only with liquor of the worst kind, but everything else that makes for iniquity." He said:

"I am myself a total abstainer, but when it comes to dealing with the people at large, I think the only satisfactory and successful way is to eliminate the danger as far as possible, and to reduce drinking to the minimum, to advocate moderate temperance."

Senator Burrows (Rep., Mich.,) asked a question concerning the canteen as a temptation to young men in the army who had never partaken of liquor before entering the ranks.

"That sort of man in the army is rather a rare article," the Archbishop replied, "but if the rare article does turn up, as it may, and if a man is found in the army who has been able to resist the temptations of the saloons in ordinary life, I think he will be able to resist the evils of the canteen."

Major Romeyn, a retired army officer, also spoke for the retention of the canteen. The officers who are now in the service who were heard were Gen. Ludington, Quartermaster General, who advocated provisions for an increase in rank in his corps; Gen. Lieber, Judge Advocate General, who asked for an increase of the number of officers; Gen. Greely, Chief of the Signal Service, who asked for a company organization in the Signal Service, and Col. Guenther, senior Artillery Colonel, who advocated a regimental organization for the artillery arm. Col. Guenther also took a positive stand in support of the canteen.

Senator Chandler (Rep., N. H.,) gave notice of an amendment he will propose to the Army bill, providing that all original vacancies in the army which shall exist immediately after the passage of the act shall be filled by the selection of at least one-half of the persons to fill them from among the officers of volunteers, and the remainder from regular army officers.

FRENCH FARMERS BUNKOED.

Desmartin, Who Enticed Them to America, Sentenced to the Penitentiary.

Poorer in purse but richer in experience ten credulous French farmers, hailing from a suburb of Paris, returned to their native land on La Bretagne at the expense of the Government yesterday, leaving behind the cause of their misfortunes, tight in the clutches of American officials.

Celestin Desmartin, the aforesaid cause, a graduate of a Parisian agricultural college, came to America five years ago. Last Summer he returned to France, and wrote to one of his former instructors that the States were a farmers' El Dorado. He wished ten able-bodied young French candidates for agricultural honors to accompany him to this land of promise. Only those, however, with sufficient funds to pay passage, railroad fare, and purchase necessary tools need apply, he added.

Ten venturesome youths volunteered and placed in Desmartin's hands $55 each to pay their passage. This would have secured each second-cabin accommodations. The ten came over in the steerage. Desmartin had a cabin. Arrived in New York they put up at the Hotel Gudle. Before the ten had time to get on their land legs, Desmartin had obtained a number of highly colored seed catalogues which he disposed of to his protégés for $10 each. They were, he explained, highly instructive treatises on horticulture. The next day Desmartin told his followers that not even disturbances could be raised in New York, but that in Philadelphia, where grass grew in the streets, there were many openings. To Philadelphia the company started, first paying to Desmartin $25 with which to buy railroad tickets. At Paterson, N. J., Desmartin led his farmers from the train, and said that it would be well to rest there until the next day. When the trusting ten awoke next day they found a brief note from Desmartin saying that he was called away to consult the Weather Observer. A friendly French barber of Patterson, after shaving each at a cost of 4o cents per man and buying drinks at their expense, sent them to the French Consul in this city who caused Desmartin's arrest.

The latter was convicted of larceny in Special Sessions yesterday and sentenced to the penitentiary for one year.

BROOKLYN WOMAN A SUICIDE.

Miss Fields Brooded Over the Death of a Former Suitor.

Miss Anna A. Fields, fifty years old, daughter of John J. Fields of Brooklyn, committed suicide at her home, 116 Lefferts Place, some time between 11 o'clock Wednesday night and 7 o'clock yesterday morning, by inhaling illuminating gas. Her family is a prominent one in Brooklyn. Besides Miss Fields's father, mother, and brother, two married daughters of Mr. Fields, Mrs. H. H. Butts of 150 Lefferts Place, and Mrs. C. T. Cox of 41 Brevoort Place, were in the house at the time of the suicide.

The family declined to give any cause for the suicide, but the police say that Miss Fields has been afflicted with some slight mental disorder for the last two years. The police also intimate that moodiness over the death of an old friend, who was once looked upon as a suitor for Miss Fields's hand, had something to do with the suicide.

According to information given to the police, Miss Fields developed melancholia two years ago. It was not thought to be serious, but upon finding that she did not improve, the family decided to send her to New York to the Hotel Majestic, where she could be under the care of Dr. William S. Pritchard. Having shown some signs of improvement, she was taken home to Brooklyn of Thursday of last week. Mrs. Helen Hermas, a trained nurse, accompanied her. It was soon seen that Miss Fields had not entirely recovered; she was frequently morose, and the nurse watched her almost constantly.

Miss Fields on Wednesday night retired about 11 o'clock. Early yesterday morning the nurse went to Miss Fields's room. Upon opening the door she was almost overcome by gas. Miss Fields was found with a rubber tube attached to the gas jet in her mouth. A doctor who was called said that she had been dead some time.

Mr. Fields is a wealthy rubber manufacturer, whose factory is situated in Jersey City. The family home is one of the landmarks of the Seventh Ward, a picturesque colonial house.

KWANG-SU A CHRISTIAN?

Word to that Effect Received by German ex-Court Chaplain.

The News Supposed to Have Come in Letters to Dr. Stoecker from Count von Waldersee.

BERLIN, Dec. 13.—In to-day's session of the Reichstag, the last before the Christmas holidays, Dr. Stoecker, former Court Chaplain, declared, with reference to the situation in China, that he had received private letters asserting that the reason the Empress Dowager hates Emperor Kwang-Su is that the latter has actually become a Christian, having been converted by British and American missionary books that came under his eye.

At the close of the session Dr. Stoecker was interviewed, and gave a number of corroborative details. His informant is supposed to have been Count von Waldersee, with whom Dr. Stoecker is on terms of intimate friendship.

EMPRESS DOWAGER'S OFFER.

Said to be Willing to Pay Indemnity of £40,000,000 and to Make Other Concessions.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—"Information has reached the Wu-Chang Viceroy," says the Shanghai correspondent of The Standard, "that the Empress Dowager has agreed to accept the following peace conditions:

"The early return of Emperor Kwang-Su to Peking; indemnity to the amount of £40,000,000; the right of each legation to maintain a guard of 2,000 troops; and the appointment of a foreign adviser to each province of the Empire.

"Director Gen. Sheng has received a telegram from Sian-Foo asserting that the Empress Dowager is about to start for Cheng-ti-Foo, in the Province of Szé-Chuen.

"Li Hung Chang and Prince Ching have received the Empress Dowager's permission to take the imperial seal from the Forbidden Palace and to use it in the negotiations."

Dr. Morrison, wiring to The Times from Peking on Tuesday, says:

"The general opinion is that China will willingly accede to the terms of the collective note, and, trusting to dissensions among the powers, will hope that time will give her an opportunity to evade its conditions.

"The question regarding the credentials of Li-Hung-Chang and Prince Ching is being adjusted.

"For the second time Russia has officially notified Count von Waldersee of her intention to withdraw all her troops from the Province of Pe-chi-Li and to restore the railway to the allied forces before the Russian New Year's. North of the Great Wall the Russians will retain the Niu-Chwang Railway, pending a settlement of their claims to compensation for expenses alleged to have been incurred while holding the railway south of the wall."

The Times, commenting upon a dispatch from its New York correspondent, who alleges that the American public is not able to form a clear idea of the actual state of affairs in Peking and who gives a report that there are still some differences between Washington and Berlin, says:

"New York is not in a worse case than the public everywhere else. Whether the consciousness that this perplexity is in a great measure due to the character of the telegraphic information continually emanating from Washington is a cause of pride or of dissatisfaction to the Americans we are not at present in a position to surmise."

The Morning Post publishes a dispatch from Peking, dated Dec. 12, which seems to show that there is still a considerable divergence of views among the representatives of the powers. The correspondent says:

"M. Pichon (French Minister) is most strenuous in demanding the punishment of the guilty officials. The policies of France and Russia are by no means identical. France and Germany seem to be acting more nearly on the same lines, although entirely independent. The United States is also acting alone. Russia, France, and the United States, while united generally, will in fact act separately on certain points.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The latest news from Peking, from official sources, is that Great Britain has signified a willingness to sign the agreement reached by the foreign Ministers, with a slight amendment, which is said to be rather in the nature of a mere change in form rather than an amendment of the scope of the agreement in any material point. It was the understanding that Great Britain was the only power that was holding back, and as, according to the advices received here, the slight changes made, or proposed to be made, do not conflict with any of the principles held out for by the United States Government, from the point of view of the State Department, there seems to be no substantial obstacle to an almost immediate termination of the negotiations concerning the preliminary agreement.

Mr. Conger's last advices to the State Department indicated very clearly that the German Minister at Peking was living up to the spirit of the promise of the German Government in regard to its demands for the imposition of the death penalty upon Princes Tuan and Chuang, Duke San, and other Boxer ringleaders. It was upon this very point that the United States made the issue with Germany and Great Britain, and was said to have prevailed, so that if any demand is still made by Germany in the line indicated it is contrary to Mr. Conger's reports and would be distinctly a surprise to the State Department. Therefore the officials are fully prepared to hear at almost any moment that the plenipotentiaries at Peking have signed the agreement and that the latter has been laid before Prince Ching and Li-Hung-Chang.

AGREEMENT NOW TRIPARTITE.

Japan Subscribes Unconditionally to Anglo-German Convention.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The correspondence relating to the Anglo-German agreement has been laid before Parliament.

Japan alone of the powers invited to join made special inquiries of Germany and Great Britain concerning the agreement. Japan then replied that the "imperial Government, having received assurances from the contracting parties to the effect that, in adhering to the agreement in question, Japan will be placed, in relation to such agreement, in the same position it would have occupied if it had been a signatory instead of an adhering State, does not hesitate to formally declare that Japan will adhere to such agreement, and will accept the principles embodied therein."

The assurances of Germany and Great Britain alluded to are not given. The replies of the other powers do not differ from the previous announcements.

Wants Information About Looting.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Representative De Armond (Dem., Mo.,) to-day introduced a resolution asking the Secretary of War for information as to "what, if any, protest, objection, criticism, or suggestion Gen. Chaffee or any other American officer in China made or offered concerning looting or other action or conduct deemed inhuman, dishonest, dishonorable, or improper; to whom directed or addressed, and on account of what facts or information and how received or replied to, and with what result; and what, if anything, the War Department did or suggested to Gen. Chaffee or other officers, or directed to be said or done in reference thereto." The resolution refers to the reported friction between Gen. Chaffee and Count von Waldersee.

Tung-Fu-Siang, under whose protection he is alleged to have traveled.

Tullock and a hundred men left here to-day to investigate the truth of the report. Col. Tullock requested, however, that fifty extra men be detailed. The information regarding the treasure was received from a former Court official.

THE BRITISH WAR LOAN.

Mr. Healy Objects to Wall Street "Unscrupulosity" Having Anything to Do with It.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—In the debate in the House of Commons yesterday on the second reading of the War Loan bill, the Right Hon. Sir William Vernon Harcourt lengthily criticised the Government's financial makeshifts. He said the Ministers would have strenuous support in making the Transvaal share the cost of the war. But, he pointed out, the gold mines were the only source of revenue, and the attitude of the mine-owning capitalists was well known. They would not pay for the war except on compulsion, and the capitalists were masters of South Africa, controlled its politics, and would be supreme in the new colonies. If the Government wished to obtain anything from the Transvaal toward the cost of the war it would have to face the "Kaffir circus" in South Africa and London, and it would require all the courage of the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Colonial Secretary and all the integrity of Parliament to cope with the matter.

Sir William contended that, judging from the present prospects, the cost of British rule in the Transvaal and the Orange River Colony would be far greater than Boer rule had been. He estimated that Gen. Baden-Powell's police would cost £4,000,000 a year, a sum equal to the last Transvaal Budget.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach said that possibly the new colonies could not bear any part of the cost of the war for a year or two after the war ended, but he had in mind the future development of the Transvaal's vast wealth, and had made the failing in of the various loans at such periods as would enable the Government to see what burden might be imposed on the Transvaal. In any event, no unreasonable demand would be made. Without expressing a final opinion, he thought that direct taxation of the profits of the mines was a question deserving the most careful consideration.

Timothy M. Healy, (Irish Nationalist,) Member for North Louth, asked how much of the new loan was to be floated in Wall Street. He added:

"I strongly object to the association of Wall Street in British national interests. When we have the unscrupulosity of Wall Street on top of us we shal pay dearly for the small sum saved the country in discount. The whole cost of the war should be placed on the Transvaal."

The supplementary War Loan and Appropriation bills were then passed to a second reading.

A wide field was covered in the House during question time, but the matters touched upon were largely uninteresting. The Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain said Great Britain had proposed to establish cheaper postage with the United States, but Washington was not prepared to entertain the matter.

Joseph Cranborne, Under-Secretary for the Foreign Office, said he regretted Canada was excluded from the most favored treatment by Germany. But, he explained, in the absence of a commercial treaty between Great Britain and Germany, there was no remedy at present.

Joseph Powell Williams, the former Financial Secretary to the War Office, answering a question, said 182,460 horses and mules had been landed in South Africa since the war began.

Mr. Healy's interpellation as to the number of usses sent to South Africa was not answered.

Lord Cranborne, reverting to the subject of the contracts for the Uganda Railroad bridges going to America, said the American company would build thirty bridges, using 7,000 tons of steel. The contracts totaled up 135,000 tons.

W. R. Cremer (Liberal), representing the Haggerston Division of Shoreditch, wanted to know if, after the American bids had been found to be the lowest, the British firms had received an opportunity to revise their tenders.

Lord Cranborne, replying, said it was not fair to the lowest bidder to invite other bidders to revise their prices.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—The statement that the Right Hon. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach has been elevated to the Peerage is erroneous. The Right Hon. George J. Goschen and the Right Hon. Sir Matthew White Ridley are the two members of the late Cabinet upon whom Peerages have been bestowed.

LIMA, Peru, Dec. 13.—A strike of dock laborers at Callao, the port of Lima, began yesterday. There is a complete suspension of work, involving large loss and delay. FOUGHT IN YANKEE TROOP

Two of Brabant's Cavalrymen Here from South Africa.

Only Flag that Waved Over Wepener During Siege an American One with Seventy Stars.

Among the arrivals on the White Star liner Majestic last night were two troopers of the famous British fighting organization in South Africa known as Brabant's Horse. They were J. Stonewall Jackson of Centre, Texas, a relative of the Confederate General, and Horace J. Robinson of Brockville, Ontario. Both saw the hardest kind of service in the Boer war, having taken part in no fewer than forty-nine engagements. Robinson was recommended for the Victoria Cross. An act of great personal bravery at the siege of Wepener won for him the coveted recommendation. A comrade named Roberts had been wounded, and in order to procure a stretcher for him it was necessary to cross an open veldt a quarter of a mile wide to a hospital, where the medical supplies were kept. Robinson volunteered to get the stretcher and succeeded after running the gantlet of the Boer fire. Both of the men enlisted at Cape Town, going across at their own expense.

"I enlisted as a trooper in Fourth Troop, Squadron M, of Brabant's Horse," said Robinson. "This troop was known as the 'Yankee Troop' owing to the fact that all of the men, with two or three exceptions, were Americans. It was commanded by Capt. Jesser-Koop, a Crimean veteran, who for forty-one years has been in the active service of the Crown. We were in forty-nine engagements, taking part in many of the most prominent and hard-fought battles of the war. Our first fighting was at the siege of Wepener, where we saw seventeen days of the severest kind of fighting. There were 1,500 men on our side engaged, while 15,000 Boers were reported to be in the surrounding country. Every once in a while emissaries from them would come into our lines and demand our surrender. Well, the world knows by now what our answer to that demand was. During the siege a place called Jammersburgh Drift was so exposed that nobody hankered after getting the job of protecting it. As luck would have it, however, it fell to our lot to fill the breach, and there we staid for seventeen days.

"In Aliwal North, near Wepener, there lives an American named Onderdonk. Mrs. Onderdonk, in order to show her patriotism, made an American flag, which was the only flag that flew during the seige. It waved from a staff on the roof of their home. A peculiarity of the banner was that it had seventy stars on it. I didn't find out the reason for the insertion of the extra ones. But be this as it may, when the British troops finally relieved the place she presented the flag to the 'Yankee Troop.' Of course, they couldn't refuse it, but it went through the war nevertheless. Trooper Ben Johnson of Austin, Texas, has the banner, and is on his way to this country with it.

"At Komatipoort we got mixed up with the Boer Irish Brigade, and drove them into Portuguese territory. They were good fighters, and it was lucky for the Boers that they had such people to teach them how to fight."

Jackson's story was similar to his comrade's. He said De Wet was the Boers' best commander, and when informed of his escape from the column of Gen. Knox, indicated that he was not much surprised. He did not consider Botha a man of very unusual strength, and declared that the stories of Lord Kitchener's cruelty and coldheartedness were not true.

MILNER NOW ADMINISTRATOR.

His Appointment as Chief Official of the Two Boer Colonies Gazetted.

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 14.—Sir Alfred Milner has been gazetted Administrator of the Orange River and Transvaal Colonies.

No man connected with South African affairs has been more harshly criticised recently than has Sir Alfred Milner, but the British Government has all along declared that it puts absolute faith in his ability and judgment, and his appointment as Administrator of the two Boer states—the announcement of which came the day after a bitter attack on him in the House of Commons—is evidence that no amount of criticism has resulted in destroying this opinion.

Sir Alfred Milner is the son of a physician who married the daughter of a Governor of Malta. He was first educated in a German school, and then at King's College and at Oxford. At Oxford he took almost every prize attainable, and gained the reputation of being the ablest scholar the university turned out in his time. On leaving Oxford he entered the ranks of London journalists as assistant editor of The Pall Mall Gazette. He contested Harrow in the Liberal interest in 1885, and afterward became private secretary to the Right Hon. George J. Goschen, the Chancellor of the Exchequer. In 1889 he was appointed Under Secretary of Finance for Egypt.

Since then Milner's reputation has steadily grown, and he has held more and more important offices. In Egypt he was in the position of a pupil of the famous Lord Cromer, and the most important book, "England and Egypt," was the result of his work in that country.

It was in 1897, on the breakdown of Lord Rosemead, that Milner was appointed Governor of Cape Colony and High Commissioner of South Africa. His new appointment will give him supreme power over the part of the British Empire now the centre of interest for the whole world.

The story is not confirmed in any quarter and is not generally believed.

FRENCH AMNESTY BILL

Dreyfus Case Charges Repeated in Debate in Chamber.

FIRST PARAGRAPH ADOPTED

It Deals with Persons Condemned Owing to the Famous "Affaire"—Amendment Excludes Treason Cases.

PARIS, Dec. 13.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day the first paragraph of the Amnesty bill, which deals with cases arising out of the Dreyfus affair, was adopted by a vote of 329 against 244. An amendment excluding cases of espionage and treason from the amnesty was adopted by a vote of 296 against 248.

The voting was preceded by a lively debate, growing out of a species of indictment pronounced by Ernest Joseph Bréton, (Socialist,) Deputy for Dieppe, against Esterhazy, Henry, and du Paty de Clam, who, he said, were the real traitors.

Despite the disapproval of Paul Deschanel, President of the Chamber, who objected to the introduction of personalities into the debate, M. Bréton proceeded to denounce the various Ministers of War who had refused revision in the Dreyfus case—Gens. Gonse, de Boisdeffre, Mercier, and Billot—and to accuse Gen. Billot and M. Méline, former Premier, of having been cognizant of Lieut. Col. Henry's forgery, notwithstanding their denials.

M. Méline, replying, protested against the charge, and said that under his Ministry no new facts came to light to justify revision. He asserted that Gen. Billot had done right in enforcing respect for law.

Ex-Premier Brisson said that when he was apprised of the facts of the Henry forgery he decided that revision was necessary, and he honored himself for this decision. [Cheers.]

M. Méline, who spoke again, denied that Gen. Billot had protected Esterhazy or was aware of Henry's forgery.

M. Brisson retorted:

"M. Méline is right in saying that the forgery was deposited in the Foreign Office, but he and M. Hanotaux (ex-Minister of Foreign Affairs) should have called the attention of their successors to the existence of such an important document. They neglected this duty."

M. Méline rejoined:

"Attention was not called to it because no importance was attached to it. I understand the granting of revision when once the forgery became known. The Dreyfus affair has now been judged, and must not be reopened. The country will not tolerate it."

Lucien Millevoye, (Republican Nationalist,) one of the Deputies for the Department of the Seine, opposed any amnesty which excluded those persons who were defendants in the proceedings before the Senate sitting as a High Court.

M. Waldeck-Rousseau, the Premier, retorted:

"The Chamber has already refused amnesty to those persons. As to the Dreyfus affair, the Chamber has manifested a desire that it should be forever buried. The Government now looks to the future, and presents this measure in order to prevent a renewal of discord. I ask the Chamber to put an end to fatal divisions in the country by voting the amnesty."

The votes were then taken.

The Amnesty bill was passed in the French Senate last June 1. The measure prevents further criminal proceedings arising out of recriminations in the Dreyfus case, with the exception of Capt. Dreyfus himself. An amendment to include him in the amnesty was voted down in the Senate by 238 votes to 34.

The inclusion of Dreyfus would, on the one hand, have involved his restitution to all his rights as an officer, and, on the other hand, would have deprived him of the right to seek a revision of his case.

PARIS CRIME-RIDDEN.

Close of Exposition Throws Thousands Out of Work, and They Join Ranks of Thieves and Murderers.

PARIS, Dec. 13.—The close of the exposition, throwing thousands who were dependent upon it for a living into the streets, has created abnormal criminal conditions in Paris. The sensation caused by the murder of the man whose body was found in two parcels in the streets here, as cabled Dec. 4, which affair is still wrapped in mystery, has directed attention to the dangerous state of things in the outlying quarters of Paris, which are infested by bands of footpads and hoodlums who terrorize the residents. The papers are filled with accounts of their nightly exploits.

Two respectable workmen were attacked a few nights ago by four prowlers, who, after picking a quarrel, almost decapitated one of the workmen and stabbed the other in the abdomen. None of the murderers has yet been traced.

A feature of these nocturnal attacks is that they are very often not accompanied by robbery, but are perpetrated, apparently, by bloodthirsty criminals, frequently by boys in their teens, the oldest of whom is seventeen years of age, gagged and assaulted a girl recently and then dragged her to the canal side with the intention of drowning her, when passers-by rescued the girl.

The bands frequenting Belleville style themselves "Apaches." They have committed a number of atrocious and cowardly attacks. Another and similar band is called the "Amandiers."

A gang of thieves recently attacked a street car in a populous southern district and robbed the passengers. An important electric car line serving the suburbs of St. Denis and St. Ouen has refused to run its cars later than 8:30 in the evening on account of the danger, and it was announced to-day that the Prefect of Police had decided to place a couple of policemen on each street car running in the suburbs after 8:30 P. M., and that he had also decided to create a special corps of picked men to be stationed in the dangerous wards, such as the ward where the severed body was discovered. Moreover, in order to secure murder clues, the police for several nights have raided the disorderly districts and have made large hauls of criminals wanted on other charges. A raid yesterday evening led to no fewer than 347 arrests.

In fairness it must be said that the present condition of crime is largely due to the numbers of workmen, street hawkers, and others who came to Paris, attracted by the exposition, and who are now walking the streets out of work. It is estimated by the statistician of the Central Labor Bureau that in twenty-five trades 212,000 men out of 510,000 are out of work.

The officials of the Prefecture of Police calculate that 2,000 sufferers from the closing of the exposition have joined the criminal army.

CONDITION OF GERMAN BANKS.

Berlin Financier Says No Serious Trouble is Imminent.

BERLIN, Dec. 13.—Reports published in the United States asserting that there is a financial panic, or something approaching it, in Germany greatly exaggerate the facts of the case. This evening a leading financier, intimately acquainted with the situation in all its aspects, made the following statement:

"Last October two mortgage banks in Berlin, namely, the Prussian Hypotheken Aktien Bank and the Deutsche Grundschuld Bank, institutions having the same Directors, got into financial difficulties through illegal loans to their own subcompanies for real estate speculations. Since that time the obligations of all mortgage banks have been offered heavily on the Berlin Boerse. In accordance with an unwritten law prevailing here, each bank has purchased its own obligations as these have been offered, but the two institutions named became unable to do so, as the offerings have caused a heavy drain upon the funds of the banks affected.

"A Government investigation showed that the condition of the Deutsche Grundschuld Bank was absolutely rotten. The investigation with reference to the other institution is still progressing. The bank's affairs are very complicated, but its real estate assets are sufficient to save it and to secure the creditors. Hence the syndicate, formed by most of the Berlin banks for the protection of creditors, will be able to reinstate the Prussian Hypotheken Aktien Bank. The organization of the syndicate has already affected the Boerse reassuringly, for the shares of the Prussian Hypotheken Aktien Bank gained 7 points to-day.

"The obligations of the other mortgage banks, however, continued to be heavily sold, quotations breaking moderately. I do not believe any serious trouble will result from the affair, for the other mortgage banks are in excellent condition, their business methods being strictly legal with respect to real estate loans. Hence, whatever the fate of the two banks named, the trouble cannot spread very greatly."

Further developments are expected Dec. 31, when the meetings of creditors occur and the reports of the investigations are submitted.

Banking houses with Berlin connections refused yesterday to take a serious view of the panicky condition of German mortgage loan banks, which correspond, in point of safety, to the savings banks of this country. The fact that there was no disquieting cable news was taken to indicate that the Deutsche Bank and its associates have been able fully to meet the situation.

A member of one of the prominent firms said yesterday that the system of German mortgage bond issues was far more perfect than that in vogue here, and that, if one bank had gotten into difficulties, there was no more reason to believe that the whole system would crumble than there was to believe that the savings bank system was bad here when there was a run on one bank. The German Government, he said, exercised the most rigid control over the bond issues of the mortgage companies, which extend throughout the empire.

PETER AUSTIN FOUND GUILTY.

Jury Returns Verdict of Manslaughter in Second Degree—He Tells How He Killed Brower.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Dec. 13.—Peter Austin was convicted to-night of manslaughter in the second degree for killing a man named Brower fourteen years ago. The jury went out at 5 o'clock and returned the verdict at 9 o'clock this evening. He was not surprised at the verdict, as he expected to be convicted, and he received the announcement calmly. Austin was remanded for sentence to-morrow.

An appeal probably will be taken to the Court of Appeals, which will be asked for the first time to decide a novel point of criminal law. Charles A. Hopkins, counsel for the prisoner, said this evening: "The verdict is illegal. The jury was bound either to find the man guilty of murder in the second degree, as indicted, or to acquit him for this reason. The statutes stipulate that no indictment can be found for a felony of any nature except murder five years or more after it has been committed. In this case fourteen years had elapsed. The Grand Jury wanted to indict Austin for manslaughter, but the District Attorney advised them of the law, and they thereupon returned a presentment for murder in the second degree.

During the trial to-day Peter Austin, the accused man, gave a graphic version of his killing of Brower. They were riding in the defendant's wagon on the night of July 2, 1886, when Brower attacked him with a knife. He knocked him out of the wagon, and he lay there. "I drove home and told my wife that I had probably killed Brower," said Austin. "I was afraid to tell the authorities, because I was afraid I would be hanged. I have never attended school and cannot read nor write. So that night I went back to the field, found Brower's body, and threw it in the well."

Mrs. Austin testified in corroboration of her husband's testimony. She said that Brower once declared that he would marry Effie if he had to put the whole family out of the way.

INTERNATIONAL PATENTS.

Recommendations of Conference Recently Sitting in Brussels.

BRUSSELS, Dec. 13.—The International Conference for the Protection of Industrial Property, at which United States Assistant Patent Commissioner Walter H. Chamberlin and Lawrence Townsend, United States Minister to Belgium, were the American representatives, adopted the following resolutions:

First—The period of exclusive rights, previously fixed at six months for [applications for] patents and three months for industrial designs, models, and trade marks, is extended to a year for the first named and four months for the second named.

Second—Countries signing the convention enjoy reciprocally the protection accorded by each country to its own citizens against unfair competition.

Third—Patents cannot lapse because they are not put in circulation, except after a minimum delay of three years, dating from the first application in countries where the patent is allowed and in cases in which the conditions of the patent do not justify causes of inaction.

Heavy Fire Loss in Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 13.—The building, foundry, and machinery of the Lane & Bodley Works, at John and Water Streets, were burned to-night, the total loss being from $200,000 to $250,000. They were large manufacturers of sawmill machinery, traction engines, and many other articles, and about 200 men will be thrown out of work. Capt. Packer of the Fire Department was seriously injured while working at the fire. The building and machinery were partially insured.

MICHAEL J. MULHALL DEAD.

Was One of the Best-Known Statisticians of the Century.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—Michael G. Mulhall, the statistician, is dead.

Michael G. Mulhall was one of the best known of British statisticians of this century. He was born in 1836, being the third son of the late Thomas Mulhall, a lawyer of St. Stephen's Green, Dublin. He was educated at the Irish College, Rome, and afterward went to South America. In 1861 he founded the Buenos Ayres Standard, the first paper printed in English in South America. Returning to Europe he settled in Dublin, and became a contributor to the reviews and scientific magazines, his more important work of this kind being for The Contemporary Review and for Section F of the British Association.

In 1884 Mr. Mulhall was elected a member of the Committee of the British Association, and attended the Anglo-American Scientific Congress, held that year in Philadelphia. Mr. Mulhall's principal works are "The Progress of the World," issued in 1880; "The Dictionary of Statistics," (1886,) of which the fourth edition appeared last year, and "The Industries and Wealth of Nations," (1896.)

Mr. Mulhall's wife, Marion Mulhall, is well known as a writer of books of travel and historical essays.

NO BAR TO LAWSON BOAT

New York Yacht Club Will Allow Boston Yacht to Compete.

TRIAL RACES MAY BE OPEN

Trusteeship of the America's Cup Will Not Be Affected Unless Foreign Yacht Is Victor.

The New York Yacht Club will not refuse to admit Thomas W. Lawson's yacht to the trial races for the defense of the America's Cup against Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger. This may now be safely assumed. Although there exists undeniably a hostility to Mr. Lawson among a few individual members of the club, sentiment in favor of the admission of the Boston boat to competition with the New York syndicate's yacht and the old defender Columbia has grown daily since Mr. Lawson's announcement of his intentions. The personnel of Mr. Lawson's advisers has furthermore done much to gain favor for him among New York Yacht Club members.

But, aside from this general drift of feeling to the side of the Boston boat, the special Cup Committee of the New York Yacht Club, which has in charge all arrangements for the trial races, desires, both in the interest of sport and from motives of prudence, to select as a defender against Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock II. the best American yacht afloat. To bar from competition any legitimate aspirant for the honor of defending the cup would therefore be inconsistent with their own wishes as good sportsmen and responsible trustees of the "blue ribbon of the sea."

The syndicate of New York Yacht Club members that have subscribed for the trial defender now building by the Herreshoffs, at Bristol, will also accept cheerfully the competition of the Boston boat. President James Stillman of the National City Bank, one of the most prominent members of the syndicate, when asked yesterday if the Lawson boat and the New York boat would meet in the trial races, replied:

"Why not? I hope they will."

"But will not the fact that Mr. Lawson is not a member of the New York Yacht Club interpose some difficulties to the entry of his boat?" he was asked.

"On that point," continued Mr. Stillman, "you must ask some member of the Regatta Committee who is more familiar with the intricacies of the rules than I am. But as for the trial races," he concluded, with a smile, "the more the merrier."

ENTRIES TO BE INVITED.

W. Butler Duncan, Jr., the prospective manager of the New York yacht, expressed in almost identical terms this welcome to the Boston aspirant when it first became definitely known that Mr. Lawson intended to build a trial defender. It is generally believed among yachtsmen that Mr. Duncan and Mr. Stillman represent the sentiment of the New York syndicate.

It is more than unlikely that the Cup Committee of the New York Yacht Club will be called upon to take special action in regard to the admission of the Boston boat to the trial races. It is thought by yachtsmen here that the more probable course of the committee will be to invite entries from all Class G yachts, that is, sloops or yawls of defender dimensions, in the announcement of the trial races which they may arrange. The only entries with reasonable chance of success would, of course, be the two new trial defenders and the old Columbia.

Some discussion was caused yesterday among yachtsmen by a suggestion that if the Lawson boat should win in the trial races the trusteeship of the America's Cup might be transferred by him to another club—the Hull-Massachusetts, for example—of which he was a member. Such a course would be impossible under the Deed of Gift, which specifically assigns the possession of the cup to the New York Yacht Club, to be held in trust as a "perpetual challenge cup for friendly competition between foreign countries." The trophy can depart from the New York Yacht Club only in the event of its being won by a yacht representing some foreign yacht club. Furthermore, the individual yachtsman has no status with regard to possession of the cup. Another provision of the Deed of Gift says: "It is distinctly understood that the cup is to be the property of the club, subject to the provisions of this deed, and not the property of the owner or owners of any vessel winning a match."

The New York Yacht Club syndicate's yacht which Hereshoff is now building may not be nameless much longer. A close friend of W. Butler Duncan, Jr., the yacht's manager, said yesterday that the name "Eagle" had been all but definitely selected for the boat, although the announcement of the choice would probably be withheld until the absent members of the syndicate can be heard from. The choice of names, so it was said, lay between America and Eagle, and the latter was finally given the preference only because it was desired to have the original winner of the cup stand in isolation so far as names are concerned.

DOUGLAS MADE LOW SCORE.

Travis One Stroke Behind Leader in Preliminary Round for Atlantic City Golf Cup.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Dec. 13.—The third semi-annual golf tournament of the Atlantic City Country Club began on the links at Northfield this morning with a high-class list of entries. The morning was an ideal one, and the links could not have been in better condition.

Walter J. Travis, the amateur champion, headed the entry list, and was paired with Joseph G. Thorpe of the Oakley Country Club, Boston, runner-up for the amateur championship of 1896. Findlay Douglas, amateur champion of 1898, and W. H. Davis, Lakewood, the winner of this tournament last December, were another notable pair. Douglas made the thirty-six holes in 87 and 86, a total of 173, beating Travis by one stroke. Travis now holds the Atlantic City Cup, which is the chief prize offered.

Work and Brereton, two of the club's committeemen, were the first pair away, driving off at 9:30. Travis and Thorpe were fourth, and each drove nearly 200 yards, the Bostonian using his short, jerky swing, having a little the better ball. Davis drove a screamer, but it was outdistanced by the terrific tee shot of his partner Douglas. The first day's scores follow:

Golf Notes of Interest.

John Duncan Dunn has just returned from a visit to the Florida East Coast golf links. He found the work on the new courses going on satisfactorily, and early in January he will take up his Winter residence there as Superintendent of the East Coast golf system.

David Grewer, who was Willie Campbell's assistant in Boston on the Franklin Park public links, is said to be practically sure of appointment to the place rendered vacant by the recent death of Campbell. Grewer has won the popularity of all who use the course, and he is an exceptionally skillful teacher. He has been recommended by a large number of players for the office, and when the course opens next Spring Grewer will undoubtedly be in charge.

The Fox Hills Golf Club, Staten Island, will keep open links all Winter, and will add the additional feature of a smoker and concert tomorrow night. The committee intends to hold these smokers every Saturday night during the Winter. J. A. Janin, Jr., the Staten Island champion, and Louis Livingston, Jr., have agreed to play a thirty-six hole match on New Year's Day. Assistant District Attorney Forbes Hennessy has given a cup for annual competition. The first match for it will be held in May.

Harry Vardon will return to the city to-day from his trip to Colorado. It is probable that he will not sail for England until next Wednesday, instead of to-morrow, as was his intention. Owing to "Tom" Bendelow's absence in Colorado as Vardon's traveling companion the reunion of Eastern golf professionals, which was to have been held last Monday, was postponed for one week. It will be held in the Hotel Hungaria, Union Square, and Vardon has been asked to attend and bid his resident countrymen in this land farewell. Vardon promised to attend if possible, and it is probable that he will do so.

At the annual meeting of the Montclair Golf Club, held this week, the most important matter of business was a vote to increase the annual dues from $25 to $40. The main purpose is to secure a fund with which to purchase nearly sixty acres of land which the club obtained last year for its eighteen-hole course. The house and links now cover a plot of 100 acres, about 40 of which are owned by the club, and the members hope to buy the extra property in the near future. T. W. Stevens, Charles F. Droste, and J. D. Freeman were re-elected Directors, and the Directors' meeting for the election of officers will be held next Tuesday. The club has nearly 500 members, of which about 130 are women. 220 resident and 33 non-resident members. Nine holes have been closed for the Winter, and the other nine, with temporary greens, will remain open for use.

JOCKEY CLUB MEETING.

Rule Regarding Excess Weight Amended So that Jockeys Are Held Liable.

The regular monthly meeting of The Jockey Club was held at the office of the club, 173 Fifth Avenue, yesterday afternoon, at 4 o'clock

On the recommendation of F. R. Hitchcock, rule 118 of the racing rules was amended to read as follows: "If a horse carries more than two pounds over his proper or declared weight his jockey shall be fined, suspended, or ruled off, unless the Stewards are satisfied that such excess of weight has been caused by rain or mud."

Original rule 118 reads as follows: "If a horse carries more than two pounds over his proper or declared weight he is disqualified, unless the Stewards are satisfied that such excess of weight has been caused by rain or mud, provided that a horse shall not be qualified to run in a race with more than five pounds overweight.

"Note.—The last clause of rule 118 is covered by rule 92, which reads as follows: 'Rule 92. A horse shall not be qualified to run in a race with more than five pounds overweight.'"

A resolution was adopted eulogizing Col. R. W. Simmons, who has decided to retire from the turf. A silver cup accompanied the resolution. The members present were: Perry Belmont, James Galway, J. H. Bradford, F. K. Sturgis, Andrew Miller, H. K. Knapp, J. G. Follansbee, R. T. Wilson, Jr.

Jockey Rigby Home on a Visit.

B. J. Rigby, the American jockey, was among the arrivals on the White Star liner Majestic last night. He rode English, French, and Irish tracks last season and had, he says, a very successful year. Out of 447 mounts in England he was 69 times first and 52 times second or third. He won six out of nine races on the French tracks and three races in Ireland. He has ridden for all the prominent English stable owners, he says, with the exception of the Prince of Wales and Richard Croker, and he expects to return to Europe early in the Spring. In France Mme. Menier has the first call on his services. Concerning the case of Ted Sloan Rigby would not express an opinion. He only said that he was sorry for Sloan. He is en route to his home in St. Louis, accompanied by his wife.

Officers of Saratoga Association.

At a meeting of the Directors of the Saratoga Association, held at the office of The Jockey Club, 173 Fifth Avenue, yesterday afternoon, the following Directors were elected: W. C. Whitney, H. K. Knapp, Andrew Miller, F. R. Hitchcock, and R. T. Wilson, Jr.

W. C. Whitney was elected President of the association, and Andrew Miller Secretary and Treasurer.

Before the Directors' meeting an informal conference of the stockholders was held. There were present Andrew Miller, W. C. Whitney, P. J. Dwyer, H. K. Knapp, R. T. Wilson, Jr., J. H. Bradford, Brayton Ives, J. G. Follansbee, R. A. Pinkerton, Perry Belmont, Samuel T. Peters, and James S. Metcalf.

Notes for the Wheelmen.

The annual election of the Harlem Wheelmen will be held this evening at the clubhouse, 21 West One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Street.

Two tickets have been nominated, headed, respectively, by George J. Cooke and William C. Huson, and a lively contest is anticipated.

Two or more tickets will be placed in nomination for the annual election of the Associated Cycling Clubs of the City of New York, which will be held early next month, and an exciting election is expected. The annual dinner of the associated clubs is scheduled for March 9, probably at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club.

The Madison Wheelmen are making elaborate preparations for their annual reception, to be held at the clubhouse, 1,566 Madison Avenue, on New Year's eve. An orchestra, selected from the juvenile musicians of the Hebrew Orphan Society Band, will furnish the music and an interesting programme of other entertainment is being arranged.

Bridge Department's Auction Sale.

An auction sale of old horses, harness, brushes, brooms, old iron, seven pairs of old rubber boots, twenty-two old lanterns, and one carriage lamp will be held in the stable of the Department of Bridges on Dec. 22 at 11 A. M. An official of the Department of Bridges announced yesterday that if the stuff was not sold at auction, some one would surely claim that the property had been stolen.

ECONOMY IN BASEBALL

Club Managers in League Meeting Agree on Retrenchment.

IGNORE PLAYERS' ASSOCIATION

Plans for Reduction of Club Lists and the Abolishment of Spring Practice Trips.

The decline in the public support of professional baseball and the consequent decrease in the receipts of the various National League clubs had the first place in the deliberations of the National League yesterday. Other matters clamored for attion, but the managers calmly put them aside and gave their concentrated consideration to questions relating closely to the "National game's" loss of popularity, all of which pertained to retrenchment in the conduct of the clubs and reductions of outside expenses. The decrease in the gate receipts of the National League clubs last season was touched on so frequently in the day's business that the matter, which was of chief public importance, received but a few moments' attention, and then was dismissed bodily. This was the claim of the Protective Association of Professional Baseball Players, for which the players expected fair treatment. These claims of the players were set forth fully yesterday. The club managers, however, found a difference between the demands made by the players in the public hearing Wednesday morning and the claims made in the abstract presented by the lawyer for the players, Harry Taylor, and on the ground that the players asked concessions which the League could not grant, the entire matter was dismissed. No formal announcement of this decision was made to the committee representing the players, but the fact that the contract suggested by them was rejeced was made known indirectly early in the day.

PLAYERS WANT ANOTHER HEARING.

The players' committee promptly made application for a rehearing, and this matter was presented early in the day to the league meeting. No action was taken on it, however, the league meeting declining to delay other business on hand; and the members of the players' committee waited around all day without hearing any official decision from the governing body. Late in the evening, however, the announcement was made that the league would give attention to the players' application early this morning. The players allege that all the concessions they want were stipulated in the public meeting Wednesday. These are that the term of contracts shall be limited to a certain number of years, that the reserve rule shall be modified, and that the "farming" of players shall be abolished by a rule forbidding the selling, transfer, or assignment of a player without his written consent. Other matters in addition were mentioned in the abstract of the players' demands, but the one which met with the unanimous disapproval of the league meeting was the provision which gives players equal representation with the club owners in arbitration on disputed points. The players, who are willing to drop the matter of having their members represented in disputes, are still hopeful of gaining their ends; but, from the announcement of views by the league managers, an agreement on the question is very improbable. An answer to the players is promised at 11 o'clock this morning.

The League held the annual election of Directors in the morning, after having decided to reduce the number from six to four. These were chosen by ballot, and the following were elected: Andrew Freedman, for the New York Club; Arthur F. Soden, for the Boston Club; Barney Dreyfuss, for the Pittsburg Club, and John T. Brush, for the Cincinnati Club. Mr. Freedman somewhat surprised his associates by consenting to serve. Last year he was chosen for the same office, but then he declined to serve in any capacity. This season, however, he has entered into the work on hand with eager interest.

After the election the matter of economy in the management of baseball clubs came up. One of the first methods of retrenchment agreed upon was contained in the resolution adopted by which all the National League clubs in future shall do away with the Spring training trips and the attendant expenses. These trips commonly are taken in March, compelling the players to report for duty early in that month, but under the new arrangement the players will not be called on until April 1. Another proposition, by which the number of players each club shall maintain is to be reduced to fourteen or sixteen men, was heard and discussed. Action on this was postponed until to-morrow, but as the rule will mean a great saving to the club owners, the League members admitted later that it would be adopted to a certainty.

The question of amending the rules concerning the umpire and providing for a renewal of the double-umpire system was considered, but no agreement was reached, the meeting by common consent postponing action in the matter until the Spring meeting. The club managers later said that they wished to obtain the best umpires who could be retained, but declined to mention the names of those umpires who had been proposed.

The players and baseball enthusiasts in the lobby talked much about deals for players, consummated or pending, but each of these rumored transactions actually have taken place. Hugh Jennings of the Brooklyn team said that he had been asked to become athletic instructor at Cornell University, and would accept the place and quit baseball unless he could get employment as manager of a baseball club. A deal for Strang, third base man of the Chicago team, in exchange for Lex Smith, catcher on the Brooklyn team, is pending. An offer to trade Waddell of Cincinnati for Griffith of Chicago was rejected. A similar offer by Pittsburg of Tannehill for Hahn of Cincinnati was refused. Another deal—of Catcher Clark of Boston for Steinfeld of Cincinnati—still is pending.

SANDERS DEFEATS MORFEY.

One Bird Decided the Match at Inter-State Park Traps.

Two fifty-bird matches for $50 a side were decided at the Inter-State Park traps yesterday afternoon. In the first W. H. Sanders, shooting both barrels at thirty yards, beat T. W. Morfey, who shot one barrel at thirty-three yards, by a single bird, killing thirty-seven to Morfey's thirty-six. Sanders missed eleven birds and killed two out of bounds, while Morfey missed seven and killed seven outside the limits. In the second match Sanders was beaten by C. M. Lincoln, who killed forty-three birds to Sanders's thirty-eight, both shooting from thirty yards. Several smaller events also were decided. The scores:

Defender Sold for Scrap.

Special to The New York Times.

CITY ISLAND, N. Y., Dec. 13.—The fate of the old cup yacht Defender has been at last decided. Yesterday two men called at the Hawkins yard and looked over the old boat and, before leaving, a satisfactory price was settled on, with the understanding that the Defender should be broken up.

The Defender has lain alongside the Columbia since the last trial races, when about $50,000 was expended to test the merits of the Columbia.

The Defender being a composite boat consisting of aluminum above and Tobin bronze below the water line, the chemical action at the joints of the two metals has shown for the past few months a slight decay caused by the salt air.

THE TERMS OF THE COLLECTIVE NOTE.

The demands made upon China in the collective note drawn up by the representatives of the Powers at Peking, which it has been somewhat prematurely reported that the Powers have accepted, are deeply interesting and worthy of careful study from two points of view. It is of interest, first, to observe the nature and extent of the penalties imposed on China as the direct atonement for the violent and outrageous acts committed by her people and Government officials. We shall learn in that way what punishments the Ministers thought commensurate with the wrongs they had suffered and within the power of the nations to inflict. A graver interest attaches to the measures of security for future peaceful intercourse with China, for these, if executed, will determine the status and control the destiny of the great empire, and profoundly affect the history of the world.

The punitive clauses of the collective note require that an Imperial Prince shall conduct an extraordinary mission to Berlin to express the Emperor's regret at the murder of the German Minister, and that a monument shall be erected on the scene of the assassination bearing an inscription in Latin, German, and Chinese, a further and lasting expression of the Emperor's regret. In the place of this latter penalty and humiliation the usage between Powers upon a footing of equality would prescribe a formal salute to the flag of the offended nation. But, as we shall see, the note is very far from treating China as an equal of the Powers. In the original draft of the note it was further provided that the death penalty should be inflicted upon Princes TUAN and CHUANG, Duke LAN, YING-NIEN, KANG-YI, CHIAO SHU-CHIAO, TUNG-FUH-SIANG, YU-HSIEN, "and other ringleaders, whose names will be given by the representatives of the Powers." After this major demand the requirement that China shall pay a just indemnity to Governments, corporations, and individuals, and erect monuments in foreign cemeteries which have been desecrated may be passed over as of subordinate interest. But it is now understood that "severe punishment" has been substituted for the death penalty.

It is highly improbable that the Imperial Government would have either the disposition or the strength to cut off all the heads called for by the Ministers. All of them rest upon thick necks and powerful shoulders, and most of their wearers have troops at their backs. If the Emperor's Government cannot or will not punish these high personages the Powers will have to catch and punish them—a work of imposing difficulty. We suppose the Ministers had thought of all that. The punishments prescribed in the note are no heavier than China deserves, no more severe than justice and example demand. But are the Powers prepared, is the United States prepared, to undertake indefinite war in China?

Guarantees of future security are exacted by provisions of the note demanding that the importation of arms into China shall be prohibited until further notice; that each power may maintain a permanent legation guard in Peking and place in a state of defense the quarter where the legations are situated; that the Taku forts and all others commanding the approach to Peking from the sea shall be razed; that the Powers shall have the right to occupy points agreed upon among themselves for the purpose of keeping open communication to the capital; that in all sub-prefectures the Imperial Government shall for two years post decrees proclaiming the penalty of death against all who belong to any anti-foreign societies, recording the punishments inflicted for violations of that decree, and making Viceroys and provincial and local authorities responsible for public order under penalty of degradation for life; that the Chinese Government shall enter into negotiation for the amendment of commercial treaties, and that the Government shall be bound to reform, in a manner determined by the Powers, the Tsung-li-Yamen, or Foreign Office, and the Court ceremonial for the reception of foreign Ministers.

China ceases to be a sovereign nation the moment she assents in principle or detail to these demands. It is evident that a Power that permits other Powers to step in and prescribe her internal laws is no longer sovereign, independent, and equal with the rest. She has become subordinate, she is controlled from without. Under the present Manchu dynasty of Ta-tsing (sublime purity) the laws of the empire are contained in the Ta-tsing Huei-tien, or code of the dynasty, and the administration of public affairs is committed to the Interior Council, under whose orders the seven boards of Government act, corresponding to our departments at Washington. The laws and customs to be observed by the people are enforced by the Li-Pu board.

We may suppose that the subjects of the Emperor are reasonably contented with the liberties they enjoy under this system. It is sufficiently manifest that one of their privileges in the past has been membership in anti-foreign societies. Now come the Powers with their collective note demanding that they shall be permitted to amend the municipal law of China in such a way that the exercise of former privileges shall be made a crime punishable with death. China manifestly abrogates her sovereignty in permitting the limits of the privileges of her subjects to be traced by foreigners, and it is further evident that neither she nor all the Powers together would have the ability to enforce the decree save at absolutely prohibitory cost. In the text of the collective note as made public by Count VON BUELOW last month the demands were declared to be irrevocable. It is now reported that this word has been stricken out—that is, the terms are open to discussion between the Powers and China. In the interest of peace and the taxpayers, upon whom falls the ultimate burden of attempting to enforce the unenforcible, it is fortunate that the views of the Ministers are made subject to revision.

At the same time, it is plain that a momentous event in the historical development of the nations of the world is preparing to be accomplished. The overthrow of the Manchu dynasty and the restoration of pure Chinese Government might save the empire and make the loss of sovereignty a temporary misfortune. This is improbable. The Chinese are doubtless about to lose the right of the free hand in regulating their internal and external affairs. Subjugation will only hasten decay, and in the case of a vast and undeveloped empire in this age of active public conquest and private exploitation, when the drones and the incapables are being driven out of their fallow estates by the busy and eager workers, decay will be arrested not far in the future by dismemberment, partition, and the industrial dominance of the men of the living nations.

ENGLAND'S PRUDENT CURTIUS.

A country less phlegmatic, less prone to respect traditions than the United Kingdom, would hardly suffer the political party of opposition, distracted and disrupted though it be, to remain through a most important period in national history without any visible authoritative head. But the ancient race of the Curtii seems to have died out in the British Liberal Party, and to have yielded its place to another, the head of which would sound the depths of the abyss before jumping into it. This is strictly in accordance with the temperament of the times, and Lord ROSEBERY, by maintaining his character as a cautious Marcus Curtius, while he keeps the Government guessing as to how or when he will take the leap, will at the same time thoroughly acquaint himself with the landscape and formulate those conditions in which he will consent to make the "sacrifice."

Quite naturally, the Government would have him take the leap at once as the leader of the imperialist section of the Liberal Party, and thus perpetuate disunion among the Opposition and leave the way open to his own political extinction. Naturally, too, the latter contingency strongly appeals to that section of the Liberals who are still unreconciled to the present state of affairs in South Africa, although so far they have no rational rule of action upon which to unite. The phrase "Little Englander" covers them adequately. Sir HENRY CAMPBELL-BANNERMAN, speaking at Dundee the other day, was undoubtedly right in declaring: "Of one thing you may be quite sure, that Lord ROSEBERY will never come back to put himself at the head of a section." But the words that followed seem to require some modification in the light of the former Liberal Prime Minister's own utterances. Sir HENRY continued:

> I am certain of this—that if he enters public life again he will come back to the whole party, the whole Liberal Party with which he was associated before, to the party with all its healthful shades of opinion, which, after all, are only indications of a healthy intelligence. He will come back to that party, with its different shades of opinion, now not nearly so deep in color and so diversified as they were when Lord PALMERSTON and Lord JOHN RUSSELL and Mr. GLADSTONE himself were able to work with them.

The import of this is clear. Sir HENRY and his friends would have Lord ROSEBERY dissociate himself from imperialistic ideals and become a mere figurehead of Liberalism, a puppet incapable of individual action, pulled hither and thither by strings in the hands of the Liberal politicians. And the curious thing about Sir HENRY is that he fails to see that his own refusal and that of other Liberals to unite upon the new condition of things as produced by the Salisbury Cabinet and the army in South Africa form, for the present, between them and Lord ROSEBERY, a chasm which the latter has no intention of crossing. They must come to him. His whole career in the Liberal Party—his opposition to certain views of Mr. GLADSTONE, both in regard to the African problem and the Irish question—protests against such a retreat, even if we had no recent assurances of his revulsion toward it.

In his Rectorial address before the University of Glasgow the other day, he expounded the mission of the British Empire along broad and healthful lines. The empire, he said, "has often used the sword, it could not exist without the sword, but it does not live by the sword." It was not of course by accident that he took for the theme of his address "The British Empire," of which Englishmen are "the tenants in fee, of which we inherit the responsibility and the glory," that empire which "represents to us our history, our tradition, our race," and which "is for us a matter of influence, of peace, of commerce, of civilization, above all a question of faith."

There is nothing of the Campbell-Bannerman or Morley type of Liberal in all this. Or, take his speech in the House of Lords at the opening of Parliament; here we find him attacking the Government upon its own ground of expansion and criticising simply the methods employed. That speech, which was delivered with much eloquence directly at Lord SALISBURY, made him, for the time, the actual champion of the Opposition. There is no doubt that he is ready to assume the technical obligation. It all depends upon the ability of the irreconcilable portion of his party to look upon new imperial conditions from his point of view. Then he will take the leap with a serene mind and in the perfect confidence of a safe issue, for himself at least.

LIBELING A COMMUNITY.

The letter of the Directors of the Indianapolis Gas Company to the stockholders explaining why they are not earning dividends is seriously misleading and an insult to the citizens of Indianapolis. It will doubtless have quite the opposite effect from that intended, and instead of creating public opinion in favor of the introduction of meters, it will cause consumers to harden their hearts against the company and oppose every measure it proposes.

The facts are these: As shown in our editorial columns a few days ago, the Indiana supply of natural gas is failing. Originally delivered under a pressure of 325 pounds to the square inch, its pressure now at the wells is only about 60 pounds greater than that needed to hold back the salt water which saturates the strata contiguous to the Trenton limestone in what is geologically known as the Cincinnati Arch. The franchise under which the Indianapolis Gas Company is working permits it to distribute natural gas for fuel at contract prices, without meter measurements. When gas was plenty this arrangement was satisfactory to all in interest; as the supply failed and the pressure declined, it became extremely unsatisfactory to consumers, and the apparatus installed in public buildings, stores, and dwellings, adapted for high pressures, did not permit gas enough to pass at low pressure to meet the necessary requirements of consumption. So they did what any one would do under like circumstances—assisted the company to fulfill its contract obligations by "boring out their mixers"; which means they enlarged the openings through which the gas had access to the chamber in which it was mixed with atmospheric air before passing to the burners. To denounce this as a wholesale theft of gas by the best citizens of Indianapolis is safe enough, perhaps, when applied to a community, but in the case of an individual it would come very near to libel.

The trouble with the Indianapolis Gas Company is that which afflicts most corporations engaged in the distribution of this natural gas fuel in cities—they have not enough gas to go round, and cannot get enough at practicable cost from new wells or by new systems of mains. The shrinkage of the Indianapolis Company's earnings of $110,000 during the past year is due to the fact that a great many customers, unable to get the gas needed, and for which their contracts provided, have abandoned gas and resumed the use of coal. The "serious financial losses" with which the company is threatened, due to the exhaustion of their gas supply, are to be regretted, but the situation will not be improved by misrepresentation. Natural gas is not wasted by consumers. They neither overheat their houses nor overcook their food simply to burn gas; and they never inconvenience themselves by permitting it to leak if they can help it. To say that three-quarters, or any other proportion, of Indianapolis consumers are now "using more gas than they pay for" under unmetered service contracts, made when the supply was abundant and the pressure three times that of the present delivery, is not only nonsense, but it is an outrage on the people of that city to make such a statement. If it should result in cutting down the net earnings of the company still further by causing large numbers of consumers to give up gas and return to coal, it need not surprise the stockholders as much as it probably would the Directors.

LONDON AND NEW YORK PARALLELS.

It is interesting to know, on the authority of municipal officers in the exchange of views and experiences, that the great City of London has problems of municipal administration which are closely akin to those which have not reached a satisfactory solution in New York. At the recent conference between representatives of the London City Corporation, of vestries and of district boards with reference to the formulation of rules for the better management of streets and street traffic, many interesting facts were presented and discussed. The first resolution offered related to the aptitude of refuse and garbage collectors for scattering ashes and light refuse all over the neighborhood, and powdering pedestrians unlucky enough to pass to leeward, just as is done here. We have been told how much better these things were done in London, and how promptly and effectually the British householder would resent, and put a stop to, the practices here tolerated without protest.

A recommendation that the County Council be asked to make a by-law requiring that proper provision be made for access to the receptacles for house refuse, so that collectors would not have to scale area railings or descend by ladders to basements, was next passed. From this we learn that if the London collectors of house refuse scale railings and descend ladders to reach the receptacles they are required to empty, they are vastly more athletic and altogether more accommodating than their American congeners. We also learn that at whatever inconvenience to collectors, the London refuse bins or vessels are kept on the householder's premises, and not on the sidewalk awaiting collection. An effort was made some years ago by the New York Health Department to reform the ash barrel and swill pail nuisance, and the Sanitary Code was amended to provide that such vessels should be kept within the stoop line. We confess some surprise at finding it to be the sense of the conference "that house refuse should be removed daily, when practicable"; that "the hour for removal should be 9 o'clock, and not 10 as at present," and "that in the opinion of the conference, the sanitary authorities should be empowered to employ a sufficient number of scavengers, or contract with any scavengers, whether a company or individuals, for collecting and removing trade refuse of an offensive or noxious nature from any premises within their district, at a charge to be fixed by the local authority, or, in the event of dispute, by a Police Magistrate." We had supposed that these matters were long ago settled in London.

Snow removal is also a problem in London as well as in New York. After a long and animated discussion a motion was voted down to the effect that the act requiring local authorities to remove snow from the footpaths should be repealed, and that the pre-existing ordinance requiring the occupants of property to clean their sidewalks should be restored and enforced. The practice here is to require the occupant of premises to clear the sidewalk and gutters promptly after every snowfall; but in the case of unoccupied property no one does it. This constricting of the sidewalk to a narrow footpath at every vacant lot or unoccupied house is an evil which could be reformed here with conspicuous advantage to the public.

With regard to street nomenclature, the conference adopted, after some discussion, resolutions which may be summarized as follows: (1) That in the opinion of the conference the best method of showing the names of streets on buildings is by means of painted or enameled metal nameplates at the corners and intersections of streets; (2) that the best method of showing the names on lamp posts is by means of opal tablets in the public lamps, the letters being burnt in the glass itself; (3) that the names should be attached to the lamps or lamp posts in such a manner as to be visible both by night and by day; and (4) that the names of thoroughfares should be placed at all intersections of cross streets."

The underground-pipe problem is a live issue in London as well as in this city. Without discussion the conference gave expression to the opinion "that in all new leading thoroughfares subways should be constructed, in which the water, gas mains, and other pipes could be placed."

In all of the questions discussed by the conference the good people of New York can join "hands across seas" with the equally good people of London. If our ideal of London's immeasurable superiority to New York in dealing with the practical problems of municipal administration is shattered, it will only serve to bring us a realizing sense of the fact that a city is a city, on whichever edge of the Atlantic it may chance to be situated, and that human nature is much the same in London as in New York.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Kansas school teachers are on the verge of a desperate revolt against the textbooks that have been imposed upon them by the educational authorities of the State. We have already made some mention of troubles caused by mistakes in the histories specially prepared for use in the Kansas schools, but it seems that the evil is a general one, due to no local prejudices in regard to recent events, but to ignorance and incompetence on the part of those who write the textbooks, and to the exercise of political influence by those who control their selection. At a recent teachers' convention in Sumner County, one of the speakers protested that it was "an outrage upon the ability of the Kansas teachers and a stigma upon their intelligence to be compelled to teach what they know to be a bungled mess of garbage from the pens of amateurs." And the alternative to the use of the books provided is imprisonment, apparently, for the angry orator continued: "Imagine one of our best teachers floundering in the county jail because he had dared to use a decent text instead of the desiccated remnant of antiquity which bears the name of 'Hotze's Physics!' What a roar of indignation would come from our farmer friends should the Legislature adopt uniformity of farm implements, and then a farm implement commission, consisting of politicians only, should adopt the scythe as the standard reaper, the wheelbarrow as the standard conveyance, the hoe as the standard cultivator, a flail and canvas as a standard thrasher. The textbook commission has done worse." The official excuse is that the books selected were the best of those presented for examination, and it is no wonder that the comments of the teachers on that excuse were somewhat too heated for repetition at a distance. The situation, if accurately described, is certainly a shameful one.

—Col. WEBB C. HAYES, son of the late ex-President, after serving in China on the staff of Gen. CHAFFEE, has returned to this country with the party that escorted the remains of Col. LISCUM. He declared, in an interview secured this week by a Chicago reporter, that of all the foreign forces engaged in the relief of Peking and the subsequent operations in the surrounding territory, only the Americans observed the rules of civilized war and have a right to feel proud of their achievements. Fighting at least as well as the best of the others, the Americans, according to Col. HAYES, killed only in battle, while the rest seemed eager to improve on the lessons in savagery received from the Chinese. "I believe," said the Colonel, entering into details, "that the French troops were the worst in this respect. They killed for the mere fun of killing. The Russians killed as a matter of policy. It seems to be part of the expansion policy of the Russians to clean up a territory which they expect to seize, and that was their main reason for slaughtering the Chinese. It was the same with the British troops from India, for the British policy is much the same. The Germans did not arrive until after most of the killing was done, but they killed people officially. Everybody joined in the killing but the Americans. We leave China with clean hands." The inclusion of the British in this condemnation, and especially the explanation of the crimes charged to them, decidedly lessens the weight of Col. HAYES's condemnation. To "clean up a territory"—that is, to exterminate its native inhabitants—has never been British policy in India or anywhere else, and there is no conceivable reason why it should be adopted in China. There has, however, undoubtedly been a lot of indiscriminate and useless slaughter by several of the foreign forces, and there is legitimate cause for pride in the generally admitted fact that our men have stolen not at all and have killed only for the best of excuses.

—An appeal which every member of the Order of Elks ought to hear and heed has just been sent out by the Colorado Springs Lodge. Members of this lodge who have recently returned from a trip through the northwestern part of Colorado, the region recognized as the rendezvous and feeding ground of probably the greater part of all the elks still left in the United States, reported that these splendid animals are now the objects of the relentless pursuit of men who hunt, not for sport or for meat to eat or sell, but for teeth out of which to make the ornaments worn by this widely extended society. In one case they heard of nineteen elk slain for their teeth alone, the best of which, even in the hunting country, are valued at $25 a pair. The members of the Colorado Springs Lodge have therefore not only resolved to abstain hereafter from wearing or trafficking in the teeth of elk, but they have earnestly requested all other lodges to take the same action. "It is the sense of this lodge," they say, "that loyal Elks everywhere should and will co-operate in this movement, so that it shall be quickly known to those unprincipled and unsportsmanlike individuals, who, for a paltry consideration and in defiance of the law, are hastening the destruction of this noble species, that no further profit will inure to them from so blameworthy a practice." They add, on the principle doubtless that confession is good for the soul: "The unprecedented destruction of elk, both in and out of season, has been caused solely by the demand and present high price for their teeth; and the species is in imminent danger of extermination, unless the premium that we, as Elks, have thus blindly placed on their destruction be quickly and entirely removed by our united and individual refusal to be participants in this crime." The course taken by the Colorado Elks does them credit. To give $25 a pair for the teeth of any animal is to make certain the speedy killing of the last representative of its species.

—One hardly knows whether to feel more of indignation or of pity for the people who are tumbling over each other in frantic efforts to withdraw their money from the Harlem Savings Bank. Their anxieties and consequent mental sufferings are real and intense, despite the fact that they are merely the victims of ignorant imaginations, working on the idlest of idle rumors, and therefore some sympathy must go out to the poor creatures, but, on the other hand, they are disgracing the city as well as themselves by the gross stupidity of their conduct, and on that ground they are proper objects of anger. At first thought, it seems as though the bank ought to save its depositors from their self-imposed losses of interest, and from the dangers incidental to the possession of unaccustomed sums of unneeded money, by insisting upon the notice of withdrawal for which the by-laws of all such institutions provide, but it must be remembered that this is a precaution which savings banks are wisely loath to take, and to which, as a rule, they resort only when failure to do so would endanger the general safety of the community. No such condition exists at present, and the bank is fully justified in paying, as it easily can, according to entirely credible authority, all demands as presented. It might do well, however, to imitate the action of the Bowery Savings Bank, which, when subjected a few years ago to a run as senseless as this one, warned the participants in the run that no deposit from them would ever again be accepted. This brought a good many of the maniacs to their senses at once, and it probably drove a little wisdom into the thick skulls of the rest. Certainly no bank wants to do business with persons who have proved their inability to hear reason and whom any stray whisper can throw into a panic of fear. Circumstances might easily arise when such people could peril the safety of an institution entirely sound.

FAIR PLAY FOR THE POLICE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you permit me to make a plea in favor of discrimination with regard to the men and officers of the present police force?

In many ways the police of New York are remarkably efficient. The record for courage made by men in uniform in stopping runaways and rescuing the victims of fires is a record of which any New Yorker may well be proud. New Yorkers are quick to recognize the merit of any one who distinguishes himself by one brilliant act of heroism. Possibly we are a little apt to overlook the less conspicuous members of the community, both in and outside the police force, who may be plodding along the narrow path beneath the burden of a really strenuous life.

It is always easier for one who is not a reformer to criticize a condition of affairs than to suggest a remedy. An old New Yorker, if a little inclined to be skeptical, might even doubt whether Supt. Byrnes did not accomplish better results on the whole than some of his accusers. The condition of affairs which is complained of so loudly to-day is exactly what was foretold by Byrnes as the result of ill-advised police regulations. No doubt, a single-headed police force, as recommended by Byrnes years ago, would be an improvement. A man like Gen. Wood, for instance, in absolute command of the police, might accomplish wonders. But what is needed most is some inducement for honest and able men to join the force and crowd out the evil-doers.

In reading of the inability of the clergy and the reform agitators to agree upon any concerted plan of action, one is tempted to question the wisdom of continually exploiting the corruption and inefficiency, either real or imaginary, of the entire uniformed force.

Is there not a danger that the force may become further demoralized, and the disorderly class emboldened by indiscriminate charges against the civil authorities?

Only yesterday I noticed a policeman arresting a hopelessly intoxicated woman, who was staggering about with a baby in her arms. The officer was as gentle as possible with the woman, who berated him, of course, with all sorts of vile language, and finally offered him money to let her go.

In her disordered brain there remained only one fixed idea, that money alone was necessary to secure immunity from police interference in New York.

No doubt this idea prevails very largely among the entire criminal class, and yet it is possible that the police themselves are not entirely responsible for this impression. The reformers have inculcated the same belief in the minds of all classes. Personally, I have no knowledge of the extent of the venality among the force. My position is merely that there are exceptions to all rules. It may be that there are honest and capable individual members of the police who are sadly in need of a word of recognition from their fellow citizens.

It is perhaps worth remembering that even Sodom and Gomorrah, to which Dr. Parkhurst compares New York, might have been saved if ten righteous men had been discovered within the city limits. If Dr. Parkhurst could discover a few righteous men besides himself, we might yet be spared the painful spectacle of the city simmering in its own juice. I would not be understood as desiring to shield the guilty for it seems important in the present crisis, if possible, to avoid confounding the righteous with the criminals.

FAIR PLAY.

New York, Dec. 12, 1900.

MERITS OF THE BOARD OF ESTIMATE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There is one feature of the report of the Commission on the Revision of the Charter which has not received the discussion which it merits.

The one thoroughly good feature of the present charter is the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. The report of the Commissioners concedes this, for it says: "Whatever dissatisfaction may have been felt with any other city authority, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment has been pre-eminent for capacity, efficiency, and integrity."

A practical man, having said this, would follow the remark with the clause: "We have, therefore, determined not to change the constitution of this board."

The commission, however, apparently on the assumption that any body, if it is called by the same name, will have its merits, proceeds to constitute an entirely new body, and I fancy that this new body will not smell as sweet to the average taxpayer.

There is not only no past experience which leads one to think that this new body will try to safeguard the taxpayer, but according to the first draught of the report printed the commission concedes that the Presidents of the boroughs who are to be members of the new board, with the old name, will be more inclined to favor expenditures than retrenchment, for it says they are officers who are "at the head of great administrative agencies charged with the duty of spending large sums in the development and improvement of the particular localities they have been elected to represent."

It is probable that we will see in this new body, where each Borough President will be trying to get what he can for his own borough, the log-rolling with which we are familiar in Congress, where one member votes for the useless expenditure of money to turn a creek into a river, or an arm of the sea, in order to get money for a Post Office on a Western prairie.

The one principle which experience has taught is that the larger the constituency the better the class of man elected to office. Every member of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment should be elected by the whole city or be appointed by the Mayor. The Corporation Counsel and the President of the Tax Board are much more likely to be valuable members than those who are to replace them in the new body.
